Joint Parley Is Held Likely To End Auto Plants Strike

Gov. Murphy, U. S. Aide Talk With Knudsen, G. M. C. Head.

Fist Fights Flare At Chevrolet Gate

Briggs Plant Is Closed; 4 Cleveland Unions Ask Reopening.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Jan. 7.—Gov. Frank Murphy said tonight that there was "a possibility of a joint conference later tonight" between executives of General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers of America to begin negotiations to settle the widespread automobile strike.

The Michigan Governor made his statement as he and James F. Dewey, Federal conciliator, went into a conference with William S. Knudsen, executive vice president of General Motors.

Murphy and Dewey had just left a lengthy conference with Homer S. Martin, president, and other officials of the United Automobile Workers, which was attended also by representatives of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The C. I. O. has been aiding the U. A. W. A. in its labor dispute with the mammoth automobile compnay.

Both Sides Hold Firm.

During the day, General Motors and the union had refused to retreat from their stands on "sit-down" strikes in the face of impending further plant shutdowns and the appearance of counterstrike activity.

Fist fights broke out at the personnel gate of the Chevrolet Motor Co. plant at Flint late today, involving union and nonunion employes, but the disorder was of brief duration. Two men were arrested.

[Five policemen, wearing gas masks and carrying tear-gas guns, tonight dispersed a crowd of 500 strikers assembled in front of a Flint jail to protest arrest of the two men, the United Press reported. The crowd broke up peaceably and the policemen did not use the tear-gase guns.—Editor's note.]

The fights started when some one pulled down a sound amplifier which was carrying a speech by a U. A. W. A. organizer to employes leaving the plant. Police sent to the scene said they were told nonunion workers were angry because the factory will be shut down Friday night.

Gov. Murphy had joined Federal Department of Labor conciliators without success earlier today in efforts to bring leaders of the corporation and the union together. Their efforts broke down on this point:

"Should sit-down strikers occupying Fisher Body Co. plants withdraw without assurance the company will not resume operations or remove equipment?"

Assurance Is Refused.

The union demanded such assurance; General Motors refused to give it and insisted strikers must vacate plants before any settlement negotiations start.

General Motors said 51,803 of its employes now are idle because of strikes and parts shortages, and its Chevrolet Motor Co. division announced further shutdowns in Flint, Saginaw and Bay City, Mich., will increase this total by 19,801 by Friday night.

A "sit-down" strike of 200 workers closed the Briggs Body Co.'s Meldrum avenue plant in Detroit, leaving 1,700 idle, and a similar action at the Walker Ajax Co., Racine, Wis., automobile accessory plant, affected 650 workers.

Headquarters of the U. A. W. A. said the Briggs strike was not authorized, but that the union members would be supported in their stand. Union officials also said a brief "sit-down" occurred in a department of the Murray Body Co. today. The company denied it was affected.

John Brophy, director of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, of which the U. A. W. A. is a member, participated today with other members of the union's "strategy board" empowered to call a general strike in General Motors plants, in the conciliation conferences with Murphy and with

Pope Is Improved; Doctor Abandons Hope of Full Cure

Vatican City, Jan. 7 (AP).—Pope Pius is making "progressive improvement," an official bulletin said today, but a reliable source declared his physician had given up hope of curing his fundamental illnesses.

The physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, is concentrating on "symptomatic cures" for local manifestations of the Holy Father's heart disease and hardening of the arteries, and is seeking mainly to reduce the Pontiff's suffering as much as possible, this person asserted.

Stimulants were administered at intervals to sustain the 79-year-old Pope's heart.

Although his holiness had periods of extreme drowsiness today, an official bulletin which reported his betterment said:

"This improvement permits him to carry out his constant and ardent desire for work, which, with his admirable resistance, form two of his most beloved characteristics."

By the Associated Press.

The Hague, Jan. 7.—Plump and smiling Crown Princess Juliana, future Queen of the Netherlands, was married today to the German Prince Bernhard Zu Lippe-Biesterfeld in civil and religious ceremonies of a typical Dutch wedding.

Two million subjects of the land of wooden shoes and winding canals, tulips and windmills cheered in gala celebrations and lined streets of the wedding procession.

Thirty-three members of Europe's royalty attended the religious rites, including the Duke of Kent who fidgeted nervously at the long wait. A thoughtful minister passed a box of chocolates.

First at the old Town Hall and later in the great church, "Groote Kerk," the royal couple took the vows of marriage—which gave to the 26-year-old prince the right henceforth to be known as "Your Royal Highness."

By royal decree he became a Dutch citizen and some day may sit beside the throne of Juliana as Prince Consort.

Much in the manner he might advise any other young couple, the Rev. Dr. H. T. Obbink exhorted the newlyweds to remember that "whether wedlock is a success or failure does not depend on the question of the husband and wife

Frank Ouster Voted, 8 to 7, At Wisconsin

Accused of 'Inefficiency and Inattention to His Duty.

Strike by Students Is 'Inevitable,' Woman Official Warns.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 7.—The University of Wisconsin board of regents voted tonight, 8 to 7, to discharge Dr. Glenn Frank, 49-year-old president of the school since September, 1925.

The vote came after a final stormy session of the board, amid scenes of wild disorder by students who jammed the regents' small meeting room. The students hooted, howled and pounded on the doors.

Two days of bitter argument failed to shake the determination of Gov. La Follette's appointees on the board to seek a new president. The progressive bloc, headed by Harold M. Wilkie, chairman, voted solidly against Frank.

The dismissal will not become effective until June, but the board will start looking for a successor at once to take charge of the university as soon as he is named.

There were unconfirmed reports tonight of plans for a student walkout to protest Frank's dismissal.

The regents, tired and weary after a 12-hour session, cast their votes in the small smoke-filled room from which President Frank a few hours before had displayed a big set of charts by which he attempted to disprove the charge that his administration has been incompetent.

Accuses LaFollettes.

Frank had a parting shot for the regents who opposed him.

"This resolution is in perfect keeping with the procedure today," he declared, "and brings to a climax an event of which I knew the day I was chosen president.

"While going into lunch in a hotel in New York before I took this appointment, George Middleton, a member of the LaFollette family, came to me and agitatedly said: 'Don't take that; don't get your neck in that. The family is against it.'"

The motion for Frank's dismissal was made by Regent Clough Gates, who with Chairman Wilkie led the fight against the president.

The resolution provided that until a successor is named Dean George C. Sellery of the college of letters and science shall act as president.

"It is significant," Frank said bitterly, after he heard the resolution read, "that I had been ordered to discharge George Sellery as one of my first duties when I came here 11 years ago."

In presenting his defense, Frank, accused of inefficiency and inattention to duty, had turned on his foes with a charge he had been urged—and had refused—to swing a dictatorial "big stick" in his job as president of the university.

Soon after he came to the university 11 years ago, Frank said, he became "aware there were certain forces in Wisconsin who wanted a definite kind of university president in a Fascist kind of university, in which the president carries a big stick and is expert in firing, if not in hiring; who would begin with the assumption there was 'deadwood' to be cleared out."

Refused to Bend.

"Certain forces wanted a dictator," Frank added, explaining that the names of faculty members already had been marked down for dismissal.

He refused to subscribe to these methods, he said, for he desired a more Democratic school administration.

Shortly before Frank began his rebuttal, Miss Caryl Morse, girls' dormitory hostess, said a student strike is "inevitable" if the university head is ousted.

White-haired Daniel Grady, himself a La Follette appointee, frankly charged the university president's foes were motivated by politics.

The accusation of Grady, a veteran lawyer and brilliant orator, followed one yesterday by George Mead, millionaire paper magnate, who said he would not have accepted a regency eight years ago if "I thought my vote was to be controlled by the Governor who appointed me."

Frank had been accused of lacking business and educational administrative ability, of evasion of duties and of devoting too much time to writing and lecturing.

The charges were raised by Wilkie, chairman of the board of regents and leader of the La Follette bloc.

Three Bills to Be Drafted for Passage Before Inauguration.

By Robert C. Albright.

Immediate extension of half a dozen Federal monetary and credit functions, including the President's dollar revaluation powers and the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund was decided on yesterday at a conference between Administration and Congressional leaders.

Three bills will be drafted, providing for extension of the six emergency operations until June 30, 1939, but making no further material revision in the laws. The plan is to pass them before the President is inaugurated.

Race for Jurisdiction.

The lending and monetary functions, all expiring within the next three months, are the first of more than a score of laws which will go off the books unless Congress takes continuing action.

The conference was called within a few hours after President Roosevelt told members "it is within the right of Congress to determine which of the many new activities shall be continued or abandoned, increased or curtailed."

A contest developed at once between the House Banking and Currency Committee and the House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures for jurisdiction over the bill extending the dollar revaluation powers and the stabilization fund.

There was some agitation to split

Congress Split On Amendment For Wage Law

Individual Demands for Change Divide Democrats Into Factions.

Individual demands for a constitutional amendment, offset by proposals to modify powers of the Supreme Court, divided Congressional Democrats into groups yesterday, as second-day reaction set in on President Roosevelt's criticism of the judicial branch of the Government.

Some leaders continued to sponsor a constitutional amendment as the wise means of defining Congressional powers, even though the President by implication had indicated his belief Congress had adequate authority to legislate broad social reforms.

Some even favored a frontal attack on the court by legislating a requirement that constitutional decisions be made by more than a simple majority; while others advocated a middle course, neither assailing the courts nor indorsing a change in the basic law.

Speculation Rife.

Everywhere there was speculation on what the President meant by saying "means must be found to adapt our legal forms and our judicial interpretation to actual present national needs." There were many who believed the Administration intended to press the court closely by sponsoring legislation hewing near the line of the Constitution.

Undeterred by the President's speech, Senator Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, yesterday disclosed he not only would go forward with his proposed constitu-

Musty Indictments Unearthed in Richmond Charge Lee and 33 Stalwarts With Treason

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Jan. 7.—Out of the musty records of the past emerged a handful of faded yellow documents today to remind the admirers of Gen. Robert E. Lee, that gallant knight of the "lost cause," and 33 of his stalwart henchmen, that a bitter North had indicted them for treason in the dark days following the War Between the States.

A workman on a WPA archives project stumbled upon an ancient wooden box in the basement of the Richmond Postoffice Building, where it had lain unnoticed for years, and among its contents discovered 34 original indictments, considered lost by Virginia historians and historical societies that for years have been seeking to obtain a full pardon for their Confederate hero.

The clerk of the U. S. District Court, C. K. Moran, said he was sure the box had not been opened since he took office in 1921 and the likelihood is that it had been many more years since the lid had been pushed back. When they were put there, or by whom, is largely a matter of conjecture.

Gen. James Longstreet, Lee's "warhorse;" Gen. Fitshugh Lee, nephew of the South's war chief; Gen. Jubal Early and Gen. Richard Ewell were among those named in the old documents and they, along with Lee, were charged in these individual true bills, returned during the 1865-68 terms of the U. S. District Court of Virginia, as follows:

". . . Not having the fear of God before their eyes, nor weighing the duty of . . . allegiance, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil . . . armed and arrayed in a warlike manner . . . did maliciously and tratorously (sic) assemble and gather themselves together—did ordain and carry on war against the United States of America . . . against the government, constitution and dignity . . . against the form and the statute . . . in such case made and provided."

The indictments were signed by C. H. Chandler, United States attorney for the District of Virginia at Norfolk, and by William J. Harrison, jury foreman.

Others, besides Lee, his nephew, Longstreet, Early and Ewell, who were indicted were:

Thomas P. Turner, of Clark County, Va.; William Smith, of Richmond; Thomas S. Bocock, of Appomattox County; Gen. Wade

Nazis Pouring Into Morocco On Vast Scale, France Hears; 34 Ships Speed to War Zone

Volunteers Rush To Help Loyalists

Reich Proposes Aliens Be Ejected From Civil Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 7.—France will concentrate 34 war vessels and a number of submarines near Spain within two weeks "in case they are needed in connection with the Spanish crisis," officials disclosed today.

The Atlantic fleet—including the battleships Lorraine, Provence and Bretagne—will be the first to take the new positions, arriving off Casablanca, French Morocco, Saturday, officials declared.

Although they said the movements were part of annual maneuvers, authorities pointed out that the vessels would be in "a strategic position" in relation to Spain.

(The British admiralty on Wednesday ordered a number of its warships, approximating one-seventh of the navy in tonnage, into Mediterranean exercises.)

Officials said the French ships include 3 battleships, 1 cruiser, 23 destroyers, 4 torpedo boats, 2 transports and the depot ship Jules Verne, which will be accompanied by submarines.

Volunteers from many countries still are streaming across the southern French border to aid the Spanish Socialist government, frontier authorities reported.

Most of them are French, officials said, but they also include some English and men from other lands.

Berlin Assails Aliens.

Berlin, Jan. 7 (AP).—Germany tonight proposed that all foreign participants be ejected from the Spanish civil war, "including political agitators"—a note apparently directed at communists.

Acting with Italy, the German government informed France and Britain she was willing to accept on her own conditions the plea that foreign volunteer enlistments to Spain be stopped.

But, the German note said, the Nazi government felt an embargo now "would profit only the Bolshevist side in Spain, which obviously is already sufficiently filled out with foreign volunteers."

Nevertheless, the Nazis expressed willingness to accept the volunteer bar to volunteer enlistments, dependent upon:

The same attitude by other powers.

Efforts to solve other problems connected with Spanish intervention.

Agreement by all interested powers to effective supervision to halt intervention.

The best solution, Germany proposed, would be ejection from Spain of "all non-Spanish participants in the fighting—that is, including political agitators and propagandists—in order thus to re-establish the situation of last August"—shortly after the war began.

"The German government would be sincerely gratified if the London committee would immediately consider how such a measure could effectively be carried out," Germany said.

London Is Hopeful.

London, Jan. 7 (AP).—Britain found the chances for effective ban against intervention in Spain "slightly brighter" tonight, with publication of the German note on volunteer enlistments.

The German note, with a similar expression from Italy, suggested withdrawing all foreign participants from the Spanish war, if that were feasible.

"It was scarcely to be expected they would formulate in their reply any definite scheme for banning volunteers," said one informed source. "But as Russia has offered

Alaska Colonists Assail U. S. Plan To Slash Aid Fund

Palmer, Alaska, Jan. 7 (U.P.).—Irate Matanuska colonists today protested against orders of the Alaska Rural Rehabilitation Corporation announcing funds for colonists would be curtailed.

Many threatened to leave. One indignation meeting was held, others were being planned and delegations called on the ARRC management.

The orders included:

The colonists must sell all products except wood and milk through a new marketing organization. For their commodities they will receive half in cash and the other half as a credit against their accounts.

No more crews will be furnished for clearing of the ground.

Practice of paying one colonist for caring for another during an illness is discontinued.

Sunday bus service in the colony was suspended.

A circular letter informed the colonists that "our funds will be exhausted for every one who will have been in the colony for over 18 months by September 1 of the present year."

Roosevelt Will Put End Today To Shipment of Arms to Spain

Signature Putting Drastic Neutrality Law Into Effect Dooms Hopes of Exporters; Dineley Seeks Envoy to Pay Off '9 Million Bucks.'

By Sidney Olson.

The strokes of pens held in the hands of President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner this afternoon will put an end to the dim possibility of a second race between an arms exporter, trying to get planes to Spain, and Congress, trying to prevent it.

Garner and Roosevelt, in that order, will sign the neutraltiy resolution enacted Wednesday. Then the two licenses to export arms to Spain, now held by Richard L. Dineley and Robert Cuse, will be nullified.

Dineley last night had given up hope he would be able to "beat the rap" by getting planes out of the country before the resolution becomes law. He was trying to find Felix Gordon-Ordaz, Spanish Ambassador to Mexico, who arrived here yesterday morning and immediately went into seclusion at the Mexican Embassy after a trying flight in which his plane overturned once and was grounded twice by bad weather. Dineley said:

"I want to find Ordaz and give him back his nine million bucks of Spanish money. I have the letters of credit here, and the dough's in my custody. Seems funny to me that he wouldn't get in touch with me the minute he came to town.

"First it was hurry, hurry, hurry all the time. I was to come here get the license and hold the dough. He was to follow me with two inspectors. Then the inspectors and I were going to skip around the country, looking over the material (the planes) and shoot it off to Vera Cruz for Valencia.

"I don't know why he's stalling me now. Seems like a fine runaround after the way I worked on this deal."

"It was all set to go. They were supposed to arrive last Saturday.

"We could have worked it O. K. if they'd come on time. It would only have taken three or four days. It's too late now. Now we'd have

McCarran Tells Group $1,400 Average Salary Is Not 'Living Wage.'

Pay increases probably will be sought for all Government employes earning less than $3,000, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, stated following a conference yesterday with representatives of organized Federal workers.

The aim of the legislative move, he said, will be to raise the average pay of a Government employe from $1,400, which the Nevada Senator described as "too low."

Several bills may have to be introduced to bring about these pay raises, he added, but details are yet to be worked out. Studies are to be made of the wage scales of various classes of low-pay employes by the Government employe representatives before any legislation is drafted.

"My belief is that the lowest Government wages are out of line with the American standard of living," he said. "It may be surprising that the average income in the Federal Government is $1,400 a year. That is not a living wage."

All of the employe organizations represented at yesterday's conference were from groups affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The delegates were headed by William Hussing, chairman of a joint legislative committee. Others included John Fry, of the Metal Trades Union, and Charles I. Stengle, president of the American Federation of Government Employes.

Senator McCarran already has introduced a bill to bring about longevity pay increases in the postal service.

It provides for a $100 raise after ten years of service, and another $100 increase each fifth year thereafter until 30 years of service has been reached. It would apply to supervisory employes, special clerks, clerks, laborers, watchmen and messengers in first and second class offices, to the motor-vehicle service, to letter carriers in cities and villages, to the railway-mail service, rural letter carriers and clerks at division headquarters of postoffice inspectors.

Roosevelt, Jr., to Leave Boston Hospital Today

Boston, Jan. 7 (AP).—Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr., son of the President and a Harvard senior, was jubilant tonight, the eve of his departure from the Massachusetts General Hospital for the White House, in "excellent" condition. He has been a patient at the hospital since the day before Thanksgiving.

Aliens Fighting In Spanish War Put at 50,000

Battle a World Conflict Between Fascists and Reds, Says Writer.

(Spain's civil war has changed from a fight between two Spanish factions into a truly international conflict, menacing the peace of Europe, Webb Miller, European news manager of the United Press, points out in the following dispatch. Miller recently returned to London from Spain.—Editor's note.)

By Webb Miller.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Jan. 7.—Nearly 50,000 foreigners, drawn from 12 nationalities, now are taking part in Spain's bloody civil war.

From a conflict over purely domestic issues, the fight has turned into a general war, fought on Spanish territory, over the fundamental issue of fascism versus communism.

From neutral observers who have spent months on one or the other side, from British information and from personal observations in Spain, I estimate that there are nearly 30,000 foreigners with the armies of Rebel Gen. Francisco Franco. They include 14,000 Italians, 12,000 Germans and about 4,000 Portuguese, Irish and other nationalities. These figures do not take account of the Foreign Legion, which, including the Moors, is about 90 per cent Spanish.

Loyal Brigade Estimated.

On the government side, the international brigade on the Madrid front includes about 8,000 foreigners, mostly French, Italian anti-fascists, German anti-Nazis, British, Poles Czechs, Hungarians and Belgians, and about 10,000 other foreigners, similar comprised, in training behind the lines.

Franco's air forces are composed roughly of 80 per cent Germans, 15 per cent Italian, and 5 per cent Spaniards. The government air forces are roughly half French and half Russian, with a scattering of other nationalities.

Nearly all government tanks and tank crews are Russian, while Franco's tanks and the men in them are Italian.

Virtually everyone from the loyalist side to whom I have talked has seen no Russian infantrymen—only technicians.

Observers from both sides generally agree that Franco cannot win the war or even capture Madrid without a continuance of foreign assistance.

On the other hand, they also agree that the only thing which saved Madrid was the intervention of the international brigade and the arrival of Russian tanks and airplanes.

The non-intervention committee, after four months of discussion, has succeeded only in setting an all-

President, 'Write-In Candidate,' Places Tenth in Radio Contest

President Roosevelt, who didn't even choose to run, outfinished such stars as Amos 'n' Andy, Nino Martini and Lawrence Tibbett in a national poll of radio popularity, is was learned yesterday.

The President wasn't the leader of this all-American open radio artists selection, made by more than 400 radio writers, but he finished well up in the money: tenth, in fact.

While the President's radio popularity with the radio writers didn't measure up to his political popularity with the people last November, it probably was greater than his popularity with the political writers before the election.

The poll was taken by Motion Picture Daily, cinema trade paper. Those who finished ahead of the President in the open group were, in order, Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Rudy Vallee, Helen Hayes, Eddie Cantor, Bob Burns, Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire and Jessica Ceuta, Spanish Port, Preparing to Receive Reich Troops, Says Report.

Big Fortifications To Rival Gibraltar

European Situation.

Germany was reported conducting a large-scale military and commercial invasion of Spanish Morocco.

France ordered 34 war vessels and a number of submarines concentrated near Spain "in case they are needed in connection with the Spanish crisis."

Germany and Italy earlier had proposed that all foreign participants be ejected from the Spanish civil war.

Fifty thousand foreigners, drawn from 12 nationalities, were reported fighting with the rebel and loyalist armies in Spain.

Spanish rebel forces, pushing a new onslaught on Madrid, claimed victories giving them a virtual strangle-hold on the capital.

President Roosevelt was to sign neutrality legislation today, putting an end to arms shipments from this country to Spain.

Moroccan Invasion.

Paris, Jan. 7 (AP).—The French Morocco administration, in a report, has informed the French government that Germany is conducting a large-scale military and commercial invasion of Spanish Morocco, a high Leftist authority said tonight.

The report, this authority asserted, said German marines had landed at the Spanish Moroccan port of Ceuta, and preparations were being speeded for the arrival of "large bodies" of German troops.

It continued, he said, that German engineers were supervising the construction of heavy fortifications in Ceuta, which will make it a serious rival to Gibraltar, and part of many commercial concessions were granted to Germans, notably with regard to the Melilla iron ore mines.

Rebel in Command.

A Spanish insurgent army officer of German extraction, whose name was given as Col. Beitgeber, was asserted to be in command of the zone and to be consulting the German consul in Tetuan on every move, the authority said.

The report pointed out, he asserted, that Germany had broken three international treaties by the alleged action.

Under the Treaty of Versailles, Germany renounced any and all claims in Morocco.

Spain, under the Franco-Spanish Treaty, was forbidden expressly to permit foreign troops to set foot in Spanish Morocco.

The Franco-British Treaty of 1904, concurred in by Spain, forbade the construction of fortifications in Ceuta on a larger scale than those which long existed.

The new fortifications under German supervision, the report said, according to this authority, are on a much greater scale than the old works.

Called Relief Move.

The report, it was asserted, said that even policemen in the town of Larache were equipped with pocket German-Spanish dictionaries because of the influx of German citizens.

This authority declared, the report said, the primary German intention in sending troops to Spanish Morocco was to relieve a corresponding number of Fascists of insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco for duty in the mainland drive on Madrid.

Gen. Franco, it was stated, had asked for reinforcements because of alleged signs of discontent among the Spanish Moroccan native population.

The report added, according to this Leftist authority, that Germany's ultimate goal apparently was to get a foothold in the Spanish possession for use as a bargaining weapon when the question of return of Germany's war-lost colonies may be considered.

"Too Ridiculous."

Berlin, (Friday), Jan. 8 (AP).—A spokesman in the propaganda ministry dismissed as "too ridiculous for comment" charges stated in Paris to have been received by the French government from the French Moroccan administration of a large scale German military and commercial invasion of Spanish Morocco.

Capital Centers Interest in Auto, Steel Troubles

Rail Executives and Union Heads Open Parley on Retirement Act.

Washington interest in the widespread industrial-labor controversies centered yesterday in both the automobile and steel industries.

The break of four craft unions at the Cleveland Fisher Body plant with the General Motors automobile strikers shared attention with the ousting of Elmer J. Maloy, John L. Lewis supporter in the steel unionization drive, as chairman of the district employe representatives of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation.

Meanwhile, representatives of the railroads and their employes opened a joint conference at which agreement will be sought on a number of issues between them.

The two developments in the automobile and steel situations were regarded as of little importance in circles close to the Committee for Industrial Organization, through which Lewis is seeking to organize the two industries. However, they drew comment from other sources.

Machinists' Head Protests.

Arthur Wharton, president of the machinists' union, one of the four which asked General Motors Corporation to reopen the Cleveland plant, accused the United Automobile Workers, conducting the strike, of forcing union men to break their working agreement. He told the Associated Press members of his union had been forced out of work without their consent by the sit-down strikes. He has steadfastly opposed the Lewis drive for unionization along industrial lines.

Maloy was ousted from his position in the steel organization, though he remains a delegate, by a vote of 25 to 11, the Associated Press reported from Pittsburgh. He had told the other delegates he considered the C. I. O. a better collective bargaining vehicle than their present organization.

It was denied here, meanwhile, that Lewis had any plans to go to Detroit in connection with the automobile strike. John Brophy, director of the C. I. O., already is there in close co-operation with Homer Martin, leader of the strikers.

Chairman Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, of the House Labor Committee, yesterday introduced a bill to bar shipment of goods from States with low labor standards into States with higher standards. It was patterned after acts carrying similar bans on prison-made goods, which have been upheld by the Supreme Court.

Railroad executives and union heads yesterday sought an agreement on what subjects shall be considered at their rail retirement conference, proposed by President Roosevelt.

Discussion Is General.

Following the opening sessions a joint statement was issued saying the discussion was of a general nature with a view to canvassing the scope of the matters which can be considered at further joint conferences.

In addition to the railroad retirement act, which the carriers are fighting in the courts, matters considered at the conference are expected to include labor's demand for a six-hour day, the issue of a Federal unemployment insurance system to replace the present State systems so far as railroad men are concerned, and various union proposals to spread employment.

Enforcement of the unemployment insurance laws of the States is causing confusion among railroad employes and managers alike, because the employment of many of the men extends into two or more States. Varying provisions in State laws make it uncertain in many cases under which State's system a rail worker shall be included.

The railroad retirement act discussion, primary purpose of the session, was sought by President Roosevelt because of the necessity for finding a basis of agreement for extension of the taxes provided in the act. The taxes expire February 28, but their collection up to date has been enjoined in a suit brought by the carriers.

V. H. Wallace Dies; Kin of Washington

Masonic rites will be held for Victor Harris Wallace, 65, descendant of John Washington, ancestor of the First President, at Gawler's undertaking establishment tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Private services and burial will follow in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Wallace, who lived in Stoneleigh Courts Apartments, died Wednesday night in Garfield Hospital after an illness of several weeks.

Prominent in law circles here, Wallace practiced in Washington until 1918, when he became director of compensation for the Air Nitrates Corporation, at Muscle Shoals, Ala. He held this position until 1920, when he resumed his private practice here. In 1925 he became an assistant solicitor in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, retiring in 1933.

Surviving in his widow, Mrs. Katherine Bryant Wallace.

By James J. Cullinane.

When Jerry J. O'Connell first came to Washington in 1931 few people took him seriously.

He, on the other hand, being 21 years old and the elected representative of the people of Silver Bow County, Mont., to their State Legislature took himself very seriously, indeed.

Ready, even eager, to help his country and his party, the Hon. Mr. O'Connell found himself being treated like a college freshman, when he called on Capitol Hill.

As befits a veteran politician, the Hon. Mr. O'Connell wasted no time knocking on doors and tramping corridors after a few rebuffs. He got his Irish up and vowed that when he next returned to the Capitol he would be opening doors instead of rapping on them.

Enrolled in Georgetown.

A man of great patience and coldly calculating, the Hon. Mr. O'Connell decided to be in no hurry about returning. He obtained a minor job with the Democratic National Committee and enrolled in Georgetown University Law School.

For two years O'Connell remained in Washington watching, working, studying, and spent his vacation being re-elected to the Montana Legislature. In June, 1933, he departed.

Now he's back again. And he's opening the doors of the finest suite given any of the 98 new Congressmen. He is the Democratic Representative from the First Montana District now, and word of his prowess as a political foeman has preceded him.

As befits the "Baby Member" of the Seventy-fifth Congress, 27-year-old Representative O'Connell is genial, friendly and respectful. But he hasn't forgotten those days in 1931 and he isn't satisfied that he is "somebody" in Washington yet. But he is quietly confident he will be some day. And he gives you the impression he knows what he is talking about.

Freight Rates Reduced.

After leaving Washington O'Connell was elected in 1934 to the Montana Board of Railroad Commissioners. He promised to reduce freight rates. He reduced them. Just for good measure he forced reduction in the electric and water rates, too.

He became known as the fiercest and most eloquent orator in Silver Bow County. When he campaigned for Congress he entranced the Townsendites by promising to fight for old age pensions, he held the farmers spellbound with visions of more adequate crop insurance, he advocated passage of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill and a larger soil conservation program. He won hands down.

Just before starting for Washington last week he persuaded beautiful 22-year-old Mazie Elizabeth Richardson to marry him. After the ceremony they boarded a plane for the Capital. They met while OConnell was on the railroad commission. She was responsible for his interest in flying.

Flying Is His Hobby.

She lived in Hollywood . . . was one of the most sought after models there. O'Connell used to fly down from Butte to see her whenever he had a chance. Now he is crazy about flying. It's his hobby. He doesn't go in for sports and doesn't care what he eats. Spends all of his time thinking about politics. His wife likes to dance and so does he. She likes formal receptions and so does he.

Was 6 years old when his father was killed in a mine. His mother went to work in the county courthouse to support him and his four sisters. Learned about politics while he played around the courthouse waiting for his mother. Began losing his hair early and now is bald. Has a high forehead and sharp features. Scar on forehead is a birthmark—forceps slipped.

Believes in public ownership of all utilities and natural resources; a six-hour working day and a minimum wage of $1,800 a year. Is a good Democrat and is keeping a wary eye on his political fences back home. Saw to it that his job on the railroad commission was filled by his candidate.

100 Opium Addicts Seized in Peiping; May Be Executed

Peiping, Jan. 7 (AP).—One hundred prisoners, mostly coolies and beggars, were dragged out of Peiping's opium dens tonight, as the government of its much-advertised campaign against users and sellers of narcotics.

Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan, chairman of the Hopei-Chahar Political Council, assumed personal charge of the campaign and sent raiding squads through Peiping's noisome lanes.

Informed sources said the captives probably would be executed by shooting on Friday, but city officials were silent.

Today's action was the first taken thus far in Peiping to give effect to the government's edict to narcotics users, "be cured by New Year's or die!"

It was, however, admittedly a small beginning, for official estimates have placed the total of users of opium or other narcotics in Peiping alone at 100,000.

Persons close to Gen. Sung, highest ranking official in North China, represented him as inclined to be lenient toward addicts who express willingness to undergo treatment.

Landon Rejects Bid To Attend Inaugural

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 7 (AP).—Gov. Alf M. Landon said today he will not accept an invitation to attend the inauguration of President Roosevelt January 20.

The invitation was extended to the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee by the inaugural committee, headed by Senator Neely, (Democrat), West Virginia.

Walter Huxman, Democrat, who will be installed Governor of Kansas Monday, succeeding Landon, said yesterday he plans to attend.

Wallace Moves To Retain U. S. Farm Program

Seeks to Delay Transfer to States or Outright Repeal of Section.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace moved yesterday toward continuing Federal centralized control of the Administration's farm program in a statement seeking either to postpone the January 1, 1938, deadline for transfer of control to the States, or outright repeal of the requirement.

In the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment act last year, enacted following the Hoosac Mills decision of the Supreme Court, which killed the old AAA, a provision required that administration of the entire program be transferred to the States by 1938.

Both Wallace and Howard R. Tolley, AAA administrator, have asserted vigorously in a number of speeches that widespread public demand for Federal control of agriculture should be met by its continuance, and that reversion to the States would be costly and inefficient.

Cites President's Views.

Wallace's statement quoted the President's message to Congress of Wednesday, in which Mr. Roosevelt said:

"That decent conditions and adequate pay for labor, and just return for agriculture, can be secured through parallel and simultaneous action by 48 States is a proven impossibility."

Wallace called attention to this remark with the words:

"I believe the overwhelming majority of farmers will agree that in that statement the President has spoken the simple truth."

He said further:

"Operation of a national farm program under 48 different sets of auspices is not now practicable. The problems of agricultural prices, income and competitive exploitation of soil have aspects which are more national than local and have no regard whatever for State lines."

Thrown in as Sop.

It was recalled by observers that the provision whose repeal is now sought was believed at the time to have been thrown into the measure as a sop to the more conservative farm leaders in the Senate. Its dissolution or repeal in some manner has been expected for some time as a concomitant of the Administration's victory in November, it was said.

The statement by the Secretary came a year and a day after the Supreme Court's adverse AAA decision. One official said yesterday:

"That's delayed revenge the Secretary's getting, but it's still revenge."

Iron Firm Affirms Open Shop Policy

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 7 (AP).—The Tennessee Coal, Iorn & Railroad Co., United States Steel subsidiary, posted printed bulletins today saying it "has always stood for the open shop and will continue to do so."

T. C. I. has approximately 17,500 employes in the Birmingham district.

"It has come to our attention that some of our employes are being approached by representatives of the C. I. O.," the bulletin at plants in this area said, "and are being coerced by them to line up."

The bulletin said a statement of the company's position was given "in order that no employes may be mislead by such threats."

The T. C. I. "will never require employes to belong to any union in order to gain employment," it said.

Wife Files Suit Against Scotty, Of Death Valley

Famous Prospector Failed to Keep Promise to Settle Down, She Says.

By the Associated Press.

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 7.—Walter (Death Valley) Scott's wife, a little-heralded figure in the mysterious gold prospector's spectacular career, thrust into the forefront today with a suit for separate maintenance.

Ella Josephine Scott, whom the dashing wild Westerner wooed out of a New York candy store, long has realized, she said after filing the legal action, that her husband would not keep his pledge to "settle down and raise a lot of babies."

Mrs. Scott, 60, charged in her suit she had been forced to live apart from her husband, whose $2,381,000 mansion in Grapevine Canyon, northern Death Valley, is world famous. She came to Long Beach a year ago from Reno, Nev., where she lived in retirement many years.

Seeks $1,000 a Month.

She seeks $1,000 a month living expenses and medical care, $25,000 for legal expenses, and an accounting and division of community property, which she estimated at not less than $1,000,000.

For more than 20 years, Mrs. Scott said today, she lived in hope of a fulfillment of a promise she said he often made to her:

"Wait until I get my stake. Then we'll settle down and raise a lot of babies."

But Mrs. Scott, who produced records to show she married the mysterious king of the valley in Cincinnati in 1900, said she finally came to the realization that this pledge would never be kept.

Was Star Rider.

"Scotty" was 28, and the star rider with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, when she met him in the New York candy store at Twenty-sixth street and Broadway, 36 years ago, she related.

He "introduced" himself, Mrs. Scott recalled, by sailing a ten-gallon sombrero across the store on top of a mound of freshly-made caramels.

They were married in Cincinnati in 1900 and have a 22-year-old son in the Navy.

Boston Concern Appeals Ruling On Security Act

Petition Contends Federal Law and State Laws Are Invalid.

By the Associated Press.

A new attack on constitutionality of the Federal social security act was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by Howes Bros. Co., of Boston.

The company filed a petition directed also at the Massachusetts unemployment insurance act, which supplements the Federal legislation. The petitioner contended the State act was ineffective because the Federal law was unconstitutional.

The appeal was from a ruling by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in Suffolk County, which dismissed the complaint, holding the Federal act did not violate the constitutional rights of the petitioner.

Howes Brothers was represented by Edward F. McClennen, Boston attorney, who was counsel for George P. Davis, of Boston, in his recent attack on the unemployment insurance section of the Federal law.

The Supreme Court refused Monday to pass on the Davis appeal at this time.

The Federal act imposes an unemployment tax on employers. Of the amount collected 90 per cent is refunded to the States which have adopted a program approved by the Federal Social Security Board. The new attack was directed principally against this assessment.

Quoting from a brief filed with the Massachusetts Court, the petition said that "if the social security act is not now in force the Massachusetts compensation law by its terms is not now in force. It is upon the non-valid existence of the social security act that the complainant relies."

Flu Toll Grows As Cold, Snow Grip Midwest

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Subzero cold, traffic-snarling snow and a widespread outbreak of influenza increased the Nation's winter worries today.

The heaviest snowstorm in 20 years burdened Arizona. Motorists turned back because of impassable highways crowded Gallup, N. Mex., hotels. Transcontinental planes were grounded at Tucson. A thick fog kept airliners in their hangars at Chicago.

The cold belt widened—stretching from the Pacific Coast to the Great Lakes and extending south to the Texas Panhandle.

Predictions of rising temperatures were received with mingled feelings.

Some medical authorities feared moderation would hamper efforts to stem the spread of influenza. The Public Health Service reported at Washington the dread disease was on the increase all over the Nation.

New York reported 88 pneumonia and influenza deaths in a 24-hour period, raising this week's total there to 299. Chicago counted 31 deaths in 24 hours and 189 in the past five days. The epidemic resulted in 13 fatalities in 24 hours at Denver, and claimed 142 victims since December 12.

Prayers for abatement of the outbreak were offered in Denver. Schools there and in nearby towns were closed. The Chicago health department urged citizens to avoid crowds. Some 4,000 residents and employes of the National Military Home at Dayton, Ohio, were under quarantine. An inaugural reception for newly installed State officers was postponed at Lincoln, Nebr.

At least 123 deaths in two weeks in the Cincinnati area prompted officials to urge cold sufferers to remain in bed. University of Nebraska physicians said the affliction was similar to war-time "flu." They described it as having a "virulent streptococcus strain."

The Public Health Service at Washington announced 3,998 cases were reported for the week ended January 2, compared with 2,088 for the previous week. But the agency said these represented "only a fraction" of the actual total.

London Toll Heavy.

London, Jan. 7 (AP).—Influenza, pneumonia and bronchitis took 566 lives in the greater London area this week, the health department announced tonight, and physicians said they believed the "flu" wave had not reached its peak.

Ad Club to Hear Speech by Cohen

Taking as his topic "Specialty Store Advertising," Isador Cohen, promotion and advertising manager of Raleigh Haberdashery, will be the speaker of the Advertising Club of Washington at a free illustrated luncheon at the Willard Hotel this noon at 8:15 o'clock.

The speaker will make a comprehensive showing of current illustrations of advertising of stores engaged in men's wear, women's wear, millinery, shoes, hardware and other specialties.

Chairman James W. Hardy, of the club's lecture committee, will preside. The lecture, which is part of the club's current series, will be followed by a question and answer period.

Neck Stretches 2 Inches, Sikh Lives After Hanging

Shanghai, Jan. 7 (U.P.).—Doctors revealed tonight that the neck of Atma Gingh, Sikh policeman who "lived through a hanging," stretched 2 inches during the process.

Physicians said his condition was improving and that his neck may later be restored to its original length.

No word was received concerning possible commutation of the death sentence which Atma Singh received for killing a fellow officer.

Fourth Contact Heightens Hope Of Kidnap Deal

Secrecy Veils Activities Aiming at Agreement With Abductor.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 7.—A new "contact" advertisement today signified dealings were in progress between the kidnaper of Charles Mattson and his family, but tight secrecy covered preparations for the climax.

The advertisement, fourth of a dramatic series in the Seattle Times, said:

"Mable—I am getting all the notes. Police are not intercepting them. I accept your method of identification. All requests have been carried out. I will do as instructed without anyone knowing. Ann."

This was construed to mean Dr. W. W. Mattson was telling the kidnaper his messages were being received, all surveillance stopped and the way made absolutely clear for him to proceed.

There was no indication as to how much ransom was involved. The abductor left a demand for $28,000 when he seized 10-year-old Charles from the Mattson home the night of December 27. The note reputedly warned that the ransom demand would double every week.

This was the eleventh day. Near-record cold enveloped the region, causing new apprehension over Charles' comfort.

There were intimations the ransom was to have been paid last night, following an appeal by Dr. Mattson for privacy. But evidently the swarthy bearded man who carried Charles away was not satisfied.

Sign Blown Down, Kills 2 Pedestrians

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 7 (U.P.).—High wind tore a large electric sign from the Caples Building in downtown El Paso late today, toppling it on the heads of pedestrians below and killing two persons. Two others were injured.

Parents Who Left Baby in Car Are Held on Charge of Cruelty

Judge Casey Rules 8-Month-Old Infant Abused by Being Exposed to Cold While Pair Attended Theater; Bail Set at $500 Each.

Franklin Moore, 41, a relief worker, and his wife, Lucille, 26, had not been to a movie in five months. They wanted to go, but there was nobody at their home, 1215 Eleventh street northwest, to care for their 8-month-old baby, Franklin, jr.

Last Wednesday night, Mr. and Mrs. Moore put the baby in their automobile and drove to Ninth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. They bundled up the baby, left a warm bottle of milk beside it, then locked it in the car and went to a theater.

Yesterday, in Police Court, Relief Worker Moore and his wife were held for the grand jury on a charge of cruelty to the child. They pleaded not guilty.

Judge Casey committed the couple to jail in default of $1,000 bond each. The bond later was reduced to $500 and both were released.

The infant was rescued by Second Precinct police when they were summoned by Arthur H. Scott, a scientist at the Bureau of Standards, who was attracted to the parked automobile by the child's wailing.

Scott testified when he looked through the closed windows of the sedan the child was lying on a back seat, his clothing unbuttoned and his legs and body exposed. A string from a teething ring was in the child's mouth, he said.

Policeman L. I. Mason, who responded to Scott's call, testified his partner, Policeman E. C. Helms, broke the glass in a door when efforts to pry into the car failed. The baby was taken to the Woman's Bureau, Mason told the court.

Mason said the baby evidently was choking when they took him from the machine.

Policewoman C. W. Alexander hurried the baby to Gallinger Hospital.

The baby's condition was described as "good" at the hospital last night.

The parents went to the Woman's Bureau after the child about 10 p. m. Wednesday. Mason told Judge Casey, Moore argued that the police had no right to break the glass in the car and take the baby without his knowledge. Charges were placed against the couple then.

Judge Casey ruled there "distinctly was a case of abuse and the parents had no right to leave a baby improperly clothed and cared for in an automobile at this time of the year."

Through their attorney, Earl Davis, who was appointed by the court, the couple said they had not left the baby long and that Moore had returned to see that he was warm.

Cummings, Richberg Talk With President

Attorney General Cummings and Donald Richberg, former head of NRA, conferred at length with President Roosevelt yesterday, but declined to say afterward what they talked about.

The meeting was considered significant in view of the President's declaration to Congress Wednesday that Federal laws were needed to supplement State statutes on wages and hours and other labor conditions.

2 Electrocuted In Holdup Kill, Youth Spared

Sentence of Fourth Killer Commuted in N. Y. Slaying.

By the Associated Press.

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Both protesting their innocence, two men, instead of the originally scheduled six, were put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing tonight for the $240 hold-up murder of Edwin Esposito, 22-year-old subway coin collector.

After a day of dramatic excitement rivalling a movie thriller, Theodore Didonne, 31, and Joseph Bolognia, 24, followed one another to the chair while their four fellow gansters, saved by executive clemency almost at the last moment, began serving life terms.

Within a few hours of the time set for the executions, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, from the executive mansion in Albany, ordered that Salvatore Scata, 19, youngest of the six, be spared. The death sentences of three other men convicted of the same crime had been commuted yesterday.

Bolognia and Didonne, who died tonight, had been depicted at the trial as having first slugged and then shot the subway collector for a sackful of coins.

Executive clemency saved Scata for a life of imprisonment even as he was being prepared to join Bolognia and Didonne in the "last walk."

Scata's hopes of escaping the chair had suffered a crushing blow yesterday when the sentences of the three others were commuted to life imprisonment. Nothing was said about him.

As he was undergoing the preliminary preparations for his ordeal tonight, the guards quoted him as saying:

"I thought I rated a 'commute' for what I told after I was pinched."

Sam Kimmel, 22; Dominick Zizzo, 27, and Eugene Bruno, 23, were the ones who received commuted sentences yesterday.

Already the crown of his head had been clipped for the fatal electrode.

His two companions in the pre-execution chamber, Bolognia and Didonne, trembled nervously, hopeful the fiction-like series of developments might yet save them at the last moment, as it is done in the movies.

Adm. Gleaves Funeral Service Will Be Today

Military Burial to Follow Ceremony at St. John's Episcopal Church.

Funeral services for Admiral Albert Gleaves, retired, war-time commander of the transport and convoy fleet, who was responsible for safely conducting 1,000,000 American soldiers to France in 1917 and 1918, will be held in St. John's Episcopal Church this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Burial will be with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart will officiate at the services in the church, and Chaplain Sydney K. Evans, U. S. N., retired, at the grave.

An escort of honor will form at the Fort Myer gate of Arlington at 2 o'clock. Rear Admiral A. B. Cook, U. S. N., will be escort commander.

The escort will consist of the Navy Band, a company of sailors and a battalion of Marines. Bodybearers will be eight bluejackets.

Curley, Widow Wed As His Term Ends

Boston, Jan. 7 (AP).—A brief two hours before he retired from the governorship today James M. Curley and Mrs. Gertrude M. Dennis, attractive Brookline widow, were married in St. Mary's Chapel of Boston College in suburban Newton by Bishop Francis J. Spellman.

Among the small group of guests were the Governor's four sons, a daughter-in-law of a few weeks, Mrs. Paul Curley, and the Governor's daughter and her husband, Col. and Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly.

President Roosevelt sent his congratulations to Curley.

'Quakes Shake Erivan.

Moscow, Jan. 7 (AP).—Four severe earthquake tremors shook Erivan, capital of Soviet Armenia, this morning, Tass (Russian) News Agency reported. There was no damage to the city of 64,000 population.

Farley Lauds His Men For Karpis Chase Role

Postmaster General Farley last night openly entered the interdepartmental controversy over "who caught Karpis?", when he patted his own postal inspectors on the back in his annual report, asserting work done by them in trailing down five bandits who held up an Erie train at Garrettsville, Ohio, November 7, 1935, "brought into view the end of the trail for Karpis and other members of his gang."

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Department of Justice's Bureau of Investigation, personally led the raid in New Orleans in which Karpis was captured. When Treasury agents unofficially investigated John Dillinger's death Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau apologized to the Department of Justice and demoted the men involved. At that time, it was said postal inspectors as well as Treasury agents felt the Justice Department had taken more than its share of publicity.

Citizens' Group Asks Repeal Of 'Red Rider'

Unit, However, Is Opposed to Teaching of Communism in Schools.

The Friendship Citizens' Association last night demanded repeal of the "red-rider" which forbids District public school teachers to mention or advocate communism. At the same time, however, the association reiterated its stand against the teaching of communism in the public schools.

The groups adopted a resolution opposing any increase in the gasoline tax or in the automobile weight tax. They also asked that a successor to former People's Counsel William A. Roberts be appointed as soon as possible.

P. K. Stevens, of 4404 Fessenden street northwest, was awarded first prize in the contest to determine the best decorated homes and gardens in the section.

Second prize went to J. P. Judge, of 4409 Thirty-ninth street northwest, and third place to Mrs. Charlotte Evans, of 4326 Davenport street northwest. The McDowell Service Station, Wisconsin avenue and Jenifer street, was adjudged the best decorated of the business establishments.

A total of 298 new members were admitted to the association at the meeting.

Funeral Service For M. S. Murray Set Tomorrow

Retired Hotel Proprietor Was Early Organizer of Labor Groups.

Funeral services for Michael S. Murray, 78, retired hotel owner, who many years ago helped organize and served as secretary to the Knights of Labor, forerunner of the United Mine Workers of America, will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock in Sacred Heart Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Murray, former proprietor and operator of hotels in Pennsylvania, at Blossburg, Rossiter and Fall Brook, until retiring in 1918, died Wednesday at his residence, 3357 Eighteenth street northwest, after a lingering illness.

A native of Ireland, he went to Pennsylvania with his parents when he was 10 years old. Later he worked in the coal mines of that State and in the West. As a miner he helped organize the Knights of Labor, and entered the hotel business after his return from the West.

Murray was active in the Democratic party for a number of years and was a delegate from Pennsylvania to both Democratic conventions at which President Wilson was nominated.

He was a member of the Washington Lodge of Elks, the Pennsylvania State Society of Washington and an honorary member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Surviving Murray are his widow, Mrs. Nora C. Murray; a daughter, Mrs. Charles O. Conway, of New Rochelle, N. Y., three sons, Edward P., John and Dr. Francis M. Murray. He also leaves six grandchildren and two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Daley, of Detroit, and Mrs. Mary Coyne, of Hubertus, Wis.

Five Promotions On Liquor Board

Richmond, Va., Jan. 7 (AP).—Chairman T. McCall Frazier, of the State liquor control board, announced five promotions today as a result of the death last Monday of Thomas Kennerley Sexton, chief of the division of enforcement and inspection.

The promotions included Clyde W. Saunders, jr., Eastern field supervisor of enforcement, made acting superintendent of enforcement with offices in Richmond; Maj. R. Buford Rose, formerly Sexton's assistant, made acting superintendent of license inspection; C. S. Bennett, western field supervisor of enforcement, made acting supervisor of enforcement for the State; John W. Hardy, formerly store supervisor in the Lynchburg District, made superintendent of all stores; F. C. Kuch, formerly traveling auditor, made acting superintendent of stores in the Lynchburg District, replacing Hardy.

Inquiry Faced By Flint Judge In Strike Action

American Bar's House of Delegates Demands Investigation.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 7.—The American Bar Association's house of delegates directed the ethics and grievance committee today to investigate the action of Circuit Judge Edward D. Black, of Flint, in enjoining strikers at two Fisher Body Co. plants while he owned stock in the parent General Motors Corporation.

Strike leaders, who asked the Michigan Legislature to impeach Judge Black, asserted his holdings were valued at $219,000.

Executives of the association said the committee would report to the September meeting whether Judge Black's action violated ethical canons.

The committee planned to discuss the case tonight. Members of the house of delegates were guests at a session of the Ohio State Bar Association convention at Dayton.

At the final session of the midwinter meeting the delegates adopted a resolution drawn by John K. Clark, of New York, that "the legislative and executive branches of the Federal Government take * * * action to place under selective civil service on a merit basis all positions in the Federal administrative service affecting the administration of justice below the grade of assistant secretary, except bureau, department and independent agency heads, assistant heads, their legal counsel, personal and confidential assistants; and that all non-civil service employes now holding positions be required to take examinations designed to test their fitness for retention in the Federal service."

Elderly Man Loses $911 Bank Roll; Learns of Honesty

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 7 (AP).—Matthew Plese learned more in 15 minutes today about the honesty of the human race than he had learned before in all of his 61 years.

He acquired the knowledge after he had sold a bond for $911, and, happy over the sale, had set out to buy something to eat. He knew he wanted a hot dog, but what he didn't know was that there was a hole in his pocket.

Behind him hurried honest citizens, picking up a $100 bill here and chasing fifties and twenties wherever the wind blew them.

When they caught up with him he was sipping coffee in a restaurant. They asked him to guess what he had in his pocket, and it turned out to be the hole. Then they began to give him back his money and asked him to wait for others who were still chasing bills.

New Congressional Directory Proves to Be 'Book of Month'

New Edition Contains Many Interesting Sidelights on Legislators; Only Two Women Give Ages; Some Senators Also Bashful on This Issue.

The "book of the month" is the latest Congressional Directory, fresh out in a bright red jacket now that the Capitol Hill show is on.

It reveals a number of interesting things, such as the unwillingness of members to reveal their ages, the fact that freshmen Senators and Representatives stretch their biographical sketches longer than the veterans and a name parade that has as much variety as a telephone book.

Of the six women lawmakers, five in the House and one in the Senate, only two disclose their birth dates. But don't pass that off as just another example of feminine reticence where age is concerned because scores of the male members steer clear of the subject with equal asperity.

Representatives Edith Nourse Rogers and Nan Wood Honeyman (a newcomer), don't mind telling the world they were born in 1881, but Senator Hattie Caraway and Representatives Caroline O'Day, Virginia E. Jenekes and Mary T. Norton skip vital statistic.

One of the longest biographies in the volume was that submitted by Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, but the "pink-whiskered nestor" somehow omitted his years. His Virginia colleague, Carter Glass, who was 79 the other day, did likewise.

Senator Marvel Mill Logan, of Kentucky, will be 62 years old today and he does not conceal the fact in his half-page sketch. Nor does Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, of California, withhold the fact that he was born on Halloween of 1863. Similar frankness is shown by Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, whose fifty-sixth birthday anniversary is tomorrow.

Very well, since the birthday question has come up, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, will be 47 tomorrow; freshman Senator William H. Smathers, of New Jersey, becomes 46 today; Senator William John Bulow, of South Dakota, 68, next Wednesday.

Representative Harry R. Sheppard (another freshman), of California, is 54 Sunday; Senaor James H. Hughes, of Delaware, becomes 70 next Thursday and—but that should be enough to dispel any notions that all lawmakers are reluctant to tell their ages.

The short-name boys in the Senate are Josh Lee, Rush Holt and Hugo Black, and, in the House, Sol Bloom, E. E. Cox, John and Bert Lord. Conversely, the most polysyllabic gents on the north side of the Capitol are Robert M. La Follette, jr., Bennett Champ Clark and Augustine Longergan. And across the way, William M. Whittington, Hampton Pitts Fulmer, Christopher D. Sullivan and Joachim O. Fernandez.

Strictly in harmony with the variety of its composition—lawyers, doctors, farmers, newspapermen, former mechanics, etc.—the House boasts a champion, one Buck, a White, a Brown and a pair of Grays (the only congressional Black is in the Senate), two Coles, but no Slaw, a pair of Cannon, a Fries, a Fish, a Bacon, two Coffees and a Kitchens, a Long and a Short, a couple of Fords, three Hills and a Thurston, who is no magician, but a lawyer.

And the shortest Senate biography is that of the Pennsylvania Democrat, Joseph F. Guffey, who submitted only his name, party affiliation and home town. Oh, yes, also the provocative word, "Unmarried."

Rabbi Metz to Preach On Judea's Jane Addams

Rabbi Solomon Metz, of Adas Israel Congregation, will preach a sermon on "Beruriah, the Jane Addams of Ancient Judea" at 8 p. m. services today in the Sixth and I street northwest temple.

The service will be dedicated to the Adas Israel Sisterhood, and Mrs. Joseph Blumenthal will lead in the responsive reading. Mrs. Mordecai Ezekial will lead the forum, meeting after the service, on a discussion of "The Impressionable Age."

Kin of 1812 Veterans Still Draw Pensions

More than 121 years have elapsed since the War of 1812 ended, but Uncle Sam still is paying two pensions because of services rendered in that war.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' administrator, said in his annual report yesterday that War of 1812 pensions of $50 and $20, respectively, were going to Mrs. Carolina King, of Cheektowaga, N. Y., and Mrs. Esther Ann Hill Morgan, of Independence, Oreg.

Mrs. King is the widow of Darius King and Mrs. Morgan a daughter of John Hill, two privates in the New York militia.

Radio Agreement Sought by Mexico

Mexico City, Jan. 7 (AP).—Mexico is ready and willing to talk radio frequencies with the United States and Canada, but she wants to be sure she will get something out of the bargaining, a government official said today.

Alfonso Gomez Morentin, the communications department's director of mails, telegraphs and radio, explained that was his government's attitude toward United States radio listeners' complaints that powerful transmitters along the border are drowning out their favorite stations.

The larger stations are better, he said.

"Perhaps they will pave the way to an international agreement that will result in Mexico's being assigned some broadcasting bands."

Gomez Morentin contended the United States and Canada got into commercial broadcasting when the business was new, and took over all the desirable channels.

Boland Parole Plea Slated for Hearing

Baltimore, Jan. 7 (AP).—John M. Boland's plea for liberty from a jail sentence imposed in the Lyddane murder-plot case will come before Parole Commissioner W. David Tilghman, jr., Wednesday.

Boland has served 18 months of a sentence of three years and nine months, imposed after he was found guilty of conspiring with Mrs. Anne Lyddane to murder the woman's husband, Francis Lyddane.

Mrs. Lyddane, indicted jointly with Boland, won a separate trial and was released last spring. State's Attorney James H. Pugh, who prosecuted both defendants, said after Mrs. Lyddane's acquittal that Boland should not be in jail if the woman were not.

Beware The Cough

From a common cold

That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many remedies; such as, Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, fluid extract of Licorice Root, fluid extract of Wild Cherry and Menthol, but also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote is perfectly blended with all of these to reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of doctors use Creomulsion in their own families as well as in their practice knowing how Creomulsion aids nature to soothe the inflamed membranes and heal the irritated tissues as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations and especially those stubborn ones that start with a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Don't worry through another sleepless night—phone or go get a bottle of Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

Three Bills to Be Drafted for Passage Before Inauguration.

this proposed measure into two separate resolutions.

A second omnibus bill will extend the lending functions of the RFC and continue the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Export-Import Bank, the RFC Mortgage Corporation and the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

Held "Advantageous."

This bill may contain a discretionary clause, giving the President power to issue a proclamation discontinuing the activities of these agencies, if at any time he finds sufficient private credit is available.

A third bill will provide for continuance of the act of 1933 giving the Federal Reserve Board authority to issue Federal Reserve notes backed solely by Government securities, which expires March 3.

Results of the conference were announced by Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Senate Majority leader. Asked why the extensions were asked, he said merely it was felt to be "advantageous."

Attending the conference, called while both House and Senate were in recess, were Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve Board; Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Acting Director of the Budget Daniel Bell, Herman Oliphant, Treasury counsel; Speaker Bankhead, Chairman Carter Glass, of the Senate Appropriations Committee; Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee; House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, Representative Fred Vinson, of Kentucky; Chairman Henry Steagall, of the House Banking and Currency Committee; Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, of Maryland, and Senator Robinson.

Opposition Expected.

Opposition to continuation of the President's power to revalue the dollar, which the Administration could use as a weapon in the three-power stabilization agreement, is believed certain to develop, and some members may take advantage of the stabilization fund extension request to seek light on its operations.

But Representative Steagall, who will call his House Banking Committee Monday to consider measures referred to his group, predicted they could be passed if necessary "in three days" without a serious fight.

Both Steagall and Chairman Andrew L. Somers, of the House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, who traditionally have warred for jurisdiction over monetary measures, want possession of the gold revaluation and stabilization fund extension measures.

Somers spoke heatedly on the subject, when he learned Steagall wanted the measures, which the New Yorker said were considered originally by his own committee, he said:

"If those two measures are assigned to the Banking Committee, I expect to go before the House and tell members there is no further need for the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, and ask to be relieved of the chairmanship."

Under the existing gold law, the President already has revalued the dollar at 59.06 cents. He still has authority to revalue it to 50 per cent of its former value, and the proposed extension beyond the January 30 expiration date would continue this power.

Operates at Profit.

The law giving the President this authority set up the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, said to have been operated at a profit. Under the currency stabilization agreement with Great Britain, France and other countries, the fund has been used as an international stability instrument. Administration officials say its continuance is essential to maintenance of the agreement. The revaluation authority is likewise sought for potential bargaining purposes.

Unless the RFC lending functions are continued, the corporation would begin liquidating February 1. Chairman Jones wants to continue on a reduced scale credit operations that formerly sent needed millions into railroads and banks hit by the depression.

Complexities and duplications in the Federal credit machine recently were attacked by Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, whose reorganization committee may seize this opportunity for its first move toward co-ordination of Government functions.

always agreeing with one another on everything."

Much of its success, he said, depends on whether they "can kneel together before the throne of God in prayer and thanksgiving."

Wears Ivory Satin.

The radiant princess was dressed in ivory satin with real orange blossoms, coroneted and encircling her waist. The prince wore the full dress uniform of a captain of the Blue Hussars.

Bridesmaids, their gowns forming a "bouquet" of lilac, orange and blue, stood in a resplendent circle in the Groote Kerk.

The sun broke through gloomy clouds and bells of churches pealed as the young couple entered the great gilded coach, drawn by eight prancing horses, to drive from Noordeinde Palace to Town Hall for the civil rites.

Colorful Blue Hussar guards were escorts. Behind the royal coach were three wedding party carriages and the stately "glass coach" of Queen Wilhelmina, mother of Juliana, and the Princess Armgard of Lippe-Biesterfeld, mother of Bernhard.

10,000 Soldiers in Line.

Ten thousand soldiers lined the route to check the crowds.

Sitting before a scarlet-draped table in the historic Town Hall, attended only by closest relatives, the couple was married by the burgomaster, Dr. S. G. R. de Monchy.

Then, with four children to hold her flowing 6-yard train, and a silver cloak over her gown, the Princess and Bernhard entered again the gilded coach to drive the 100 yards to the church—there to repeat the vows of marriage.

Juliana almost tripped over a cushion before her armchair, but the nervous Bernhard guided her safely to the seat, and himself perched on a chair beside her.

Then, before Europe's royalty, the Netherland diplomatic corps and a host of civil personages, the future queen and her prince were wedded finally.

Honeymoon in Tyrol.

Then the 4-mile drive back to the palace, and thence out the back door to a honeymoon in the Tyrol. They will join in the winter sports, which brought them together, probably at a resort near Innsbruck.

Two American women, both friends of Queen Wilhelmina, were special guests at the wedding.

They are the former Elizabeth Glover, of Washington, D. C., wife of Jonkheer Rencke de Marees van Swinderen, the Netherlands' minister to Great Britain, and the former Allene Tew, Jamestown, N. Y., recent bride of Count Paul de Kotzebue.

Mrs. Grenville T. Emmet, wife of the United States minister at the Hague, was among the diplomatic group at the wedding.

James F. Dewey, Labor Department representative.

The C. I. O. is at odds with the American Federation of Labor over Lewis' plan for unionization by industries rather than by crafts.

Four Federation of Labor craft unions at Cleveland today petitioned the manager of the Cleveland Fisher body plant, closed by a U. A. W. A. strike December 28, to reopen it and permit them to return to work.

At Flint, where 26,424 General Motors workers will be idle by Friday night, Former Mayor George E. Boysen announced formation of "The Flint Alliance," which he said would "show how Flint and its workers stand." Asserting it was not aimed at any organization, Boysen said the Alliance was intended "for the security of our jobs, our homes and our community."

Robert C. Travis, Flint director of U. A. W. A. organization, charged the Alliance was financed by General Motors and said it "seems definitely to have the same character" as the Law and Order League organized at Akron, Ohio, during a recent rubber strike.

Travis, by telegram, requested Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, that his special committee investigating civil liberties violations ascertain whether General Motors has "retained the professional strike breaking outfit headed by Pearl Berghoff" in connection with Flint strikes. Travis contended such rumors were current in Flint.

General Motors officers in Detroit denied they had formed any reserves of strike-breakers.

The injunction suit by which General Motors sought to evict "sit-down" strikers from Fisher Body plants No. 1 and 2 at Flint was transferred, at the corporation's request, from Circuit Judge Edward D. Black, a General Motors stockholder, to Circuit Judge Paul V. Gadola.

Lawrence Davidow, attorney for the union which has petitioned the State House of Representatives to impeach the 83-year-old Judge Black for acting in a case affecting General Motors, said the proceedings would go forward despite the transfer.

Judge is Stockholder.

John Thomas Smith, general counsel of General Motors, announced the transfer after he said it was learned Judge Black held 1,000 shares of corporation stock. The union set the amount at 3,665 shares valued at $219,000; Judge Black said he owned "some" stock.

Judge Black issued a temporary injunction January 2 prohibiting the union from interfering "in any way" with operations of the Fisher plants, and Sheriff Thomas Wolcott ordered the "sit-down" strikers to vacate the factories. They refused.

At Columbus, Ohio, the house of delegates of the American Bar Association asked an investigation of Judge Black's action by the association's grievance committee.

The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Royal Oak, Mich., priest, entered the automobile-labor controversy with a criticism of John L. Lewis and the Department of Labor in his weekly newspaper, Social Justice.

"The Department of Labor, including Frances Perkins and her superiors," the article stated, "prefer to let John L. Lewis be the unofficial spokesman of the Government, although he represents less than two million organized laborers whose strike will affect vitally the welfare of 128 million Americans."

Associates of Lewis at Washington said Lewis came to Detroit to take a hand in the strike situation "if necessary" but that no such move was considered at present.

The Chevrolet shutdowns in three Michigan cities affect the company's iron foundry at Saginaw, employing 5,500 men, closed at 4 p. m. today; the motor department of its Flint factory, which supplies engines for all Chevrolet cars, employing 12,000, and a small parts plant at Bay City, employing 2,300. Both the Flint and Bay City plants will close at 11 p. m. Friday.

The parts and service department of tht Chevrolet plant at Janesville, Wis., closed today after striking U. A. W. A. members threatened to picket it unless it shut down, as had the assembly line.

Cleveland, Jan. 7 (AP).—Four American Federation of Labor craft unions stepped into the dispute between General Motors Corporation and the John L. Lewis supported United Automobile Workers of America today.

The A. F. of L. affiliates requested the re-opening of General Motors' strike-bound Fisher Body Co. plant in Cleveland, where 7,000 workers are idle.

The plant has been closed for nearly two weeks by a strike of union automobile workers affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

In a letter to L. R. Scafe, general manager of the Cleveland plant, the craft unions described the C. I. O. automobile union as an "outlaw union" and said it did not have "jurisdiction to speak for our members, nor did any member of our crafts ever give such permission."

Never Received Pardon.

Gen. Lee never received the pardon he was desirous of obtaining, although on several occasions he moved to do so, forwarding his first request through Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. In June, 1865, he wrote to Grant that although he was willing to stand trial and did not seek to avoid it, he asked the protection granted him by his parole following his surrender at Appomattox. In the inclosed letter to President Johnson he applied for the restoration of rights and privileges under the terms of the latter's amnesty proclamation of June 29, 1865.

Grant immediately forwarded the letter to President Johnson and indorsed upon it: * * * "with the earnest recommendation that the application of Gen. Robert E. Lee for pardon and amnesty be granted him." But hatred for the defeated foemen was so intense that the effort came to naught and all subsequent efforts met the same fate. No trial ever was held, however.

Ould from Georgetown.

Robert Ould, born in Georgetown and a District prosecuting attorney in Washington under President Buchanan, cast his lot with the South at the outbreak of the war. He was appointed assistant secretary of war by Jefferson Davis and later was made commissioner for the exchange of prisoners.

With Lee at his surrender at Appomatox, Ould tendered his parole to Gen. Grant, who declined to receive it on the ground that an agent for the exchange of prisoners was not himself subject to capture.

Tried and Acquitted.

This principle was not accepted by the Union Secretary of War, Edwin M. Stanton, who caused Ould's arrest and trial for treason. Ould was acquitted.

Stanton's action was dramatic because 20 years earlier he and Ould had been opposing attorneys in the famous murder trial of Daniel E. Sickles, a Representative from New York. Sickles, accused of murder, engaged Stanton as a defense counsel. Ould was prosecuting attorney. Sickles was acquitted.

Ould was a powerful political figure in the Confederacy, and was a friend and confidant of Gen. Robert E. Lee. After the war he practiced law in Richmond.

Cornelius Boyle was the father of John Boyle, veteran Washington newspaperman, who died Christmas Day. At the beginning of the war Cornelius Boyle recruited a company here and led it into Virginia. He was commended by Gen. Lee for his distinguished work for the Southern cause.

The Robert Henry Dulany mentioned in the list was a relative of many Washingtonians. He served during the war as a colonel of the famous Seventh Virginia Cavalry. A grandfather of this Dulany gave George Washington his charger, Blue Skin, which the First President rode during the Revolution.

Radio Is Blamed In 3 Air Crashes

By the Associated Press.

J Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said yesterday "we have reason to believe" that three recent air crashes resulted from communication failures on board the planes.

Johnson said available information indicated a crash near Port Jervis, N. Y., in which no one was killed, and two crashes in California and Utah resulted when "the planes lost contact with the ground for reasons on board ship."

Club Ranks Thinned.

West Newton, Pa., Jan. 7 (U.P.).—Death of Mrs. Ella Wilgus McLaughlin, 97, today left only one member of the unique Century Club, formed in this community by a group of residents in their nineties who had the common purpose of living to celebrate the century mark.

Schick Shaver

The new way to shave—Schick—the original electric shaver is still the outstanding preference of men. Most every man who trys one never wants to return to the older, longer way of shaving. Here is why:

- No lather—just run the Schick Shaver over your face. You can even shave with your collar and necktie on. There is no muss.
- Clean, easy shaves give you a well groomed look.
- Saves money. No new blades, no shaving soap, no lotions to buy. The first cost is the last. Figure out how much you spend on these items each year. You will be amazed at the total.
- No skin irritation. Shave twice a day if necessary without irritating your face. No after-shaving lotion is necessary.
- Saves time in shaving. No lathering, no sharpening, honing or changing blades. Merely plug into an electric light outlet and start to shave.
- Operates on Alternating or Direct Current.

Concert to End Inaugural Day Program Here

4 Opera Stars Will Appear With Symphony; Other Workers Named.

As officials of local civilian military units accepted inaugural committee "regrets" at their exclusion from the inaugural parade yesterday, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, general chairman of arrangements, announced plans for an official concert, presenting celebrated Metropolitan Opera artists and the National Symphony Orchestra, as a climax to the induction ceremonies.

But, in spite of acceptances by officers of the local units, directors of the United States Naval Reserve Officers' Association yesterday voted unanimously to renew requests for inclusion in the line of march.

In a letter to President Roosevelt, the organization, through Capt. L. W. Hesselman, president, said:

"Our directors realize that the parade is being restricted on the grounds of economy and simplicity. Our directors, however, invite attention to the fact that participation by the District of Columbia units will involve no expense and will give representation in the inaugural parade to civilian components of our national defense organizations."

The concert, Admiral Grayson said, will be held at 9 p. m. January 20 in Constitution Hall. This function, he added, is expected to be the social highlight of the Presidential Inaugural festivities.

Four Stars Selected.

Huston Thompson, chairman of the music and entertainment committee, has selected four outstanding opera singers for the occasion—Richard Crooks, tenor; Richard Bonelli, barytone; Kathryn Meisle, contralto, and Susanne Fisher, soprano.

Meanwhile, Admiral Grayson's renewed announcement that the parade will be confined strictly to regular military units, brought response from leaders of the District National Guard and Marine Reserve Corps.

"Of course we are disappointed," said Col. John Oehmann, commanding officer of the National Guard, "but we are good soldiers and since that is the wish of the President, that is entirely alright with us."

The decision also was accepted by Maj. Harvey L. Miller, commander of the Marine Corps Reserves.

Concert to Be Broadcast.

The concert, Admiral Grayson said, will be broadcast on a Nation-wide radio hookup.

Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the Inaugural finance committee, announced the appointment of the following additional members of his committee:

Francis G. Addison, jr., Floyd D. Akers, Harry Blake, T. W. Brabazon, Henry N. Brawner, Col. Wrisley Brown, Harry Butcher, Lee D. Butler, Vincent Callahan, E. F. Colladay, E. E. Farran, Dr. M. C. Industry Asked To Aid Reform Civil Service

Leader Offers 3-Point Plan for Co-operation of Business in Drive.

Robert L. Johnson, president of the National Civil Service Reform League, summoned the young businessmen of the Nation's Capital to join the fight for abolition of the spoils system in politics, at a meeting yesterday of the Junior Board of Commerce in the Lee House.

A three-point program for spreading the gospel of reform was outlined by the speaker, who is vice president of Time, Inc., publishers. They were:

Establishment of a speakers' bureau to take to public platforms the need of reformation. Johnson said he had been promised the whole-hearted support of editors throughout the Nation in heralding such speeches.

Establishment of branches of the league in American colleges and universities. Numerous college presidents have assured him of support, he said.

Invasion of industry, via labor organizations and with the co-operation of capital, to drive home to the masses the need of change.

Enthusiasm Reported.

Johnson described the enthusiasm of all types of men for the campaign. He said Raymond Rubicam, of the advertising firm of Young & Rubicam, of New York, had just recently donated $3,000 to the league and at the same time had offered the services of his publicity organization free.

He told how the newly elected treasurer of the City of Boston had been elected to office with a large majority in the face of the Roosevelt landslide, despite the fact that he was a Republican, solely on the platform of civil service extension and creation of a public career class of college graduates.

More than 2,000 businessmen in and about New York have expressed a desire to give the movement impetus, he said. Many of them told him in their membership applications that they were not "joiners," did not accept posts on boards of public reform organizations, hospitals, etc., but that they were enthusiastic about the correction of spoils system evils.

Abuses Pointed Out.

Citing figures, Johnson said there are 3,200,000 public employes in the United States, of whom 2,000,000 are selected "purely on political considerations—on a basis of their ability to ring doorbells, vote right in a caucus and get out the vote."

Johnson declared that very few Americans consider public service as a career. "Many fine people could be attracted into public service, as they are in England, if they were given adequate assurance of security in office. In years gone by," he said, "there were as many rascals in office in England as there are in the United States. MacCauley and other leaders revamped the rotten system which existed, and today we find the finest men in England turning toward the finest career a man can have—serving his country. The same can be done here."

He mentioned a legislator elected in Michigan at the last election who was "so ignorant he didn't know whether he was to go to Washington or Lansing after the returns were in," as a typical example of the American disinterest in Government.

All Branches Affected.

Change is more urgently needed in State, county and municipal government than in the Federal structure, he said, although the Federal political body is not without innumerable faults. Johnson quoted Lincoln as saying "Some day office-seekers will be a greater menace to the country than the rebellion."

He called upon businessmen everywhere to back up the fight for civil service reform and establishment of the merit system. He said many of the young executives now moving into important industrial desks have a deep interest in the welfare of the people and of their Government, and bring a liberalism which is potent and should be effective in reform.

He added that the men at the top in Washington are not dangerous to business and should not be regarded as enemies, and that a closer co-operation between Government and business was very much in order, and one of the best ways for businessmen to encourage good Government was to get back of the merit system in Government.

Postoffice $88,316,324 in Red Last Year, Farley Report Shows

Department Chief Blames Large Deficit on 40-Hour Week and Free Mailing List of Government and Congressmen.

By the Associated Press.

James A. Farley's Postoffice Department went $88,316,324 into the red last fiscal year, but Farley hastened to explain yesterday free mail for Congressmen and other "non-postal items" were largely responsible.

He reported the "net deficit"—that is, the deficit incurred in the "normal postal service rendered to the public for hire"—was only $16,000,000.

Using similar bookkeeping methods a year ago, the Postmaster General claimed a "net surplus" of $4,964,149. The net deficit this time, Farley said in his annual report today, "was due to the new additional costs of the 40-hour-week law for postal employes which became effective on October 1, 1935, and also to the expanded program for public buildings used as postoffices with its resultant increased custodial cost."

As for the gross deficit, Farley explained, the department has to carry mail for the Government, and reading matter for the blind free of charge.

Speaking optimistically of general economic conditions, he said "the progress of the country toward recovery has been reflected in the postal revenues, which for the fiscal year 1936 amounted to $665,343,356, an increase of $34,538,054 over the previous year."

D.C. Policemen, Firemen to Sell Tickets for Ball

Commissioners Reverse for Ruling to Help Roosevelt Dances.

District policemen and firemen will take over new duties today—selling tickets to the President's Birthday Ball.

Use of the uniformed guardians as ticket salesmen was authorized yesterday by the Commissioners. They have been ordered to "concentrate on business houses."

The new order, announced by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, is contrary to regulations adopted by the Commissioners two years ago forbidding firemen and policemen, while on duty and in uniform, to sell tickets or to solicit subscriptions for any sort of public entertainment. Cancellation of the annual police-firemen baseball game Labor Day resulted from this order.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, and Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom, agreed to reversal of the order and will complete arrangements for the ticket sales in each department.

It was also announced that proceeds from the birthday ball, to be given in seven local hotels January 30, will be split 50-50 between Children's Hospital and the Warm Springs Foundation for advancement of work on infantile paralysis.

Commisioner Hazen has been named chairman of the ticket committee. He will be assisted by Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Elwood Seal, Gen. Fred Coleman and Maj. Daniel J. Donovan.

Subcommittee chairmen are Maj. Brown, Police Department; Chief Schrom, Fire Department; Dr. E. M. Colvin, jr., dentists; Dr. Arthur Mourot, physicians; E. Barrett Prettyman, lawyers; Mrs. Grayson, women's organizations; Thomas E. Lodge, citizens' associations and clubs; David Lynn, Congressional group; Fred A. Smith, real estate; Edgar Morris, Board of Trade; John Locher, labor; Alvin W. Hall, Federal departments; Seal, ticket distribution; Mrs. Daugherty, ticket booths; Arthur Godfrey, publicity; Riley Elgin, public utilities; James A. Soper, banks, and Mrs. Grace Vickers, courts.

Congress Split By Bill to Curb Supreme Court

tional amendment giving Congress power to regulate industry, agriculture, commerce and labor, but was preparing a speech in support of his stand.

"The President is an old friend of mine, of many, many years," said Ashurst, "but I have my own ideas and I do not ask other people when I think it is necessary to do something. I do my own thinking.

"I am going ahead with my amendment. I am preparing my speech now."

Ashurst said he would not favor curtailing the powers of the Supreme Court, and he knew the President had no such purpose.

Bankhead in Sympathy.

Speaker Bankhead, who before the President's speech had agreed with Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson's opinion that a constitutional amendment was necessary, said he was thoroughly in sympathy with the views and objectives of the President.

"I hope the objectives can be accomplished without a constitutional amendment," he said, "but unless the personnel of the Supreme Court does change, I still think we will run head on into the situation we faced before. I still do not think we can escape a constitutional amendment."

Senator Ashurst, co-author of the Ashurst-Sumners law prohibiting interstate shipment of prison-made goods to States restricting their sale, which was upheld Monday by the Supreme Court, was addressed a letter yesterday by Gov. Alf M. Landon, advocating extension of the law to child labor.

London suggested Congress enact legislation "to protect adult labor from the underpaid labor of children." He said the measure should require that all child labor goods in interstate commerce to be so labelled; that it be made a Federal offense for one to ship goods made by child labor into a State which prohibits their sale, and that the State be authorized to punish the sale of such goods.

Another Problem Noted.

Even if the child labor amendment to the Federal Constitution eventually should be ratified, there still would be the problem of devising legislation which would adequately meet varying conditions in different States, Landon said.

"Since the Supreme Court has held that the Federal Government may lend its aid to the States in enforcing their laws against the sale of goods made by convicts, I can see no reason why the Federal Government may not likewise lend its aid to those States which may prohibit the sale of goods in the manufacture of which children have labored," Landon wrote.

He said boys working on farms should not be included, pointing out that "a boy carrying water to the threshers or riding the lead horse on a binder, in the open air, is quite a different thing from the same boy working in a factory."

"Every reasonable person would abolish sweat shops and factories manned by children," said Landon. "Nothing, however, is better for a boy than some wholesome work on a farm."

Ashurst had not received the letter yesterday, but only a few days ago he indicated his belief that the prison-made goods law could be made to apply to child labor.

"Not Drastic Enough."

Commenting on Landon's letter, Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, author of a bill to write working requirements into Federal charters, which interstate corporations must receive to do business, said the Kansan's proposal "does not go far enough" and "covers only one small sector of the field."

Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, told reporters he thought the whole question of constitutionality of liberal measures could be solved by requiring a Supreme Court majority of at least seven justices, instead of the present simple majority of five.

"I believe the court's opinions can be liberalized by placing the balance of power in the hands of liberal justices," said Minton.

Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, who is reintroducing his 30-hour-week bill, and may offer wages and hours and child labor amendments, indicated no choice between legislation or a constitutional amendment, but favored quick action on either course. If an amendment is determined upon, he said care should be taken to guard "natural rights."

If a bill only is decided upon, he said it should carry a provision expediting consideration by the Supreme Court so that constitutionality could be speedily determined.

"If, on the other hand, it is decided to exercise other Congressional powers which have been dormant, then that should be done at once," he said. "And if a constitutional amendment is the choice, it should be submitted promptly."

Black said he favored whatever step is necessary to regulate hours of work, fix minimum wages, and abolish child labor.

Text of German Reply

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 7.—Following is the text of the German reply to the Franco-British proposals to bar foreign volunteers from Spain.

1. The German government must first of all express her unhappy astonishment over the fact that the British and French governments have considered it a necessary parallel with proceedings of the London non-intervention committee, to address for a second time a special and direct appeal to other governments represented on this committee.

The question of prohibiting participation of foreign volunteers in the Spanish fighting, which constitutes the subject matter of this appeal, is now up for deliberation in the London committee.

It is not evident in what way these deliberations can be furthered by a resort to such diplomatic actions by individual governments.

Disclaims Blame.

If, however, the committee's method of deliberation in the Spanish question is regarded insufficient or inappropriate, then, in the interest of clarity and conformity in the treatment of this question, it would be better to discontinue the committee method altogether.

2. Germany must take exception to the fact that through the new demarche of the British and French governments, the impression was created that Germany was to blame for or falsely understood the problem of volunteers in the Spanish civil war.

The German government therefore again points out it was she and the Italian government which from the very beginning urged prevention of the departure of volunteer participants in the Spanish fighting, and that it was, on the other hand, the British and French governments which rejected such an embargo.

3. The preliminary attitude of the British and French governments on this question could only be understood in the sense that both governments saw in the influx of volunteers no illegitimate interference in Spanish affairs.

One-Sided Advantage.

If both governments now take a different viewpoint, the German government must seriously ask herself whether the proposed embargo at the present moment would not actually amount to a one-sided advantage for the elements fighting against the Nationalist (insurgent) Spanish government.

After the months' long unrestricted stream of Bolshevist elements to Spain it is, indeed, difficult to avoid the impression that the embargo now would profit only the Bolshevist side in Spain, which obviously is already sufficiently filled out with foreign volunteers.

4. Inasmuch as the German government from the very beginning has advocated prevention of the flow of volunteers to Spain, she still is prepared to support all measures serving this purpose.

She must, nevertheless, voice the expectation that now at least all the possibilities for direct and indirect intervention in Spanish fighting be once and for all excluded.

Therefore, she makes her agreement contingent on the following conditions:

(a) That other participating states shall decide to adopt the same attitude.

Offers Solution.

(b) That the solution of any other problems connected with indirect intervention be immediately undertaken.

(c) That all participating governments agree to unconditionally effective supervision of agreed-upon prohibitions, which are to be carried out on the spot.

The German government will instruct her representative on the London committee to conduct further representations on this basis. If agreement cannot be reached in the matter of preventing other forms of indirect intervention, the German government must reserve the right to reconsider her attitude toward the volunteers question.

The best solution for the volunteers problem would, in the opinion of the German government, be achieved if it would be possible to eject from Spain all non-Spanish participants in the fighting—that is, including political agitators and propagandists—in order to thus reestablish the situation of last August.

The German government would be sincerely gratified if the London committee would immediately consider how such a measure could effectively be carried out.

On her part, the German government is prepared to co-operate in every way toward this end.

time high in international hypocricy and futility.

Two factors are principally responsible for the committee's futility:

Whenever a seemingly practical plan has been presented for putting teeth into the nonintervention pact, Germany and Italy have sabotaged it by linking it with the entire question of indirect nonintervention such as the prevention of financial assistance.

Britain, by straddling the fence, has encouraged the interventionists.

France has been paralyzed by the committee meetings because it feels that it cannot act unless Britain supports it.

It is understood that Germany is so secretive about its intervention that relatives of regular soldiers who volunteered and who were killed in Spain were notified merely that the men "died in an accident."

An investigator who studied recruiting for the Spanish rebel armies in Italy reported that the men who applied to the Spanish consulates were directed to the Palazzo Braschi, headquarters of the Fascist Party in Rome.

There they were asked to sign a document for "service abroad" with pay of 50 lire (about $2.60) daily.

Mother Goose Asked To Consider Step-ins

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—The "Mother Goose" tales, a Columbia University professor in English found today, ought to be streamlined because as they now stand they fill "the minds of children with erroneous notions about natural phenomena and social relations."

Dr. Allan Abbott gave this suggested revision, to omit reference to an archaic garment:

"Little Nancy Neppins
In her silk step-ins
And her half hose;
The longer she stands,
The colder she grows."

Townsend's Case Scheduled Feb. 8

Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Court, yesterday fixed February 8 as the time when Dr. Francis E. Townsend, bespectacled leader of the old-age revolving pension fund, and two of his associates, Dr. Clinton Wunder and John B. Keifer, are to face charges that they flouted a House investigating committee.

Dr. Townsend is charged with refusing to testify and with walking out on the Bell investigating committee, while his associates are charged with failing to obey subpenas commanding their appearance before the committee.

All three were indicted shortly after the recent elections and are now on bond awaiting trial.

to co-operate in any scheme which is universally accepted, and as France and England continue to work in closest accord, the possibility of forming some scheme for banning active intervention appears slightly brighter."

Italy Announces Accord.

Rome, Jan. 7 (AP).—Italy, marching in step with Germany, agreed tonight to ban the flow of volunteers to Spain—provided other nations agreed likewise.

In notes to France and Great Britain, which were similar, although not identical to German notes, Italy also supported the removal from Spain of all foreign fighters and agitators.

(Germany proposed all foreign participants be ejected from the Spanish civil war, "including political agitators.")

Italy said an accord to ban volunteers should be followed by an agreement barring propaganda and financial assistance, failing which there will have to be a re-examination of the question.

She criticized France and Great Britain for not having accepted an Italian suggestion on the volunteer problem last August, stating that an accord now "has the consequences of solely favoring the faction hostile to the Nationalist (Fascist) government * * *."

Italy insisted the accord to ban volunteers must be accepted by all governments and have efficacious control. She expressed regret that France and Britain took the matter out of the hands of the international committee for non-intervention in Spain which, she said, should have been the logical body to handle it.

Rebels Halt Ship.

Gibraltar, Jan. 7 (AP).—The Norwegian steamer Ibis was halted in the Straits of Gibraltar today, it was reported here, and compelled by a Fascist gunboat to proceed to Algeciras, where its papers and cargo were examined.

Reich Speculates.

Berlin, Jan. 7 (AP).—The German foreign office, reading of the United States Congress' speedy action to bar arms shipments to Spain, looked backward 20 years and wondered if the outcome of the World War would not have been different had the United States then held its present conception of neutrality.

The Nazi press praised "the historical and dramatic" action of Congress. The organ of the foreign office, Deutsche Diplomatische Korrespondenz, said:

"The fundamental change of American policy from its old-style pre-war neutrality—which, because of its insufficiency, dragged the American Nation against its will into the war catastrophe—to its present form of neutrality is an important symptom of a large general evolutionary process.

"It is futile now to go back into the question of what would have been the result if American policy 20 years earlier had recognized the ringing conception of neutrals' duties and rights which it now deems necessary. However, America's consciousness of responsibility serves the cause of general peace as well as its own interests."

to wait 24 hours for clearance through the customs, and so forth, besides the inspection time."

Dineley was licensee No. 2, authorized to ship $4,507,050 of planes, machine guns and bullets to Spain by a reluctant State Department, forced to grant permission under the present neutrality law. The other $4,500,000 of the $9,000,000 shipment comprised gas masks, war helmets and other war materials for which licenses are not necessary, but which are much needed by the loyalist government in Spain.

The first licensee—Robert Cuse, of Jersey City—finally got eight planes and a few engine parts out of New York harbor and past the 3-mile limit Wednesday before Congress passed the law. Cuse had been licensed to ship 19 planes and 411 engines, a shipment totaling $2,777,000 in value, but was unable to load the material in time. He must sell the war equipment to other countries now.

In the meantime, the Justice Department began an investigation of the alleged recruiting of armed forces in this country for Spanish service.

Attorney General Homer Cummings ordered J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to investigate complaints filed with the United States district attorneys at San Francisco and New York, and to determine if there were violations of an old Federal statute forbidding enlistments for foreign service.

Mexico Eases Policy.

Mexico City, Jan. 7 (AP).—Ernesto Hidalgo, acting secretary of state, tonight announced modification of the Mexican government's policy prohibiting reshipment of U. S. arms to Spain.

The government official said that events of the past week caused the government to alter its policy, intimating thta six American manufactured airplanes now at Vera Cruz would be shipped to Spain for the Socialist forces.

(The freighter Mar Cantabrico sailed Wednesday from Brooklyn, N. Y., with a cargo of aircraft, war and medical supplies for the Spanish war despite the efforts of Washington officials to halt the sailing.)

Reshipment of $4,507,000 worth of war supplies, for which Richard Dineley, San Francisco munitions broker, holds a State Department license, will be allowed "if the license is not canceled before the arms enter Mexico," Hidalgo stated.

He said 14 planes recently purchased in the United States were consigned to Felix Goron Ordas, Spanish ambassador to Mexico.

William A. Pratt Dies; Staunton Bank Head

New Field For Planning.

Few tasks confronting the Seventy-fifth Congress are more important than reorganization of the Government's administrative machinery. President Roosevelt's candid admission of the need for a "comprehensive overhauling" of Federal agencies and his promise of a special message on that subject are the most hopeful indications that the inefficiency and waste of haphazard bureaucracy will at last be checked.

The positive stand taken by the President offsets to some extent the disappointment resulting from failure of the House Reorganization Committee to propose a specific program. Members of that committee believe more deliberation is necessary to formulate constructive reorganization plans. Certainly no step of this character should be taken hurriedly. But there is a suspicion that the committee took this means of sidestepping an issue that will have extensive political repercussions.

Fortunately, the Senate Reorganization Committee has taken its responsibility more seriously. With the aid of the President's special committee, this group should be able to outline a satisfactory program. The chief fear is that enactment of any far-reaching measure for the realignment of agencies and functions will be jeopardized by political opposition. Every move which tends to disturb patronage jobs is usually viewed with suspicion in Congress.

It is this fact which gives special point to the one concrete recommendation by Congressman Buchanan's committee. That body suggests the creation of permanent reorganization committees in the Senate and House. Apparently its purpose is to keep overlapping of function, inefficiency and waste under constant investigation. Experience suggests that such studies might soon become perfunctory if applied only to bureaus, commissions, departments, etc., already functioning. Moreover, when a comprehensive reorganization has been effected, the Government's administrative machinery should not be kept in a constant state of modification.

The greatest service which might be performed by such legislative committees would be the proper placement of new agencies. With a little advance planning, Congress could correlate each new undertaking with its general policies and with the existing administrative establishment. Thus periodic reorganization would become unnecessary, and political fights on this score would be avoided. In this respect the proposed committees should be able to render invaluable service.

Trade Treaty Concessions.

The State Department's decision to modify its methods of negotiating reciprocal trade agreements is intended to give affected business interests more adequate opportunity to present their views of proposed changes.

One important innovation designed to afford those concerned ample time to make suggestions as to the scope of agreements is the informal preliminary announcement that the negotiation of a trade treaty is "contemplated." Such an announcement has been made in the case of Ecuador, and when formal notice of the intention to negotiate is issued the department will publish a list of products imported from Ecuador upon which tariff reductions or proposals to bind existing rates are to be considered.

By thus indicating the nature of proposed changes, a great deal of unnecessary labor will be avoided in preparation of briefs and assembling of materials for oral hearings on products not involved. On the other hand, the business interests affected will have more time in which to prepare statements or register protests.

These changes indicate that there has been some basis for complaints that negotiations have been conducted without sufficient advance notice to the business interests affected. The new methods, however, provide the best possible answer to political opponents of the Administration's reciprocal trade program who allege that trade agreements are "railroaded through" by high-handed Government officials with the greatest possible secrecy.

The information obtained from business interests as to the effect of proposed tariff changes is highly essential for guidance of the negotiators. Moreover, by inviting business co-operation in the preparation of trade agreements the Administration can do much to break down unwarranted distrust of a program designed to serve the interests of American industry by removing barriers to exchange of goods with other countries.

The Embargo Resolution.

The action taken by Congress in placing an embargo on arms, munitions and implements of war to Spain seemingly closes what was obviously a loophole in the neutrality act.

That measure was specifically limited in its application to international wars; its terms do not apply to wars within nations. Thus it was only through the exercise of moral suasion by the State Department on would-be shippers that there was held back what might otherwise have been a considerable and, as it happened, entirely legal flow of munitions to the Iberian Peninsula. Indeed it was only within the last few days that this moral barrier broke down and licenses for the shipment of war material to Spain were demanded and given.

It was clearly this circumstance with its implications that we might somehow get involved in the international struggle now taking place on Spanish soil that led the President to request and Congress to enact with virtual unanimity a resolution barring the sale of arms to the Spanish combatants and revoking unused licenses already granted.

But this action, it must be realized, represents the exercise of hindsight. The need of it was unforeseen at the time the neutrality measure was enacted. And there is reason to believe that future contingencies will arise to which the law as it stands, or any mandatory enactment that may replace it, will not be applicable.

It will be argued, of course, that Congress can cross those unforeseen bridges when it gets to them, even as it has now done in the case of the Spanish civil war. But the present illustration of how Congress may act in the future is far from encouraging. However justified the embargo resolution may be on the ground of immediate necessity, it is clearly the product of a panic state of mind. It is hardly the expression of a carefully thought out policy. It was enacted without much time for debate, without careful examination of the larger issues involved and, indeed, without adequate recognition being given to the circumstance that it does represent a fairly complete reversal of our historic policy and of well established rules of international law.

If that is the way Congress will and, indeed, may be compelled to act in the future to plug up holes in rigid neutrality legislation, the outlook for maintenance of peaceful relations, and for a decent international order which alone makes peace possible, is none too bright.

Belated Criticism.

The Interstate Commerce Commission launches a vigorous attack upon the undistributed profits tax in its recently released annual report. It emphasizes the conflict between its policy of encouraging financially weak roads to retire debt and finance repairs and improvements out of current earnings and a tax measure that heavily penalizes the withholding of such earnings. The commission complains that the weak roads using their income for such purposes will be the chief sufferers while companies with strong financial structures able to finance their new capital needs by selling stock may distribute all their income and thus escape the tax.

Tax experts have pointed out these deficiencies on many occasions, but this recital is particularly impressive because it is set forth in an official document. When an important administrative agency like the I. C. C. urges Congress to reconsider its action in voting the tax on undistributed profits insofar as it affects the railroads, its suggestions cannot be dismissed as selfish propaganda on behalf of moneyed interests.

The I. C. C. deserves credit for its outspokenness on this occasion but it is a pity that its protests are so belated. Instead of waiting to have its attention called to the inept tax legislation of the past year, as the I. C. C. report intimates was the case, it should have warned Congress in advance of the evil effects of punitive taxes on undistributed corporate profits.

High Cost Of Armaments.

Interesting figures revealing the enormous cost to the peoples of the world of the current race in armaments have been compiled by the German Institute for Business Research. Its survey suggests that the world's total expenditures for armaments have risen from $2,500,000,000 in 1913 to perhaps $9,000,000,000 in the year just ended.

In part this vast increase in the sum being devoted to war preparations is explainable on the ground of higher prices. But the rate of rearmament also appears to be considerably greater than it was in the years immediately before the World War. Nor is this rate showing any tendency to diminish.

What is equally alarming is that many a nation is now devoting a larger proportion of its total national income to maintenance of its army, navy and air force than ever before. The German survey estimates that France's expenditures for war preparations have risen by 56 per cent since 1928, Great Britain's 39 per cent, the United States' 38 per cent, and Japan's more than 100 per cent. Russia's expenditures are put at 16 times those of 9 years ago. Germany's is not given but it is no secret that under the Hitler regime every ounce of national energy and every available penny have been devoted to rearmament.

It is, at bottom, a fool's game. Temporarily it has given a fillip to industry, particularly in the field of production goods, and in so doing has reduced unemployment. But the application of so much energy to basically unproductive purposes can in the long run serve no good end. As President Roosevelt pointed out in his speech at Buenos Aires, this piling up of armaments is bound sooner or later to lead to war or economic disaster or both. In Germany's case the fork in the road may not be very far distant.

Balkan Peace Pacts.

The conclusion of a nonaggression pact between Bulgaria and Yugoslavia places the capstone on the arch of peace in the once turbulent Balkans.

Should the Sofia government now sign similar treaties with Rumania and Greece, which is very likely, all the nations in the area bounded by the Adriatic, the Black Sea and the Aegean, with the one exception of Italy's ally and protege, Albania, would then be linked in a close network of peace pacts.

The oldest of these combinations, but one not entirely confined to the Balkans, is the Little Entente, composed of Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania. Designed primarily to keep Hungary in check and prevent return of the Hapsburgs, it sought to maintain the status quo in southeastern Europe as well as in the Danube Valley. Certainly two of its members—Yugoslavia and Rumania—also regarded Bulgaria as a potential enemy and sought to isolate it. A similar purpose bound together Yugoslavia and Greece. And during recent years, as a measure of mutual protection and general appeasement, a Balkan entente was created with Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Rumania as its charter members.

This treaty was open for signature to Bulgaria. But while the statesmen at Sofia did agree to sign a nonaggression pact with Turkey, they balked at recognizing the territorial status quo in the Balkans. Such action would imply, on Bulgaria's part, renunciation of claims to territory in the possession of neighboring countries. In concluding a nonaggression pact with Yugoslavia, however, Bulgaria now becomes, by implication, a member of the Balkan entente. Poor, unarmed and dependent on its neighbors, Bulgaria has apparently decided to write off its ancient losses and accept the present situation as permanent.

Its action, together with certain other recent developments, such as the renewal of the Polish-Rumanian alliance and the pledge of Poland to go to Czechoslovakia's aid should that nation be attacked by Germany, helps strengthen the fabric of peace in Europe.

Indeed, it is now clear that in consequence of the temporary breakdown of the League's system of collective security regional pacts have arisen to replace it. Bound together by interlocking memberships, these regional pacts will undoubtedly tend to make the path of the aggressor in Europe far from easy.

Recently, for instance, fears were widespread that Nazi Germany would begin its attack on the territorial sections of the peace treaties, which is about all that remains of them, by an incursion into Czechoslovakia. In view of Bulgaria's action in voluntarily closing the one remaining gap in the Balkan peace system, in view of the close relationship between the Little Entente and the Balkan Entente and in view of the ties binding the latter to Poland, France and Russia, the possibility of such aggression has certainly been reduced if not eliminated altogether.

Disappointing News.

When the last Congress set up the Washington Airport Commission there was hope that its findings would be submitted this month. It was considered especially important to dispose of the highly controversial airport issue before the attention of Congress becomes absorbed by major national legislation. But hearings are still being held and Senator King, the chairman, reports that it may be several weeks before a decision is reached.

The two functions of the commission are to select an airport site and take an option on it. Numerous studies, surveys, recommendations, etc., have been made on this subject over a period of ten years. All of them have come to naught because of the fight between factions supporting two different sites. Washington has been forced to use an inadequate and in many respects unsafe airport because of protracted official indecision on the best available site for a municipal air terminal.

In spite of this long delay and the urgency of prompt, decisive action, there are now indications that the commission may select two or three optional sites. That, of course, would leave the decision to Congress and thus reopen the whole controversy. No useful purpose could be served by such a report. Unless the commission is prepared positively to select one site that will adequately serve the needs of air transportation to and from the Capital for many years, it may as well terminate its inquiry without further waste of effort.

A woman in Michigan has been awarded a medal for having told the biggest lie in 1936, a tall tale concerning a mosquito which would have been only a slight exaggeration in New Jersey.

Maybe That Will Keep The War Dogs Out.

Call For Sky Hooks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some high-pressure salesman must have sold Commissioner Hazen on the idea of buying "No Parking at Any Time" signs in gross lots in order to save money. Now he has a surplus and does not know where to put them; so, with a scratch of the head and a point of the finger, he spreads them all over the District, using no thought or consideration whatever as to how many people it affects or what disturbance he causes in taking such a step.

I am a resident of the Chastleton Hotel and I spend at least 15 minutes every morning doing my utmost to find a parking space, not to mention the wear and tear on my nervous system. Then, in order to add injury to insult, they put "No Parking at Any Time" signs between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets on the south side of R street. I am just wondering if we could not persuade Commisioner Hazen and his pals to furnish us with "sky hooks" on which to hang our automobiles when we return from the office.

May I make this suggestion—that we tear down some of those old shanties on R street "shantytown" and build a garage or parking lots.

Mr. Mellon's Gift.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The munificent gift of Mr. Mellon—a National Gallery of Art—bids fair to make our Capital the art center of the world.

It is refreshing to note his stipulation that any additions to the collection of paintings and sculptures, whether by gift or purchase, shall be of the same high standard as the original collection. And his selection of John Russell Pope as architect indicates his wishes that the building will be commensurate with the high order of its contents.

Our art institutions, while they teach art, exhibit and purchase modern monstrosities without any regard to the intent and wishes of their founders.

Perch For Eagle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For years I have been noticing the undecorated space under the apex of the north front of the United States Treasury. Each time I see this unornamented space I wonder why the American eagle, emblem of our silver money, is not placed there.

Such a placement would seem proper for the Treasury Building and add some architectural touch to an otherwise undecorated spot of the building which does not appear to be in keeping with other parts of the structure.

Traffic Bureau Experience.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "License Tag No. 0000" in The Post of January 2 voices the feelings even of others more lucky. For instance, I got my 1937 tag, but it was not the same number I had last year, being told to get out of line at the cashier's window after over two hours in line and go upstairs and see if my number "was still there," only to find it was not!

While in line a solicitor offered to get my tag at once for me for 50 cents. Other solicitors, even right in the Traffic Bureau Building, told me the afternoon before, when I got there at 3:44 p. m., the cashier's windows were closed, but that if I would join his automobile association he would get my tag for me that very evening. And the next day another auto association membership solicitor told me if I would join his association he could get a tag for me without my having to stand in line and wait my turn.

And when I went upstairs in the Traffic Bureau Building I had to wait with others some time, although there were bunches of Traffic Bureau employes that seemed to me much more interested in cigarettes, idle conversation and anything but serving the "public that pays" and pays. And after finally getting to pay, I felt as No. 0000 does, that there is no appeal from any such star-chamber proceeding or from any such arbitrary loss of a tag or even a driver's permit, at the hands of an unknown group that takes one's driver's permit without ever giving the driver a hearing of any kind.

In all seriousness, I respectfully suggest that if there are not the brains and ability at present in the bureau to handle traffic matters any better and in any more of an American like manner than at present, then those responsible for such high-handed and dictatorial and solicitating management ought to get out or be put out, for conditions could not be any worse than those described by "Tag No. 0000" and experienced by me.

The "V. D." Campaign.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter published in The Post of January 6, a venereal sufferer asks where he can receive treatment.

There are three free syphilis clinics in Washington: Social Hygiene Clinic, 512 I street northwest; Freedmen's Hospital, Sixth and Bryant streets northwest; Gallinger Municipal Hospital, Nineteenth and C streets southeast.

In addition, there are seven local hospitals with syphilis clinics. Charges range from 25 cents to $1.25, depending on the type of treatment needed.

RAY H. EVERETT.
Executive secretary, Social Hygiene Society.
Washington, January 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is splendid to know that syphilis and gonorrhea are being brought out in the open at last in order to study and obliterate them. Clinics should be open 24 hours daily (the same as police stations) to supply prophylactics within an hour after exposure to persons too poor to buy them at drug stores.

It is always better to lock a horse in a stable instead of waiting till he gets out and then arousing the community to chase and catch him. And it is time to call an ace an ace, and a spade a spade. However, the social disease branches of the medical profession will have to be socialized if any far-reaching results can be expected to be accomplished.

Labor Leaders' Hours.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems as if organized labor will be victorious in its demand for shorter hours and more wages.

I demand the same sort of considerations for labor leaders who usually have so much to do and think about their work that they must keep busy 24 hours a day.

The Problem Of Neutrality.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your splendid editorial of January 6 on neutrality admirably exposes the weakness and folly of the current policy of the United States. It is in striking contrast to the sentimental twaddle of your feature article of January 3 by Brent Dow Allison. What he calls a "positive program of international collaboration against war" is simply a partial sanctionist policy against both sides of any war. Mandatory neutrality legislation and this misnamed neutrality policy, if applied by all the nations, would have exactly the opposite results of what he claims. Instead of making the world safe for democracy it would make conquest safe, easy and cheap for Hitler.

If all the nations had pledged themselves to neutrality Hitler could mop up the minor countries of Europe one by one without more than momentary inconvenience from embargoes by neutrals. Trade would go on as usual until the outbreak of war, and the interruption would not last more than a few weeks before the small country had completely disappeared. After gathering up the resources of the small countries, Hitler would be ready for the big countries one by one.

Neutrality is precisely what the predatory powers most want. They would be fully prepared for war before starting it, and the neutral embargoes would hamper the military operations only of their enemies. It is nonsense to say that such a policy would give all would-be imperialists pause. Nothing else would so certainly lead to a series of conquests.

It is not true that the League of Nations has had difficulty in determining aggressors. The formula is simple. At the first outbreak of war it calls upon the belligerents to keep their troops on their own territory. If both agree there is no war. If one refuses, it is the aggressor. The only doubt arises in the rare cases in which both might refuse.

T. A. B. BAREFOOT.
Washington, Jan. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Neutrality agreements with Fascists of Italy and Portugal are useless and ineffective. The democratic nations will keep their agreements, but the Fascists and Nazis will, as usual, violate them with impunity.

Democratic nations should realize that they are dealing with revolutionary dictatorships avowedly hostile to all representative governments. The only effect of the neutrality agreements will be to stop all munitions and airplanes from reaching the democratically constituted Spanish government, while the rebels will still get munitions and armed forces from Portugal, Italy and Germany.

Fascists and Nazis have no principles. "The end justifies the means" with them. Why try to deal with treaty repudiators? To do so is to imperil democracy everywhere.

B. A. ARTHUR.
Washington, Jan. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to make my protest against the kind of neutrality now so generally advocated by public men and writers in this country, a neutrality which makes no distinction between the aggressor and victim; a neutrality that fails to distinguish between aggressor nations like Italy and Japan and their victims, Ethiopia and China.

Progress is not won by cowardly neutrality either in domestic or international affairs. Progress is won through the united opposition of forward-looking people against the forces of evil and reaction.

If the democratic countries stand neutral now while Spain is destroyed by the Fascist dictators, is there any reason for expecting that the dictators will then cease their aggressions? It was fondly hoped that after Mussolini had conquered Ethiopia he would be content, and devote himself for a long time to the exploitation of that unfortunate country. Yet the fact is that before the massacre in Ethiopia was fairly ended he was joining in the slaughter of the women and children of Spain. Dictators yield only when they know they must. They must be opposed sometime. Why not now?

The Spanish situation affords an excellent opportunity to put the dictators in their places. All that is necessary is to supply the Spanish government with arms. It has the necessary man power. The population of Spain is approximately 30,000,000, and 90 per cent are for the government. If they were armed it is unlikely that Mussolini and Hitler would undertake to transport armies big enough to defeat the entire Spanish population.

To be neutral in the present situation is practically to take sides with the dictators. In spite of any agreement to the contrary, the dictators will continue their aggressions so long as they think they have a chance to win. Only superior force, actual or potential, will cause them to desist. The Spanish people will supply this force if they are armed. To deny them arms is to betray democracy.

AN AMERICAN OBSERVER.
Washington, Jan. 5.

The Bear With Wings

Henry Andraud writes the following, translated by the Living Age from Marianne, Paris liberal weekly.

THE old Moscow exists no longer. The only vestiges of its past—remains which are still respected and are left to sleep in their mute splendor—are the Kremlin and the Red Square, where Lenin, emaciated and poignant, sleeps in his glass coffin, watched over by his people every day. Around them there towers an American city bristling with scaffolds. And the crowd which mills in its streets has no capacity for the calm digestion, the bourgeois satiety or the sartorial elegance of those more fortunate countries which have had the luck to escape a civil war coming on the heels of a foreign war which, in its turn, succeeded years of misery.

And through this great body flows youth, like generous blood. All possible care and attention are lavished upon that youth. They burn with ardent faith. The authorities have directed their need for enthusiasm and for sacrifice toward aviation. And they have thrown themselves wholeheartedly into aviation. Every gymnastic center, every park, every place of importance has its "tower," from which children and adolescents, and even adults, never tire of hurling themselves into space, supported by a parachute, whose descent is controlled and slowed down by a cable.

In a Moscow suburb which has been transformed into an immense factory we visited the buildings of the central departments of the Ossoaviakhim (Society for the Promotion of Self-defense and the Aero-Chemical Industry). Ossoaviakhim could be called a federation of airplane clubs. It consists of 150 such clubs, which number 9,000 pupils and 30,000,000 followers. To this must be added the factories, syndicates and other bodies which are all included in that organization. The pupils devote their time to the study of aeronautical science, training and propaganda. They have at their disposal lecture halls provided with the most modern facilities, beautifully equipped laboratories and moving picture halls designed for education as much as for recreation. In the great buildings there are, too, quiet corners, spacious and well-lighted rest rooms which are reserved for the pilots who are getting ready for a flight.

* * * *

In Moscow alone 500 young people, recruited among the flower of the working classes, follow the courses after work. In the past 12 months 6,000 diplomas were awarded throughout the Union. As one can see, the number is impressive.

"But what are you going to do with this multitude of pilots?" I asked Gen. Eidemann, who, at 42, commands an army regiment and presides over the Ossoaviakhim.

"The best of them will become military pilots, test pilots or transport pilots. Others will remain workers, with the privilege of devoting themselves regularly to their favorite sport and training themselves in it. We calculate that in case of war we must have at least five men as possible replacements for every flier of the first rank."

"And how do you select them?"

"Through a special commission which judges the applicants according to their performance, their knowledge and their moral qualities."

Gliders are very popular. They are considered to be very economical, not dangerous, and excellent for producing good pilots. A very active group of glider fliers is connected with the aviation center. There is also a group of parachutists, whose exploits we had occasion to admire. Great numbers of young girls are passionate aviation addicts.

Great pilots are widely honored. Their names and pictures are published everywhere. The Government has awarded eight citizens the title of Heroes of the Soviet Union. All eight are aviators. We could see the fervent admiration lavished upon Slepney, the rescuer of the Chelyuskin expedition,, who was our very pleasant companion and devoted cicerone. Everywhere posters and placards invite young people to learn to know the joys of aviation and to "do their air duty."

Some of these are of a military nature: they show imposing air fleets repulsing an invasion by swastika-bearing enemies. They say: "The Red air force is the mighty defender of the pacific peoples of the Union."

In the magnificent pioneer-palace of Kharkhov, which is visited by thousands of children, whom some 500 monitors undertake to entertain and instruct, with an ingenuity and taste which are truly extraordinary—in this building we were able to see, in the games of the younger children, as well as in the work of the older ones, the place that aviation has assumed in their minds.

* * * *

The Soviet Union possesses beyond any doubt an air force which is large, modern and formidable; that force is handled by a personnel which is well trained and of high moral quality.

Is this mighty army of a purely defensive character? Such is the question that one must ask oneself. I took the liberty of expressing it out loud. I was answered as follows: "We have no need for land; we have no need for men; we have no need for grain; we have no need for fuel; we need only peace to complete an experiment which will mean a great deal in the history of Man."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

If It Had Happened Here.

AS EVERYONE remembers, certain generals of the United States Army rebelled against the American Government last July, using disloyal troops and stolen equipment to attack the lawful authority of the country. They set forth that crime was rife in the Nation, that grafters were undisciplined, irreverent and disorderly.

This was true, but that was just the sort of people that the Americans happened to be, and the Government, occupied with more difficult problems, was unable to preserve order. Still the Government was doing its best, and it was, after all, the lawful Government of the United States. True, there had been some election frauds here and there, as usual, but this election was no more fraudulent than some in which Republican Presidents had been elected. As a matter of fact, the Government's task was complicated by the problem of cleaning up the dreadful poverty which had been left by the Republicans.

The mutinous generals were supported by an element of economic royalists, reactionary Republicans and Jeffersonian Democrats and were frankly Fascist in their aims. These civilian Fascist volunteers came from the privileged and aristocratic families of Newport, Bar Harbor, Palm Beach, Philadelphia, Delaware, New York and Long Island and included many famous and dashing young men with inherited fortunes whose families had lived for many years on the labor of the lower classes. Many of them were very brave and died heroically trying to seize political power through civil war in the belief that their class had a special mandate and responsibility from God to control and suppress the poor.

• • • •

AS ENEMIES of democracy, both Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini sympathized with the Fascist generals. Mussolini had a special motive in helping them, because he wanted to grab Cuba and establish a foothold in Central America under cover of the confusion. Mussolini immediately sent in Italian soldiers disguised as civilian volunteers to seize Cuba on behalf of the rebellion, but even the rebel generals had no illusions about his intentions. They knew Mussolini would never get out once he got in.

Hitler and Mussolini also shipped in bombing planes and military pilots to help the traitorous generals destroy the American democracy, and these were followed by German and Italian troops from the regular armies, disguised as volunteer soldiers of fortune. Altogether it amounted to a conspiracy against the American people, but Hitler and Mussolini both denied giving any help, even in the face of absolute proof. They pretended to be neutral.

The German and Italian fliers in German and Italian planes bombed the American Capital, killing thousands of ordinary citizens, including women and children, and their disguised infantry took part in many attacks on the patriots' lines.

In these circumstances the French and Russian governments decided to give a little surreptitious help to the government and sent in military equipment and experts to counterbalance the Fascist aid to the rebels. They would have been quite correct if they had openly sold military supplies to a friendly nation to put down internal disorder, but considered the realities of the case and wisely, if not too bravely decided that it would be best to play the game as the Germans and Italians played it. So they, too, pretended to be neutral and indifferent and gave their assistance on the sly.

AS TIME went on the American people realized that their democracy was under fire not only from a small element of rich and arrogant Americans but from the combined powers of Nazi and Fascist dictatorship. So naturally they were driven to the other extreme and became a Communist outfit, and thus were compelled against their will to destroy the ideal of democracy with its promise of freedom and self-respect.

Still there was legally no war in the United States and the government had a legal right to buy war material and borrow money from foreign nations to put down a mutinous internal disorder. But when the government tried to buy some second-hand planes in Great Britain the British went into a huddle and said that it would be a violation of neutrality.

"Neutrality!" said the Americans. "What neutrality? If rebellion broke out in Lancashire or Wales, wouldn't you crush it?"

"Yes," the British said. "Yes, but"——

There was terrible slaughter among the Americans—mechanics, clerks, farmers, gas-station attendants—all kinds who believed in democracy. The Fascist soldiers butchered thousands of them in the ball park in Scranton, Pa., and in the stadium of Ohio State University—lined them up in crowds and turned machine guns on them.

Some of the Americans still retained their sense of humor, however. They thought back to the time when Adolf Hitler got furious at a lone American sailor for distributing Communist pamphlets in Germany, and they laughed and laughed.

Phrenologists

By William Lyon Phelps

Gone With The Wind.

What has become of that delightful fraud the Phrenologist? He was flourishing tremendously so late as 1900, for in that first volume of Fables by George Ade he led off the list of humorous personalties.

When I was an undergraduate, a phrenologist came along at least once a year, went calling from room to room and examined the skulls of those youths who who either seriously or laughingly submitted to his diagnosis. He would feel of the various bumps, and then say solemnly, "You have very strong passions." And the boy would say, either to himself or to those in the room, "Gosh, he's got me all right," and pay him $2.

• • • •

The Phrenologist? He has gone with the wind. Yet he had his millions of followers not so long ago. The word Phrenology did not appear in the English language until the nineteenth century, and the so-called Science of Phrenology was started by a man fittingly named Gall, who lived toward the end of the eighteenth and in the early part of the nineteenth century.

Of course, from the most ancient times there have been attempts to determine the character and ability and temperament of an individual by the external signs of the face and skull; but the affair took on the authority of science in the nineteenth century.

I have lived long enough to see many delusions come and go; and with all the errors I have committed, I am happy to say that I have never been taken in by any contemporary fashion in science, religion, poetry, or thought. The sky-rockets blaze and the stars remain.

• • • •

I always laughed at phrenology, classing it with astrology, alchemy, fortune-telling, palmistry, clairvoyancy, etc. And today I believe a good business man could form a better estimate of a youth after ten minutes' conversation with him than all the youknowwhats whose solemn proclamations now afflict us.

The capacity of the haman mind to believe fakers and frauds has no limits. It is better to wait till the clouds roll by. They will; they always have.

Duce Woos Britain

Observer Sees In Mediterranean Agreement Of England And Italy Strong Props To Peace Of Europe.

By Judith Listowel.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

DURING the distressing weeks of the throne crisis, British public opinion completely forgot world politics. The spadework done in preparation of an Anglo-Italian rapprochement practically escaped attention. Few observers pointed out that the British were willing and ready to be friends again with the Italians, because their aerial rearmament, thanks to the machines ordered from America, would be accomplished by the end of January. For this reason the foreign office believed that England, in her present strengthened position, would be able to restore old relations without having to make concessions. On the Italian side it has been Mussolini's most heartfelt wish to re-establish friendship with the British Empire. He had never wanted to quarrel with England—had only the British carried out a "realistic" policy instead of the sanctions campaign! No one is more acutely aware than the Duce of the desperate need in which Italy stands of British capital for exploiting her new African possessions.

An agreement between England and Italy to preserve the status quo in the Mediterranean has been signed. It is no small achievement. Barely a year ago the same Baldwin cabinet, which is now in power, sent the Home Fleet to the Mediterranean. At that time there was serious alarm lest the Abyssinian dispute should be decided not on the rocky ground of Ethiopia, but in the blue waters between Gibraltar and the Suez Canal.

As late as in the autumn of 1936 relations between England and Italy were still strained. Great Britain had supported the Russian thesis in the Dardanelles question, without consulting Italy, although it was known that Il Duce felt very uncomfortable about the prospects of the Russian fleet being able to appear any moment in the Mediterranean.

In general, however, after the conquest of Abyssinia, and its incorporation into the Italian Empire, Mussolini had no more cause to squabble with the British. As soon as he grew convinced that the English were not going to take active steps to prevent him from exploiting Abyssinia, and did not even think of ousting him from his new possessions, Il Duce sought to improve relations with London. More than once he categorically denied all rumors concerning an Italian annexation of the Balearics.

British Concessions Seen Despite Denial.

ENGLAND has now accepted Italy's proffered hand. Officially the British made no concessions in doing so. They did not recognize the Abyssinian conquest. Nevertheless, the Negus is not going to appear in Geneva again, and the British legation of Addis Ababa has been turned into a consulate general.

It seems fairly clear that the English are returning to a course of "Realpolitik." Facts unpleasant to British public opinion—such as the Ethiopian conquest—are purposely ignored. Facts vital to the empire—such as the preservation of the status quo in the Mediterranean—they achieve by acknowledging silently the essence of the situation. As the Italian conquest is a "fait accompli," Great Britain now joins hands with Mussolini in her attempt to secure European peace. To put it differently: England has accepted the Italian interpretation about the Mediterranean and is satisfied to regard it as its "high way," as long as it is free and comfortable as such.

British foreign policy is bent on securing European peace, and through European peace, world peace. In Mr. Eden's view that can only be achieved if a Western European pact is negotiated, which will be linked closely to an Eastern pact. In practice the great task is to construct a bridge between Germany and Soviet Russia.

The only hope for this, at the present moment, is Italian mediation not only between Germany and England, but between Germany and the Soviet. It is conceivable that even Mussolini's "four-power pact" will be pulled out of a drawer, and will be extended into a six-power pact, with Poland and Russia as Eastern partners. There are infinite possibilities, but few real chances of success. It is none the less a fact that both Mussolini and the British sincerely want to consolidate European peace—Il Duce because he wants to "digest" his African conquest, the British in order to rearm and reorganize the economic relations of the empire—and they cannot achieve it "against" each other. That is the reason why they draw together, both parties making some sacrifices at the expense of their vanity.

Cooling Attitude Toward France Noted.

MUSSOLINI'S relations with France are curious. In spite of Laval having practically blessed Mussolini's African policy exactly two years ago, in spite of France having applied sanctions only with the utmost reluctance, Italy today woos England with success, while she is cool toward France.

The difficulties centering around the appointment of M. St. Quentin, the new Franch Ambassador-designate to Rome, have been freely discussed in diplomatic circles. The Italians mistrust St. Quentin since the days of sanctions. They were willing to accept him only if he was accredited not only to the King of Italy, but also to the "Emperor of Abyssinia." At the moment of writing the question has not been settled.

Several days ago Le Jour, a French paper of the Right, published an interview with M. Blum. In this the French premier declared that since the Matteotti murder he has taken no interest in Italian affairs. Small wonder that the Giornale d'Italia hit back the following day in no uncertain terms!

Behind all these undignified bickerings the truth is that Mussolini wants to reap the fruits of his rapproachement with England—in France. If he can induce the Blum regime, fully occupied with internal affairs, to recognize his Abyssinia empire, that will react in due course on the attitude of England, and force the British to do as much.

Finally there is yet another "rumor" current in Europe. It is freely alleged that Mussolini and Hitler have divided up between themselves the economic exploitation of the Danube valley. It is even added that this has been done without consulting the small nations on the spot. The latter is a slight exaggeration. But it is quite conceivable that Mussolini chose this "pleasant" move so as to sweeten for Hitler the bitter pill his agreement with the English must have meant to the Germans.

Mutuality Of Interests Will Set Life Of Pact.

IT IS often said that the leaders of British foreign policy never forget. There is some truth in that. Their memory can be remarkably good. Sometimes they get their own back when the interested parties have long forgotten preceding events. This may yet happen in regard to the Abyssinian affair. For this reason the Anglo-Italian rapproachement must not be overrated. Today it exists, and its terms are precise as far as the Mediterranean is concerned. It will last as long as there are common Anglo-Italian interests or as long as neither party can square "all accounts" with the other.

But after all, the case of the Berlin-Rome "line" is very similar. As it is, uncensored German opinion is already alarmed about the future, fully realizing that a restoration of an Anglo-Italian friendship will strengthen considerably—in fact, more than they think desirable—Mussolini's hand in the rest of Europe. The recently reported "offers" made to Hitler to draught a western European pact, in which the Fuehrer showed no interest whatsoever for months, is an indication of the direction in which English and Italian co-operation may steer European affairs.

In the short run the rapproachement between England and Italy is very fortunate for Europe, as well as for the rest of the world. Now at last the much desired 'props" of European peace: western pact, disarmament, re-distribution of raw materials, reorganization of the League of Nations, etc., can come up again for discussion. In the twelfth hour they may yet reach a safe harbor.

Edward, Alfonso Meet For Lunch in Vienna

Vienna, Jan. 7 (AP).—Two former Kings—Edward of Britain and Alfonso of Spain—lunched and chatted today at the Imperial Hotel.

The Duke of Windsor motored from Enzesfeld to the capital where he met Alfonso in the latter's hotel room. Later they joined a small luncheon party. The former Kings went walking and Alfonso stopped to buy some shaving cream. Edward purchased a roll of film at a drug store.

Many Spains

By V. S. Pritchett

Anomalies In Conflict.

Following is an extract from an article recently published by the Christian Science Monitor.

EVERY STATEMENT about Spain has to be qualified. First of all, there is not one Spain, but many. It has been said that every Spaniard is a separate Spain, and certainly every region, each with its own very different climatic and economic features, is a nation. When Isabel the Catholic united Spain in the fifteenth century, she imposed merely the political dominion of that austere central tableland of poor, stoical and noble peasant-warriors. The regions lived on in many cases with their separate languages.

So intense is this local patriotism that the very villages and towns in the same neighborhoods are strangers to each other. Cantons of separate towns were set up in the seventies of last century, though they were shortlived; and in the early days of the present civil war, the huge and enthusiastic People's Army of the Madrid government was rent by these local divisions. "I am from Pravia," says the Asturian song, with sublime exclusiveness; "therefore there is no evil in me."

The result is a host of anomalies in the conflict. Franco claimed to represent the party of religion, but many Basques, of the most fervently Roman Catholic and highly developed region in the country, fight against him beside the anti-clericals and the destroyers of churches. The Galicians, traditionally liberal and moderate, are nevertheless fighting for Gen. Franco and march into battle with huge medallions of the Sacret Heart on their tunics. The wretched peasant proprietors of Burgos, living in the greatest poverty, find themselves fighting in the cause of the great landowners of the south. Not all the poor are with the government and not all the rich with Gen. Franco. And he, the devout Roman Catholic and traditionalist, has imported Moslems into his motley forces, Spain's traditional enemies, the Moors, to defeat the militia armies of democracy.

THE NOTEWORTHY thing is that all the rich, modernized regions, those most in contact with the outside world, are on the government, or revolutionary, side. Are they fighting for Marxism, anarchism, syndicalism? Immediately, yes; ultimately, I think, no. They are fighting even more for freedom from government centralized in the now politically and economically decadent plateau of Castile, around which the regions tug like snarling dogs around a mat. And this is why the revolutionary forces are federalist; and why Gen. Franco and the conservative order are centralists. Hence the symbolical importance of the capture of Madrid to Gen. Franco and the paradox that the government forces, to whom Madrid has no value, were defending a redundant city.

The anomalies continue. What is there in common between the Communists, Anarchists, Syndicalists, Socialists, Liberals, Basque and Catalan Nationalists, who are fighting side by side? Nothing when there is no common enemy. The longer the war continues, however, the more sectional differences vanish. It must not be thought that Communism dominates, because, in the course of the fight, the Anarchists and Syndicalists have abandoned some of their curious objections to all forms of state organization. Communism does not dominate. The disciples of Joseph Stalin are negligible; Trotzkyists are more numerous, but amount to nothing beside the enormous memberships of the Socialist and Syndicalist unions. These two seemed to be destined to modify each other. The federalism of the government side fits in well with the decentralizing and building-up-from-the-bottom tendencies of syndicalism which reverse completely the conception of the totahtarian Communist state.

• • • •

ALL DISCUSSION about pain is useless unless it is first of all recognized that for years a revolutionary situation has existed in the country. The situation existed because there had been no gradual distribution of wealth, no rise of a substantial industrial middle class. Toleration and moderation can not exist in such a world of economically extreme forces, and those who know Spain have seen how foredoomed to futility and corruption were the well-intentioned and ever-persecuted efforts of liberal-minded people to move gradual reform. They were working in a void. In the resulting struggle, the Anarchist or Syndicalist (who descends from the bomb-throwing and mystical disciples of Bakunin, the enemy of Marx), is the natural nineteenth-century-period piece to set beside a general with nothing in his head except the old-fashioned and cynical technique of the coup d'etat.

Arms and Jobs

Survey Shows Rearmament Programs Contributing Largely To Industrial And Economic Upswing Throughout World.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

WORKERS in England, France, Italy and the Balkans are benefitting from government programs that have tuned munitions, arms and airplane factories to capacity production. Other countries, many of them far from Europe's suspicions and fears, are benefitting indirectly through sales of raw materials or food for these factory workers.

Britain is experiencing two "booms"—one in her armaments factories, and the other in private industry which is referred to here as "classical recovery." Sometime they bump into each other and leave a few bruises as, for instance, when air force demands shut off the exports of British aircraft or munitions factories take all the skilled workers.

Economic leaders are confident Britain's armament boom will continue well into 1938 with a steadily increasing shortage of skilled workers and high wages for workers in the aviation and shipbuilding trades. The chemical industry has shown amazing expansion in recent months. Production and consumption of such goods as automobiles, radios and furniture is increasing steadily, as well as stock exchange shares.

Military And Naval Defenses Boom Work.

EFFORTS of Premier Benito Mussolini to secure independence for Italy in the sphere of military and naval defenses are putting thousands of men in well-paid jobs. The government, under its new 1937 economic program, will establish a general commission to supervise the activities of 1,200 factories devoted to military—and co-related activities.

The Italian program looks to its newly won territory in Ethiopia to provide land for 100,000 Italian families and establish a great market for Italian products. In addition the Fascist empire will be able to obtain from Africa various raw materials which have been purchased abroad.

Mussolini is fully aware of the necessity of wider commercial exchanges and will strive to increase production and export to assure a soundness for the Italian lira.

Devaluation of the Czechoslovakian currency has greatly stimulated exports.

France, with some of the world's largest arms makers, has embarked on the largest defense program in her peace-time history, including fortification of her frontiers, new battleships, squadrons of fighting planes and heavy increases in personnel.

Although the French treasury must borrow 30,000,000,000 francs ($1,500,000,000) this year in a hostile market the country's financial situation is showing the first definite signs of recovery in four years.

The Popular government's emphasis on reorganization of industry and agriculture already has shown some results and last October, a month after devaluation of the franc, imports increased 30 per cent.

Unemployed receiving government aid stood at 408,000 last month, a decrease of 25,000 in a month.

Nazis On War Diet As New Year Begins.

GERMANY entered 1937 and the fifth year of the Nazi regime in the grip of a system of "war economics." Vital foodstuffs such as butter and fats are being rationed and a grain shortage has reached grave proportions in recent weeks.

Production of all branches of industry has been placed under control of the government and the building of private houses virtually has been halted on the principle that the government's building projects must take precedence.

Prices have been rigorously fixed and a system of supervision and heavy penalties has been brought to bear upon agricultural producers and shopkeepers.

The specter of a shortage of raw materials has caused the Reich government to redouble its efforts toward increasing the output of domestic substitutes.

Economically, the next year may fix the fate of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's regime.

Russia, because of her singular type of government, faces an uncertain outlook due to her heavy rearmament program. This year will mark the end of the Soviet's second five-year plan. With most major industries operating ahead of schedule the year ordinarily would have a bright outlook, but the dangers of war have upset all economic planning.

One-fifth of the Soviet's national income is being set aside for war purposes, draining the country's resources and preventing an anticipated decline in living costs.

Optimism Reported In South America.

SOUTH AMERICA is optimistic over 1937's prospects. Most of the Southern republics are emerging from the depression and several have shown remarkable industrial and agricultural recovery.

Argentina has an exportable wheat surplus when several large countries face a shortage. Renewal of the Anglo-Argentine trade pact is expected to increase the commercial exchange between the two countries and the likelihood of a reciprocal treaty with the United States exists.

Brazil, its cotton and coffee crops increased, expects a continuation of improved conditions. It is estimated that 4,000,000 bags of coffee will be burned to maintain price stability.

Chile and Peru are hopeful of improved conditions, and Colombia has the advantage of higher gold production and a greater coffee crop.

In the Orient, Japan's industries have been kept at top production since 1931 to supply the demands of the empire's armed forces, and, despite an unbalanced budget, the outlook for 1937 is one of continued industrial expansion.

Japan has made tremendous strides in her overseas markets, particularly in those for cotton textiles, and has regained a good portion of the business she lost in China following the anti-Japanese boycotts which have been organized from time to time since the Manchurian wars of five years ago.

China, too, has recovered from the collapse she suffered because of the silver policy of the United States, has stabilized her currency, and has expanded her internal production. Improved world markets have helped the big Chinese export products—silk, tung oil, tungsten, hides and furs and miscellaneous lines.

Navy Signs Two Copper Contracts

By the Associated Press.

Declaring an "emergency" need of copper, the Navy yesterday signed two contracts exempted from provisions of the Walsh-Healey act requiring Government contractors to conform to certain labor standards.

The act, which applies to contracts of $10,000 and more, provides that the law shall not apply to purchases of materials in the open market for immediate delivery. In such circumstances, orders are placed without asking for bids.

The Navy resorted to the provision in signing contracts with the Kennecott Sales Corporation of New York City and the Calumet & Hecla Co. for 200,000 pounds of the metal from each concern at a total price said by the Navy to be in excess of $48,000.

The purchase from the Kennecott concern was at 12.175 cents per pound and that from the Calumet company at 12.205.

Dawes Firm Prepared To Settle R.F.C. Claim

Chicago, Jan. 7 (AP).—Gen. Charles G. Dawes, former vice president, said today that his family firm, Dawes Brothers, Inc., was ready to pay its $1,156,000 share of a judgment recently awarded the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The RFC sued the stockholders of the old Central Republic Bank & Trust Co., for $14,000,000. It claimed they owed this to help liquidate an $80,000,000 RFC loan to the bank. Dawes Bros., Inc., was the largest stockholder in the bank.

Oklahoma Unit to Fete 13 State Governors

Oklahoma State Society will make final plans for its inauguration ball at the Shoreham at 8 tonight. Representatives R. C. Hill and Lyle Boren, the only two members from Oklahoma, will be present.

The dance, which will be held inauguration night, is being given in honor of the Governors of 13 States.

Baldwin to Visit King.

London, Jan. 7 (AP).—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, who a month ago was having a stormy time with King Edward VIII, will be the guest this week-end of Britain's new monarch, George VI, a reliable source said today.

Jobless Foil Scheme To Aid Unemployment

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 7 (AP).—Joe Hume Gardner, president of a steel company, who decided recently to hire every man applying for a job, said today his plan of "relief" just wouldn't work. Neither would most of the employes, he added.

U. S.-to-Rumania Flight.

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 7 (AP).—Capt. Alex Papana, stunt flier of the Rumanian Air Corps, said today he plans to try for a new distance record with a solo flight from New York to Bucharest, 6,000 miles, in April. He said a $70,000 plane financed by the Aero Club of Rumania is being built for him in this country.

U. S. Teacher Leader in Red Chinese Revolt

Colorado Woman Appeals on Radio for Rebels; 250,000 Join.

By the Associated Press.

Sianfu, Shensi Province, Jan. 7.—A quarter-million armed men were reported today to have joined in a movement to create a great Communist state in northwest China, with an American woman playing a spectacular role in the uprising.

Agnes Smedley, former Colorado school teacher and long associated with radical movements in Asia, was described as conducting radio propaganda to unite large disaffected military units in Shensi and Kansu Provinces under the red banner in defiance of the Nanking government.

Some 200,000 soldiers formerly belonging to the "Northwest Communist-Suppression" army of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, reliable reports said, joined 50,000 of their red exenemies to make the two northwestern provinces one large Communist-ruled community.

Sianfu seemed doomed, observers feared, to recurrence of the disorders of the December 12 uprising, when Marshal Chang and his followers mutinied, seized Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and demanded readmission of communists to Chinese political life to form a common front for war against Japan.

Generalissimo Chiang was freed Christmas Day. Chang was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment, then pardoned.

One report said Gen. Yang Yu-chen, leading Shensi militarist, had declared himself dictator of the Province.

It was estimated 65,000 of Chang Hsueh-liang's former followers, many of them veterans of the armies he had commanded when overlord of Manchuria prior to 1931, were in disorderly domination of Sian-fu.

They were reported surging through the streets, intimidating the populace, looting and bringing normal business to a stop.

Military authorities ordered sandbag barricades and trenches thrown about the city.

The large missionary community here, Americans and other Occidentals, with every normal egress blocked, was anxious as the storm rose about their compounds.

The anxieties of the national government was shown in cancellation of orders under which portions of the punitive expedition sent against rebellious Shensi last month were withdrawn.

First Age Pension Yields Beneficiary Profit of 12 Cents

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 7.—Ernest Ackerman, 65, for 33 years a motorman for the Cleveland Railway Co. stepped forward today as the first man in Cleveland, and maybe the first in the country, to apply for his social security old age pension. Ackerman will make a net profit of 12 cents.

Ackerman asked the Social Security office for a lump sum payment and was told that he was entitled to slightly more that 17 cents, 5 cents of which was taken out of his pay January 1.

Ackerman became 65 years old January 2 and was ruled out of further participation in the company's pension plan. His wages for January 1, the only day on which he participated, amounted to $4.9d. A one per cent tax that amounted to a fraction less than 5 cents.

Under the plan, the veteran motorman is entitled to 3½ per cent of his total wages which figures out to be a little more than 17 cents. Social Security officials said they believed Ackerman's application to be the first in the country.

Grain Import Levies Slashed by Germany

Berlin, Jan. 7 (AP).—Germany cut tariffs on grain imports sharply today.

American authorities here questioned whether the move signaled a great increase in grain purchases abroad since Germany maintains a vigorous and detailed system of control over imports.

(World grain markets in recent weeks have been influenced by reports Germany faced a grain shortage and would need at least 1,000,000 tons of wheat to make up for the deficiency.)

True "Hallucination."

New York, Jan. 7.

A BOSTON psychiatrist wrote to Noel Coward this week concerning a patient who has been suffering from hallucinations. Her newest vision, the doctor reported, occurred when she saw Coward's "The Astonished Heart" in Boston. The last scene of that play shows Coward, portraying a psychiatrist frustrated in love, committing suicide by leaping through a window—and then curtain! . . . "My patient," wrote the doctor, "insists that at the curtain she saw you sitting on the window ledge. That's her hallucination" . . . Coward immediately wired reply. It hadn't been a hallucination. At that one performance the electrician accidentally touched the switch after the actor's stage leap blackout. This re-lit the stage, destroying the entire effect of the play—by revealing the suicide seated on the ledge.

According to their sources, the party's climax was reached when the King's own bag-pipers marched into the room playing "St. Louis Blues." Nelson B. Bell — About The Town Showshops

WHEN Guthrie McClintic, Ray Henderson and all of the other members of the executive staff of the Katharine Cornell organization were in Washington for the premiere of Miss Cornell's production of Maxwell Anderson's "The Wingless Victory," at the National Theater recently, it was a moot question whether John Gielgud would be able to appear here in Mr. McClintic's production of "Hamlet," or not.

BELL.

The National's booking sheets, at the time, were so completely filled that it looked extremely doubtful that a date for Mr. Gielgud could be wangled out of the impasse.

That now seems all to have been overcome. Unconfirmed negotiations have been going on between the National and the McClintic-Cornell organization looking to a week's booking of the Gielgud "Hamlet," beginning February 1. Something may come up to prevent the consummation of this happy event, but I somehow seem to doubt it. Mr. Gielgud seems to be set, as the saying goes.

After that—the week of February 8—the National revels in the happy expectation of having Tallulah Bankhead as its star in "Reflected Glory," and for its next attraction "Dead End."

These bookings, as I have said, do not at all represent a definite cut-and-dried set of commitments that cannot be tipped over on a moment's notice, but they do represent a pretty fair prospect for the month to come.

• • • •

Speaking of National bookings, there comes from Pittsburgh a cordial note from Frances Starr, here last week in "The Two Mrs. Carrolls," which expresses an especially friendly and understanding view of the problems of the critic as well as of the actor. It seems that Mrs. Veiller's play, in its American version, has encountered various vicissitudes of which most of us have not been aware.

I hope it will turn out to be the same sort of success in this country as it was in London. And I assuredly accept Miss Starr's suggestion that we foregather sometime out at Wardman Park and attempt to thresh out some of these perplexities of the theater.

Ken Murray, who was to have headlined the vaudeville bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, beginning today, has been forced to cancel his engagement by about the same sort of foul attack as laid your present dispatcher low two weeks ago. They tell me that Mr. Murray has a temperature that is 'way up in the hundreds and shows no signs of being amenable to reason.

That's the way mine was.

Cross and Dunn, those two admirable singing fellows, are pinch hitting for Mr. Murray in the emergency, just as Jerry Gross did for me in mine, but it does make a difference in the tempo and the stride of your medium when you are thrown out of step like this.

Frank La Falce, of the Warner organization tells me that Ken Murray will be coming along later, after his fever has subsided. We all hope so.

There are surprising reactions to my noted aversion to "The Organ Grinder Swing" as a piece of music. One feminine correspondent writes in to say that I should be accoladed, or something, for my heroic stand. That probably is a bit of overstatement. But I still hate the piece and have no hesitancy in saying so. There seem to be a large number of others who agree with me that this is the most aggravating thing that has happened in Tin Pan Alley since goodness knows when. Don Bestor, an old friend, started the darn thing here and I could kill him for it!

As you may have learned by now, you either like a thing, or you don't.

Police Court last year collected $468,832 in fines and collateral forfeitures—$5,598 more than in 1935.

But the figure for last year was under the record year, 1929, when $532,956 was paid in by citizens. The greatest source of the court's income last year was traffic violators, who paid in a total of $328,836.

Students Stage Strike On 'Junk' Class Rings

Cleveland, Jan. 7 (AP).—Suburban North Olmsted High School's senior class employed the "sit-down," refusing to change classrooms today in protest against acceptance of class rings which one termed "a lot of junk."

The office of Superintendent of Schools L. E. Hayes announced the students resumed their studies this afternoon after a morning "sit-down" in a classroom.

In Hollywood With Jimmy Fiddler

Idol Chatter.

HOLLYWOOD, JAN. 7.

ANN SOUTHERN.

But you never thought of it for shivering, but Boris Karloff has one of the screen's most beautiful voices. Mrs. Cagney sniffs at Jimmy's auction bargains so he hides most of them under the bed so his missis won't muss his hair. Steve Clement performs his expert movie knife throwing at $25 a miss, and he had better!

Eddie Cantor's priceless crack: "Parkyakarcus is waiting for Anthony Adverse to come out in Reader's Digest." If studio politics were as clean as the last Presidential election, studio employes would be lots happier. Mae West is so inured to cameramen that she never bats an eye when the flash pops.

Hardly a week goes by but some new beauty arrives in town, fresh from posing for magazines or billboard advertising. Walk the length of the boulevard and most likely you will meet "The girl whose best friend would not tell her" or the "the fellow who caused laughter when he sat at the piano." Each time these new models invade Hollywood, press agents make much whoop-de-do of the fact. Perhaps it is this premature publicity which marks and hurts them, for few models within recent years have crashed to film success.

Yet there was a time when such a background helped. Visit the homes of Norma Shearer or Fredric March and they will (on request) drag forth old scrapbooks filled with advertisements for which they posed. They will howl with laughter over these ads, made 15 years ago and today quite funny. Richard Arlen came from the same field; he was one of the original "Arrow Collar Men."

Most men sneer at these "foreigners" who kiss the hands of the ladies, and I cannot refrain from smiling as I pass along to you a letter I received from a small town in Northern California. It seems that Francis Lederer was to speak before a woman's club on his favorite subject, peace. The letter comments: "Our chairwoman gave Lederer a flowery introduction after which he bowed and kissed her hand. That caused near-hysteria for everybody, and the lady who was kissed almost fainted. But here's the kick, Fidler. All the menfolk in town are now kissing hands at local socials!"

Blackmail Plot Figure Is Held At Ellis Island

English Woman Prominent in Swindle of Rajah Faces Deportation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 7.—Mrs. Maude Robinson, an English woman whose romance with a fabulously rich Indian potentate gave rise to one of the biggest blackmailing cases exposed in English courts, was revealed today as fighting deportation from the United States.

Pending a decision by the Department of Labor on a charge that she has overstayed permission to remain in the country, Mrs. Robinson, now in her forties, was released from Ellis Island under $500 bond.

Her husband, Charles E. Robinson, a former London bookmaker who figured prominently in the swindling case 12 years ago, was held in Jersey City, N. J., awaiting extradition to South Carolina to face charges of violating the Federal stolen properties act.

He was arrested in Tenafly, N. J., on a charge of swindling Fred C. Tuttle, wealthy Cincinnati business man, of $30,000 in a horse racing scheme. Federal agents also charge Robinson had counterfeit stocks and bonds worth $200,000 when seized.

Mrs. Robinson, arrested two weeks ago at Jersey City, came to the United States for a month's visit a year ago. It was on the night of the first anniversary of the Armistice, in 1919, that she met the Maharajah Hari Singh of Jammu and Kashmir in London.

Five years later, conservative England was shocked by the blackmail plot exposed in a trial brought by Robinson to collect $625,000 from the Midland Bank.

Sir John Simon, who became Foreign Secretary and is now Britain's Secretary for Home Affairs, serving as attorney for the bank, charged that Robinson was "one of six rogues who had been cheated of some of the swag."

Lord Darling, then England's most famous judge, did not permit the Maharajah's name to be used at any time throughout the trial "for reasons of state not connected with the question of rank." He was understood to refer to the danger of causing an uprising in India and so the Maharajah was known as "Mr. A."

Although his name was not published in England in the trial reports, his English aide was mentioned as one of the six accused conspirators.

Robinson and others testified that "Mr. A" had paid $750,000 after he had been discovered in Paris in a compromising situation with Mrs. Robinson. The suit against the bank resulted because neither Robinson nor his wife got any of the money.

League Balance $16,455.

The American Liberty League reported to Congress yesterday it received contributions of $441,380 last year, spent $518,123 and had to dip into a balance carried over from 1935 to make up the difference of $76,743. After paying its bills, the league had a balance of $16,455 to start 1937.

Hetzel Chapter To Be Honored By Mrs. Elles

Sulgrave Club Meeting Is Today; D. A. R. Heads to Attend Luncheon.

One of the most important social events of the season in D. A. R. circles will take place this afternoon at the Sulgrave Club when Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis will entertain at a luncheon for officers and members of the Susan Reviere Hetzel Chapter. It is expected that Mrs. William A. Becker, president general, and other national and State officers of the D. A. R. will be present. An address will be made by Miss Janet Richards.

Mrs. Ellis is one of the most active leaders in patriotic and civic movements in Washington. She and her husband, Judge Ellis, are interested in the early history of this city and outlying counties of Maryland and Virginia. While they have a home on Massachusetts avenue, they spend much time at their country place, Rippon Lodge, near Dumfries, Va. Rippon Lodge one of the oldest and most historic Virginia estates, has been restored by Judge and Mrs. Ellis. Members of the Susan Riviere Hetzel Chapter have been entertained many times at Rippon Lodge, where they find much interesting Revolutionary historical matter on the estate and the nearby country.

After the luncheon a business meeting will be held, with the regent, Miss Luella P. Chase, presiding.

French opera was discussed at the meeting of the Columbia Chapter of the Delphian Society in Pierce Hall yesterday morning. Mrs. George H. Post led the discussion and made the introductory comments. Mrs. Maude E. Thatcher discussed early French opera; Mrs. Elizabeth R. Davidson discussed "The Work of Gluck"; Mrs. James G. Yaden discussed "Cherubini"; Mrs. H. B. Linton, "Les Huguenots"; Mrs. William S. Graham, "Gounod's 'Faust'"; Mrs. C. M. Jansky, jr., "Saint-Saens," and Mrs. George Ellis, "Mignon."

Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, will be honor guest at a tea at the clubhouse of the Woman's National Democratic Club tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, president, and officers and board of governors will be in the receiving line.

Alternating at the tea table will be the Director of the Mint, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross; the Assistant Treasurer, Mrs. Blair Banister; Civil Service Commissioner Lucille Foster McMillan, Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of the Alabama Senator; Mrs. James Newton, Mrs. Ewin Davis, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Bates Warren, Mrs. Jack Hayes and Mrs. Harry Fulton.

The second monthly luncheon-musicale of the International Art Forum, Mme. Amelia Conti, founder-president, will be held in Wesley Hall, 1703 K street, tomorrow at 1:30 p. m.

Hostesses will be: Mrs. Franceska Lawson, Mme. Rose Arnold, Miss Clelia Fioravanti and Miss Elizabeth D'Aigle.

The musical program, directed by Miss Gretchen Hood, will include Mary Weber Harter, lyric soprano, and Margaret Tolson, pianist. Mrs. Harter is a newcomer to Washington and was popular as a singer among Army social circles at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and also Honolulu, where she has spent some time. Miss Tolson is well known here musically and is a graduate of the famous Eastman School of Music in Rochester.

Among those who will be present are Mme. Sara Flackshaar, Mr. and Mrs. Ishmael Burton, Miss Lucille Brunner, Miss Adelaide Philips, Miss Flora Faulkner, Miss Marie Martel, Mrs. Gertrude Hite, the Misses Muriel and Marjorie Hite, Mr. and Mrs. Arnaldo Conti Berenguer, Mrs. Lorraine Bentley, Mr. George Bentley, jr., Miss Anne Darlington, Mrs. Jewell Downs, Mrs. Carroll Haig, Mr. Charles Fash, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Parr, Mrs. Edith Hoffman Jones, Miss Gretchen Hood, Mr. Robert Jarrett, Prof. Harry Howard, Mrs. Helen McCroskey, Miss Effie Henry, Mrs. Amelia Lynham, Miss Aileen Lynham, Miss Eva Wolpe, Mrs. Millyan Brooke Moore.

Beta Alpha Chapter, Zeta Tau Alpha, National Women's Panhellenic Fraternity, will entertain officers of other women's fraternities at George Washington University at a tea Sunday afternoon in honor of Miss Marjorie Glasson, national field secretary of the organization. The tea will be held in the fraternity apartment at 2129 G street northwest, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Miss Glasson, who is on an official visit to the chapter, will be entertained by the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha at a meeting Friday night in the fraternity apartment. The meeting will be followed by a motion picture depicting the work at the fraternity's philanthropic project in Virginia.

Miss Glasson will be entertained at dinner at the Powhatan Hotel Saturday night by members of the alumnae chapter, including Mrs. Linden Crone, Miss Dorothy Richtmeyer, Mrs. John Warlick and Miss Frances Fauntleroy. Members of the active chapter who will entertain the guest at luncheon include Miss Geraldine Dillman, Miss Audrey McCuen, Miss Dorothy Buck, Miss Jane Bennett, Miss Estelle Moore and Miss Frances Nettleton.

The Comic Tragedienne Comes Back

ZaSu Pitts, the actress with the peculiarly capitalized name, has one of her most effective roles in "Sing Me a Love Song," the new picture coming to the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater today. Miss Pitts is probably best known to her fans by that lugubrious "Oh, head," which she can make sound more hopeless than anybody else in pictures.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington String Quartet (Milton Schwartz, Paul Brightenburg, George Wargo and Howard Mitchell) gives the first of four concerts in the Sulgrave Club Thursday afternoon. Program: Quartet in D minor, K 421 (Mozart), Quartet in D major, Op. 18, No. 3 (Beethoven), Quartet in D major (Borodin).

This estimable organization deserves a larger following than it has thus far attracted, and yesterday's audience, friendly and encouraging as it was, came far from being commensurate with the merits of the program. It is, however, a common failing of communities to overlook a treasure close at hand because it lacks the glitter of publicized reputation.

Since it has been under my observation, the Washington String Quartet has shown a steady and commendable integration. The young musicians are well co-ordinated in temperament, their technical equipment is good, their sincerity is obvious, and their idealism strongly pronounced. Their performances show careful preparation, and their readings have the unanimity which comes from a shared understanding of the music.

Their first program of the season was more conservative than those that are to follow, presenting one of the serious quartets of Mozart, the third of Beethoven's first set, and the Borodin quartet which encloses the popular nocturne movement. In that array there was much to be enjoyed, for the musicians were spirited in their projection of moods. In fact, if there is a fault to be found with their playing on this occasion, they were at times too vehement for the acoustics of the room.

Violin recital by Louise Behrend (Vilma Kaplan, accompanist) at the Arts Club of Washington Thursday night. Program: Sonata in D major (Vivaldi-Respighi), Concerto in G minor (Bruch), Romance in F major (Beethoven), Rondino (Xieuxtemps), Romanza Andalusa (Sarasate), Polonaise in A major (Vieniavski).

Among the pleasures falling to the music critic's lot is that of watching the development of talent. Although he has nothing to do with it directly, his satisfaction is akin to that of the teacher who sees the lesson absorbed and the admonition heeded. For his critical listening is concerned with the detection of weakness, the observation of improvement and the approbation of the flowering of musicianship. His interest remains keen as long as the potentialities continue to unfold into artistry.

Louise Behrend justifies the attention with which one has noted her musical growth during the last three years. Her technical progress in the last year alone is remarkable, and with it there has been concurrent an increase in interpretative power. Her tone, well-drawn from the first, has gained in the eloquence of color, and her phrasing shows more of an expert ease.

The time comes when the incipient artist must stand confidently on acquired ability. Miss Behrend does not do herself full justice because she hesitates to take that stand. What flaws there were in her playing last evening were due entirely to nervousness and not to imperfect technique or lack of musical perception. One remedy for the tremors that make fingers treacherous to their skill is experience on the concert stage, but a better one is the calm reliance on the inner knowledge of what one can do.

Judge in St. Louis Discharges Jury In Midst of Term

St. Louis, Jan. 7 (AP).—Circuit Judge J. Wesley McAfee discharged a grand jury in the middle of its term today because it refused to investigate charges of fraud in an election in September, 1935, when $7,500,000 in bonds were voted for a Jefferson river-front memorial.

Officials said the judge's action was unprecedented in the history of St. Louis courts.

The jury declined to make the inquiry because its members believed the memorial was a "good thing" for St. Louis.

State Has 5 Days To Answer Taylor

Baltimore, Jan. 7 (AP).—Chief Judge Samuel K. Dennis gave the State of Maryland five days from today to answer a suit of John E. Taylor, asking that he be reinstated as a member of the State Police Force.

Judge Dennis overruled a demurrer filed by the attorney general's office to the suit. The jurist held Taylor could not be found guilty of an offense on which he had no formal hearing.

State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones acquitted Taylor of taking bribes but dismissed him from the State Police Force on charges of "conduct unbecoming an officer." The latter was not included in the formal charges originally filed against him.

'Black Leg' Legion Members Indicted On Robbery Charge

Prestonsburg, Ky., Jan. 7 (AP).—Twenty-five men alleged to belong to the "Black Leg" Legion were indicted here today. They were charged with beating and robbing a country storekeeper who had criticized operations of the band in adjoining Magoffin County.

Commonwealth's Attorney O. C. Hall said the members of the band were sworn to "torture, burn and kill" any who talked about them, and in Salyersville, Commonwealth's Attorney Earl R. Cooper said they had organized to punish persons who were "not working, or were filthy in their homes or didn't send their children to school."

Seven of those indicted here were placed in jail with bonds fixed at $10,000 each, and Hall said that Jim Marshall, one of those indicted, had offered to plead guilty and turn State's evidence. Deputy sheriffs were sent out after the 18 still at large.

U. S. Experts Studying Japan Textile Trade

Yokohama, Japan (Friday), Jan. 8 (AP).—A five-man commission of textile leaders from the United States arrived here today. The Americans received a warm greeting. The commission planned to spend two weeks in Japan discussing Japanese cotton goods exports to the United States.

It Walked In the Dark

By Agee Hays

SYNOPSIS.

Bob Holbrook, as the Brians' butler, is helping his brother, Larry, investigate the stabbing of Alexander Brian. Brian's officers are in his home: Miss Hunt, resident stenographer, heard Brian scream, found him dead; his older son, Peter, asleep; his younger son, Mark, locked in his room; Julian, private secretary, running water in the bathtub. Cora, the cook; Frank, the gardener; Lee Sen, houseboy, and Jean, maid, all apparently have alibis. Mrs. Brian is in an asylum. The second night Bob is there Peter is stabbed. As before, the murderer struck shortly after midnight, using a thin blade, which police can't locate. Apparently Peter, using a dictaphone, had closed his doors to avoid disturbing the others. Miss Hunt heard him stop dictating and scream. She called Julian, who was in the stock room. They found his doors lock. Mark arrived from his club as this time. Frank, wakened by the police, says he saw Julian sneakingly counting off footsteps under Peter's window at dusk. He saw some one else under Peter's window, but hesitates to disclose who it was.

CHAPTER 9.

"It was th' young lady"—Frank said hesitatingly—"the purty one, that does the writin' fer Mr. Brian."

"Oh, yes, Miss Hunt."

"Well, she comes out jist as I was gittin' done work. She comes trottin' on tiptoes like. Jist then I gits up an' she lets out a 'Oooo!'" Frank was unconsciously comic in his attempt at imitation. But neither Larry nor Sutton smiled. "Then she says, 'Oh, Frank! It's you!' she says, an' asts me where is the dogs as she had som'thin' to give 'em to eat."

"Did she have anything in her hand?"

Frank's simple face betrayed slow astonishment. "No! Now I reckaleck, sir! But, anyways," he pleaded, "maybe she could of had suthin' in her pockets."

"How was she dressed?"

Asks to See Dogs.

Frank reflected but finally gave up. It was pretty dark and he didn't just notice. Dressed like any time, he thought. No, he hadn't noticed any pockets for sure, but "You told her where the dogs were?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you watch her go to them?"

"No. I seen 'er start, an' I hurried to the kitchen because Cora don't like fer me to eat so late. But I want fer to get my plantin' done these evenings before the next rain starts. It's time for 'em any day now, sir, an——"

"That's all you noticed this evening?"

"Yes, sir."

"You're in a position where you can help us a great deal, Frank."

"How's that, sir?"

"You're outside. You can watch. And, another thing. You can keep your eyes open for clews."

Frank stared at Larry—not comprehending. "Yes, sir?"

"Anything you find when you're digging around; clothes, knives. Anything that doesn't grow out there, you bring to us. It would be a fine thing if you could help us run this murderer down."

"Yes, sir," Frank agreed vehemently. "I'll be lookin' out, sir."

Larry had again touched his sense of duty and I knew the man would be from now on conscientiously on the lookout.

A moment later he left.

The captain was on edge even more than he had been before.

"Man!" he snapped, rolling his cigar from one end of his mouth to another. "This is the worst mess I was ever in. Yes, sir! By Judas! In 20 years' solid work with crimes. I've never seen the equal of this. I get all ready to handcuff this lanky secretary and along comes the stenog in the dark pretendin' to feed the dogs without a thing in her hands to feed 'em with!"

Larry was seriously silent, marking absently on the paper in his hand.

"Is it safe for me to come forth?" I called from my tortuous hideout.

Sutton Blames Julian.

Sutton strode across and locked the big double-doors into the hall. "The more you think about it," he growled as he came back, "it's a clear case. Julian was in the stockroom, huh? Sure he was. And he took just so many steps—had it all timed, by Judas!—to crawl through the window he'd opened a crack beforehand, stabbed Peter, took so many steps back in time to get to the stenog while she was yelling. Remember what she said? 'It took him some time to come from the stock room.' Ha! Why fool around? I got a notion to pass the others up and handcuff Julian before he does anything else."

Larry considered. "It might be safest. . . . Still I'd like to prove it on him first. And with all the men you have watching the house, you know he can't get away."

"Prove it! Why else would he be grinning to himself and measuring the distance from Peter's window to the stockroom?"

"I don't know. But what was Miss Hunt doing?"

"Oh, well. That's just one of those wildcat clews—a coincidence that comes in accidental and throws detectives off."

Larry seemed dubious. "Maybe. But we haven't even heard everybody's story. And you see, so far, our evidence is only circumstantial. Something more may turn up——"

"Yeah?" Sutton made no attempt to conceal his exasperation. "You're death on proof. It's not enough to know—Lord, I've pinched men before on a good sure hunch and got proof afterward."

Larry only grinned. He was used to Sutton. "The case is getting on my nerves, too, Captain. But now, suppose you and I are thoroughly convinced. Your 20 years' experience tells you we've got to have a stronger case than we have now or a clever murderer like this one is will slip through our fingers after we drag him to court. Anyway," Larry lit his cigarette thoughtfully and consulted the list I had given him, "we might get some more against the young lady and Mark. Now, let's see: Jean Lindstrum, Cora Hoyt and Lee Sen. Jean's only been here a week. That might let her out. And——"

"Far as that goes, Frank Serge wasn't here when Alexander was murdered, but he give us some good dope."

New Discovery.

Sutton smiled reminiscently. "Yeah, we had her up before. She's a kind-hearted, harmless soul. Scared nearly out of her wits that time. I'm surprised she stuck it out. She's always the one that's seeing things, too!"

"Money," Larry hazarded enigmatically, making some sort of notation on his list. "She's getting good wages for 'sticking it out.' And Lee Sen! There you are—a Chinese murder." Larry grinned. "It would be a joke if Julian was doing just what Frank thought he was."

"What's that?"

"Measuring off a place for flowers. We could take it as easily one way as another."

"You can't convict a man for murder because he pushes a window, unless——"

A loud rap interrupted Larry. I slipped out of sight and Sutton unlocked the door. It was Lockwood. "Captain! Martin wants you down in that room where the body was found." He was obviously excited. "He's discovered somethin'!"

Sutton's lethargy vanished at once. "Maybe we've got a break at last. And, say, Holbrook! That maid an' the cook and Chink ain't had a thing to do with this. They was all asleep when it happened, too, so what could they tell us? Turn the rest of 'em loose, Lockwood. We'll quiz 'em tomorrow."

He turned toward the office, and with a tilt of his head invited Larry to accompany him. Larry declined.

"I'll be down in a few minutes. I want to look around and talk a bit to Bob."

As soon as we were alone he turned to me with a twinkle in his eyes.

"What's your verdict, sleuth?" he grinned.

"Great guns! I don't know," I admitted. "So far, they all sound guilty and they all have alibis."

Larry Inspects House.

Larry nodded. "So will the other three. Of course, it's the way we question them that makes them sound guilty to you. You see, we make each one prove he's innocent. • • • Show me over the house a bit, will you, Bob?"

Although it must have been about 4 o'clock, it was still dark and the halls were tensely silent as if the very walls were numbed by the death blow so recently struck. Cora, Jean and Lee had evidently already gone to their rooms, for the living room doors were open wide and the room was dark.

"I suppose most of these rooms have been thoroughly searched already," Larry observed. "And I'm not going to break in on anybody who's gone to bed. But I want a general idea here."

I led him quietly past the women's rooms and into the kitchen. There Larry picked up a bit of yellow which looked to me like Cora's hair, glanced it over and stuck it into his pocket with an apologetic shrug. And down at the end of the hall he studied Mark's cane and hat where they had been dropped into a chair.

"If Mark came in through the business wing," he mused, "why are these things here by the back stairs?"

I couldn't answer that, for Mark had been without them when he came up to my room. "Maybe he carried them this far and left them," I suggested.

Larry spent a long time in the two murdered men's rooms which opened into each other on the second floor, and studied the door which opened from Alexander's into Julian's.

Then we climbed to the third floor and I pointed out Lee's room. The door was ajar. Lee hadn't come to bed yet! That was funny. Larry went in and looked around. He studied the bed which was tumbled up—from Lee's having been called out of it so suddenly at the time of the murder. We came out and crossed the ballroom.

It is family tradition that, when Larry is thinking he doesn't talk, so I wasn't surprised when, after a long silence, he said only, "I'm curious to see what important thing Martin unearthed in Peter's office after we left."

What Did Miss Hunt Hear?

Sutton and the men were talking in low tones in Peter's office when we arrived. The body was gone, but everything else was ostensibly the same as when the police had forced the door.

"Listen here!" Sutton called excitedly as he saw us enter the outer office. "Here's something that will send the chills up and down your spine. Lord! It gives me the creeps!"

"What?" Larry demanded.

"Well," Sutton's face was strangely tense. "You get into Miss Hunt's office there and we'll close the door. • • • All set?"

In the little room which had been Miss Hunt's we stood, silent and apprehensive. "All set!"

"Now." Sutton called through the closed door, "you gonna hear what Miss Hunt says she heard."

McReynolds, Chairman of Welfare Board, Attacks Lusk Proposal.

The Washington Taxpayers Association yesterday was rebuked by Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, in answer to the association's recent demands for abolition of direct relief and public assistance in the District.

McReynolds denounced as "absurd and untrue" charges by the taxpayers' group that a proposed supplemental relief appropriation was sought by local welfare leaders in an effort to save relief workers' jobs.

Through Rufus S. Lusk, president of the taxpayers' association, the District Commissioners recently were urged to refuse support of the proposed $830,000 additional appropriation for direct relief. Lusk contended the sum would "throw another monkey wrench into our already creaking financial machine."

Condemns Group.

Answering Lusk's charges in a letter to the Commissioners, McReynolds not only renewed request for support of the proposed supplemental appropriation, but condemned the taxpayers' organization for its stand.

"I am sure you realize the absurdity and untruthfulness of Mr. Lusk's statement that this proposal of the Board of Public Welfare is based on the fear that relief workers will lose jobs," McReynolds wrote.

"It ill becomes Mr. Lusk, the salaried officer of an organization the funds of which mostly go into paying his salary, to charge insincerity on the part of competent public servants who are closely in touch with the situaton and who know, from acute anguish of daily contact with the poor of the city, of needs which are not being met," McReynolds continued.

Unanimous Vote.

He pointed out that the supplemental relief appropriation was recommended unanimously at a regular meeting of the Board of Public Welfare — "an unsalaried body, all of whom are taxpayers."

"They are obliged by the law which set up the Board of Public Welfare and by your request for a report on the relief situation," McReynolds wrote, "to bear testimony to the acute need which they know exists.

"The Board of Public Welfare is anxious to do its work with the smallest personnel possible for effective results," the relief head continued, "and is not trying to save anybody's job. As a matter of fact, the staff of the public assistance division is already too small to handle properly the heavy burden of investigation and advice placed upon it."

Prosperity Cited.

In opposing the additional appropriation, Lusk cited prosperous conditions and lack of unemployment now prevailing in the District. To this, McReynolds answered:

"The only trouble is that this prosperity is one which depends largely upon the continuity and expansion of Government employment. As everyone knows, most of the new positions in the Government have been given, as a result of the apportionment act, to persons who are not residents of the District.

"The issue raised by Mr. Lusk is one of humanity as against expenditure of tax funds."

Burdick to Speak.

Taking as his topic "The Money Question," Representative Usher L. Burdick, of North Dakota, will speak before the Washington Open Forum tomorrow at 7 p. m. at 135 B street southeast.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Play for a Mistake.

A good defender always counts up as accurately as possible, declarer's sure and probable tricks. If possible, he determines what declarer's line of play will be—in order to block it. If nothing can defeat declarer but his own stupidity, a good defender plays even for that. Note how East and West cooperated in allowing South to beat himself in the hand below:

North, dealer.

	♠ A K ♡ K 8 2 ◇ A 10 6 4 ♣ A Q 10 6
♠ Q J 9 7 5 3 ♡ 9 ◇ Q 9 5 ♣ J 9 7	North West East South	♠ 8 6 5 4 ♡ A 6 4 3 ◇ J 7 ♣ K 3 2
	♠ 10 ♡ Q J 10 5 7 ◇ K 8 3 2 ♣ 8 5 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding was unexceptionable. North's two-notrump rebid properly indicated the strength of his hand; a rebid of three-notrump would have been a slight overbid. South, with a strong five-card suit and good distribution, properly rebid the hearts; and North promptly raised to game.

West led the Queen of spades, dummy winning with the King. A low trump lead was held by South's Queen, and on continuation, East won the third trump and returned another spade.

Declarer discarded a club, won with dummy's Ace, and led a diamond to the King. Next he drew the last trump and then finessed the diamond ten, a proper use of a standard safety play. South did not mind it a bit when East won with the Jack, for the Ace was sure to drop the Queen. He had merely taken precautions against four to the Queen-Jack in West's hand.

East led a third spade and declarer ruffed with his last trump. The Ace of diamonds dropped the Queen and then the eight of diamonds was cashed.

Both East and West had no trouble in seeing that declarer could cash the Ace of clubs as his tenth trick. The only hope was that he would take the finesse. East, therefore, blanked his King, saving as his last two cards the last spade and the club King. West saved the Jack and nine of clubs.

When South led a club at the twelfth trick, West played the Jack. South knew that only three clubs remained out against him and that West held two. Deciding that West had the King and Jack, he finessed dummy's Queen.

It will be a long time before that South player again finesses for an extra trick!

Church Boards To Hold Parley On Education

23 Denominations Will Be Represented at Session Opening Monday.

The Council of Church Boards of Education and the National Conference of Church-Related Colleges will convene at the Hotel Mayflower Monday for a five-day discussion of Christian higher education problems.

Some 23 Protestant denominations, with a total membership of 34,000,000, and a majority of the Catholic and Protestant colleges and universities in the United States will be represented at the meetings.

The Lutheran and Presbyterian educational conferences will convene Monday and Tuesday. The Baptists, the Church of the Brethren and the Friends will hold sessions Tuesday, while the Congregational and Christian educators will meet Thursday. Executive committee sessions of the National Catholic Education Association's university and college department will be held Wednesday morning.

Dr. H. M. Robinson, general secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, will preside at the Church Boards of Education Council session Wednesday. The theme will be "A Free Church in a Free State."

Seakers at Wednesday's session of the National Conference of Church-Related Colleges will include Dr. K. F. Herzfeld, professor of physics at Catholic University; Dr. Henry C. Link, director of the Psychological Service Center, New York City; Dr. C. F. Sanders, professor of philosophy at Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa.

Speakers at a mass meeting Wednesday evening of all groups interested in Christian higher education will be Dr. John A. Mackey, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, and Mgr. Fulton J. Sheen, philosophy professor at Catholic University.

Barrymore Troubles 'Just Lovers' Quarrel'

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 7 (AP).—The marital troubles of John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie were termed "just a lovers' quarrel" to day by Mrs. Edna Jacobs, her mother.

"Elaine and John are so fond of each other that, I am certain, neither will be foolish enough to allow anything to happen to their beautiful romance," she said.

Victim, 8, Robbed Of Her Pocketbook By Girl Thief, 10

Bound for school yesterday morning, Margaret Brady, 8, of 35 New York avenue northwest, was the victim of Washington's youngest purse snatcher—a colored girl about 10 years old.

Margaret was walking in North Capitol street between Pierce and L streets when she was approached by the small colored child. The colored girl snatched the pocketbook hanging from her arm, Margaret told police, and ran through an alley.

The pocketbook contained a prayer book, a spelling book and 20 cents. The colored girl has not been located.

School Driving Classes Will Start Next Month

Introduction of driver education and training for high school students in Washington, announced Wednesday by Supt. Frank W. Ballou, will enable the Capital to retain its leadership among cities offering safety and traffic education opportunities, American Automobile Association officers said yesterday.

Ballou said that beginning next month Roosevelt and Dunbar high schools will have experimental courses in safe driving. A feature of the course will be the use of dual control cars to aid the students learn to drive.

Democrat Club to Elect.

The New York State Democratic Club of the District of Columbia will meet tonight at 8 at 1110 F street northwest to nominate officers and make plans for the new year.

Phil Wood Now Officiating at Wardman Park

Phil Wood is now head barmaster at the Wardman Park's new cocktail lounge.

This well-known maestro of cocktail shakers has been slinging 'em around the city since before prohibition. Those of you who remember his particular style of arm exercise, and who, for one reason or another, have been unable to run him to earth, are hereby notified that he is awaiting you at Wardman's famous spot.

• • • •

The gray-eyed honey with the black wavy hair has made the front cover of a lot of song hits, including such knockouts as "Footloose and Fancy Free."

Incidentally the Broadway chorus, now on the bill, illustrates Shoreham swank and good taste by proving that a chorus can be "all dolled up" and still glamorous.

• • • •

Earl Lindsay's "Flower Parade of 1937" and the Broadway cast of entertainers, including that sensational adagio dancing team, Theodore and Denasha, are still making 'em all sit up and take notice at the Lotus.

Here, too, may we find the Barklays, novelty dancers, employing all the art of handwork and footwork of expert fencers. They use raplers and the clashing of bright steel with the tapping of iron-clad heels and toes beat together in a rip-snorting crescendo.

And lest we forget, you still will find here as jovial M. C. none other than Al Morton, to whom many a good dance team or solo performer may attribute at least half the applause they receive.

Night owls too will be pleased to know that Honey Davis, platinum-haired siren of song, is now behind the mike with Bill Strickland and his Capitolians.

If you are in the mood for romantic music and with-a-tear, drop in at the Raleigh's Pall Mall room. There you will find Sally E. (Finney) Evans, now singing and playing one of those baby-sized pianos.

Vying with the name and fame of Cocoanut Grove's past performers, a first-class troupe of head-line entertainers is en route to this popular Washington night spot.

Coming all the way from the capital of Filmdom, where they tell me the pretty girls are all killed off and only the beautiful survive, this new revue promises to hit a new high in entertainment.

Then there's the Cafe of All Nations where Miss Kay Rielley has a way all her own to make your lunch hour a pleasant one. After 4 you will find Jack Campbell, Roy Kiser and Otis Manning (who, incidentally, is leaving Sunday) very entertaining while you sip your favorite cocktail.

Luncheon, dinner and supper—you will find the Mayfair cuisine pleases the most fastidious epicure.

The boss of the Dude Ranch has a new-fangled notion which he passes along. It concerns how a chicken should be cooked. Catch it young and plump, he tells us, cook it immediately, and come to eat it at the Ranch.

At least that is what he is doing and if you do not care for fowl there are sizzling steaks to be had.

The Ranch has a new policy of big double floor shows on Fridays and Saturdays. This is in addition to music by Berk Motley's ten-piece band and the throaty voice of Agnes Harris, blues singer.

In the Raleigh's Pall Mall room Eddie Elkins has an entirely new set of dance tunes. His time has been increased by another half-hour on the Dixie chain and a quarter-hour on a local station.

Here for the next two weeks you may find De Mar and D'Andre, rumba and tango exponents who feature the Brazilian Flirtation Walk.

• • • •

Emil Wadimoff is the man who produces the entertaining sketches at the Russian Club Troika. Shamanka, the newest of these, has in its cast a team of Orlik and Lolik and Wadimoff himself. Zinaida Nicolina sings French ballads in a manner that amply justifies her reputation as one of the finest international singers.

At Maryland Club Gardens, the cheering personality and voice of Peggy Day still graces the floor show. There are a tango and sophisticated waltz by Curtis and Dubois, an acrobatic dance by Kitty Dangler and Fran Trappe and his accordion, plus Charlie Jeeter and the orchestra.

Brinkley's—And who do you think was seen at this Southeast Washington spot? None other than the beautiful blonde who won the marathon contest at the Washington Auditorium. And looking none the worse for the wear.

• • • •

Frank McNey, the official greeter at the 4:30 Club in the Mayan Room at the Madrillon, claims the number of mid-afternoon sippers dropping in here has trebled since the opening. Les Colvin amuses with an accordion. In the evening for dinner and supper dancing, there are Johnnie Shaw and his versatile sextet.

The authenticity of the Spanish dances by Marissa Flores at El Patio of the Carlton Hotel is derived from Eduardo Cansino, Spain's greatest dancing master. Little Marissa did not have the privilege of studying under the great Cansino, but her sister, Gladys, did and was recognized as one of his most apt pupils. After dancing in Europe, Gladys Flores established a dancing school in San Diego where she taught Marissa.

• • • •

Bert Wallace and his Music Box Revue still are on hand at the Cafe La Paree. Not the least part of the show is lovely Hazel Warren, Al Sakol's swing dancer. With Buddy Shaner, she rounds out the vocal portions of the act.

Nelson Eddy, as was the case in The Post poll, led all "Male Vocalists." Following, in order, are: Bing Crosby, Frank Parker, Nino Martini, Richard Crooks, Lanny Ross, Lawrence Tibbett, Kenny Baker, John Charles Thomas, Morton Downey and James Melton.

Feminine vocalists: Jessica Dragonette, Lily Pons, Frances Langford, Kate Smith, Lucille Manners, Helen Jepson, Frances White, Margaret Speaks, Gladys Swarthout, Grace Moore and Kay Thompson.

Jack Benny, who lead the open classification as the best all-around radio artist, led the "Comedians" classification, followed, in order, by Fred Allen, Bob Burns, Eddie Cantor, Ken Murray, Milton Berle, Fred Astaire, Phil Baker, Charley Butterworth and "Fibber McGee and Molly."

Under "Comedy Teams": Burns and Allen, Stoopnagle and Budd, "Amos 'n' Andy," "Fibber McGee and Molly," Benny-Livingstone and ""Pick 'n' Pat."

Andre Kostelanetz, oddly enough, leads all "Radio Bands." I say it is odd because I have firmly maintained that Kostelanetz is the master of them all in dance arrangements—but the public at large thinks of him in association with Martini as a concert conductor. Following Kostelanetz: Lombardo, Waring, King, Fields, Whiteman, Goodman, Heidt and Himber.

"Commentator," in order: Boake Carter, Edwin C. Hill, Lowell Thomas and H. V. Kaltenborn.

Opportunity was given to name the "best" musical program. The result here was: G. M. Concerts, "Sunday Evening Hour," New York Philharmonic, Andrew Kostelanetz and Martini, Fred Waring, Cities Service, Whiteman's "Musical Varieties," Wayne King, "Hit Parade," Philadelphia Orchaestra, Crosby's "Music Hall," "Magic Key" and Voice of Firestone.

DICK TRACY — Going Up

SCENE: NICKELDON HOTEL.
ALL RIGHT, AIKEL. WHAT'S THIS DOPE ABOUT A WOUNDED GUNMAN TAKING A ROOM HERE?
THAT'S RIGHT. I'M SURE HE'S A GANGSTER AND—BELIEVE ME—IF HE ISN'T WOUNDED—HE'S BEEN BADLY HURT SOMEWAY.
OKAY. NOW GIVE US THE ROOM NEXT TO HIS—AND WE'LL SOON TELL YOU WHO HE IS.
WHAT'S IN THAT CASE, TRACY?
A SPECIALLY DESIGNED, NEWLY PERFECTED SET OF AMPLIFYING EAR PHONES. WE'LL BE ABLE TO HEAR THE CONVERSATION IN THIS GUY'S ROOM.
WHY DIDN'T THEY KILL ME WHILE THEY WERE AT IT? OH, MY BACK—MY BACK! I'LL SHOW THEM. THEY'LL NEVER GET THEIR HANDS ON ME AGAIN—NEVER!

Minister's Guests Toast Juliana and Her Prince

Diplomatic, Official Society Throngs Netherlands Legation at Tea Celebrating Marriage of Holland's Crown Princess; Wedding Cake Feature.

By Dudley Harmon.

Take the diplomatic directory, flick the pages from Albania through Yugoslavia, add a few hundred names from official and residential society, and you'll get a general idea of the guests present at the reception given yesterday by the Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With. It's not exaggerating to say that "absolutely everybody" was there, from Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, to two small diplomatic children who wandered in with their nurses toward the end of the party.

Champagne toasts were drunk in honor of Crown Princess Juliana, heiress to the throne of the Netherlands, who was married yesterday to Prince Bernhard zu Lippe-Biesterfeld. Small tubs of orange trees, symbolic of the House of Orange-Nassau, the Netherlands' royal family, stood on stairs leading to the drawing room where the Minister and his wife received. The latter, last year voted one of the best dressed women in Washington, wore a two-piece frock of blue and gold brocade with a short packet flared at the waist. Her blonde daughter, Mlle. Nora de With, in blue crepe, assisted in welcoming the guests.

Several unmarried guests among the feminine contingent present took home pieces of the wedding cake served and said they were going to dream about their future husbands, according to the old tradition. This cake, a masterpiece of the caterer's art, stood several tiers high on the buffet, and was covered with flowers in dazzling white icing.

The entire Netherlands Legation staff helped to see that the guests had a good time. The Counselor and Baroness van Breugel Douglas were present, the latter in black satin with a matching hat; the Commercial Counselor and Mme. Molekamp, recently returned from Europe, and the Secretary of the Legaton, Jonkheer H. M. van der Wyck.

Lady Lindsay arrived without the Ambasador, who is in New York with the Canadian Minister, Sir Herbert Marler, to attend a dinner of the Pilgrims Club. This is one of many organizations whose purpose is to foster Anglo-American good will. The Canadian Legation was represented by Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Macdonnell, and from the British Embassy came the Counselor and Mrs. Victor Mallett—she wore black; the Second Secretary, Mr. Philip Broad, and the Commercial Secretary and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood, the latter in black with touches of sapphire blue.

Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the French Ambassador; the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito; the Polish Ambassador, Count Potocki; the Siamese Minister and Mme. Rajamaitri; the Irish Minister, Mr. Michael MacWhite, and the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza were just a few of the heads of foreign missions present. From the German Embassy came the First Secretary and Frau Herbert Scholz and the Third Secretary, Herr Herbert Blankenhorn, who announced the Ambassador is expected to return January 16 from Europe.

An early arrival was Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; and Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, called later in the afternoon after attending an exhibition at Studio House of the works of Aaron Sopher.

Others present from official ranks included: Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo—she wore brown, and a tiny hat with a noseveil; Mr. Arthur Vanderberg, jr., who looks just like his father, Senator Vandenberg; Mr. and Mrs. John Farr Simmons and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce of the State Department and Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom, who wore a purple gown with matching hat and was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom.

From residential society there was Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, in black, with a hat with a feather, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Olivia Stokes; Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, also voted one of the best-dressed Washington women—she wore a navy blue wool dress with a red print jabot and a small black hat; Mr. Clarence Hewes, who is sailing in February for a trip to the Holy Land; Mrs. Russell Bennett with her daughter, Miss Florence Harris, the Misses Harcourt, Mr. Denys Smith, Miss Marian Trumbull and Many, many more.

Society Views Self, Friends In Caricature

Sopher Exhibit Is Opened at Cocktail Party in Studio House.

Anyone who is feeling smug and conceited about life should follow the example of Washington society and go to Studio House to see themselves and the rest of the world caricatured by Aaron Sopher. The opening of his one-man show was celebrated there yesterday afternoon at a cocktail party, where his sarcastic and poignant sketches drew admiring comment.

Mr. Sopher is a talented young man who came to Washington a year ago from his home in Baltimore. He sees his subjects somewhat in the unflattering manner of the German painter, Grosz, whose caricatures of rich and poor have made him celebrated on two continents.

Among the drawing done by Mr. Sopher is a quick sketch of several dumpy ladies he saw at Mrs. Townsend's musicale on Monday. Those whom he sketched for this picture would not be exactly pleased with his interpretation, but therein lies the pungent, stimulating quality of his work.

Several Washington residents who are fortunate enough to own some Sopher drawings have lent them to the exhibition, and were present yesterday to see them hung. They included Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Miss Olivia Stokes and Miss Kathleen Knox, whose mother, Mrs. McCook Knox, owner of one of the finest examples, was unable to attend.

Miss Suzanne Wilson, daughter of the Secretary of Labor, Miss Perkins, and Miss Helen Brereton, daughter of Commander and Mrs. William D. Brereton, assisted in receiving. They both have jobs as receptionists at Studio House, and have been busy for several days hanging the pictures. Mr. Sopher did a quick sketch of Miss Wilson before the other guests arrived, but unfortunately it was not exhibited.

Miss Perkins herself dropped in to view the exhibit, and others noted were Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips—the beautiful Phillips Memorial Gallery is just next to Studio House—Mrs. Herbert Feis, Miss Alice Graeme, in a coat of grey caracul with hat to match; Baron Serge Korff, the Director of the House and Mrs. C. Law Watkins; Mrs. Adele Smith, the Director of the Corcoran Art Gallery School and Mrs. Leahy, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Eliot, Mr. Richard Sanger, Mr. Prentiss Taylor, Stellita Stapleton and Miss Sibilla Skidelsky.

Mr. Sopher's interesting exhibit will continue through January 30.

Conductor, Wife Will Be Honored At Dinner, Lunch

The Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi will entertain Tuesday evening at dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ormandy. Eugene Ormandy is the famous conductor, who will appear here with the Philadelphia Orchestra at Constitution Hall that evening.

On Wednesday the Newspaper Women's Club will give a luncheon in Mr. and Mrs. Ormandy's honor at the Admiral, where prominent musicians and music lovers will greet the conductor and his wife. Mrs. Ormandy is an accomplished harpist, who, before her marriage, was known professionally. Alice Eversman, music editor of the Evening Star, will be the hostess for the occasion, and Katherine Brooks is in charge of arrangements.

Wedding Date Set By Rosemary Ward

Miss Rosemary Ward, daughter of Mrs. Newell J. Ward, of New Mary farm, Middleburg, Va., and Mr. George W. Blabon, 2d, son of Mrs. Edwin L. Blabon, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., and the late Mr. Blabon, will be married, January 22, in the Central Presbyterian Church, New York. The Rev. Theodore Cuyler Spears will officiate.

Miss Ward, who is a member of the Middleburg hunting colony and a frequent follower of the hounds, has chosen as her maid of honor Miss Lucille Alcott. The bridesmaids will include Mrs. Jay Holmes, Mrs. Dudley Roberts, jr., Mrs. Radcliffe Roberts and Miss Elsie Plankinton, all of New York.

Mr. Blabon will have Edwin H. Vare, jr., as best man. The ushers will be J. Lawrence Pancoast, Edward C. Dearslon, jr., Duncan M. Spencer and Theodore H. Conderman, all of Philadelphia.

Jack Rutherfurds Are Dinner Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rutherford, of Palm Beach, Fla., were entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last night by officers and directors of the President's Cup Regatta Association.

Rutherford drove the Ma Ja II to victory in the regatta last September, winning over the speedy Notre Dame, owned by Herbert Mendelson, of Detroit, previous holder of the cup.

Among the distinguished guests were Commander Joseph D. Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Sommerville, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Councilor, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Lodge, Mr. Edward C. Baltz, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Shelton, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Romon, Admiral and Mrs. H. G. Hamlet, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Leech, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Keane, Dr. and Mrs. Roy Lyman Sexton, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ingling.

All Set for Junior League Ball

Underwood & Underwood.

The Merry Whirl

by MARYLYN

Vera Bloom doubtless will be slow about identifying anyone from his back from now on. The other day, after the opening of Congress, she and her mother were trying to pick out her father, Representative Sol Bloom from a photograph, taken from the back of the "House." They looked and looked and finally had one figure all marked and tagged as the head of their family. They were right. So——at a party the same evening someone talking to Vera, asked her about her father. Vera, turning, said——"Oh, here he is, right here——." And, so saying took one or two steps to where her father stood, with his back to her. Gently she tapped him on a shoulder, but imagine her consternation when the person turned and was a man she had never seen before!

Pretty Nora de With with Ren. van der Wyck, of the Netherlands legation was out dinner-dancing at the Shoreham. Nora was wearing a gown of blue faille crepe. That same evening Senator Arthur Capper was dancing around and having a very nice time. He and Senator William G. McAdoo are the two most famous "up-on-the-hillers," as far as their dancing is concerned. And—among those present was Dorothy Lee Ward, becomingly and smartly attired in black. She is back here but briefly before going to Florida for a good long stay. She has become tremendously interested in her property down there which consists of a very spacious plot of ground right on the water. On this she is planning to build something that will make the eyes of the neighboring Florida "crackers" pop right out. Having spent some time in India, she had opportunity to visit on the Indian house boats of friends, and so that is what she is going to build down on her Florida property.

Some people sing for their suppers, while others fiddle for theirs, but Mr. Richard Squires goes one better—he travels for his. Although making his home in New York City, he actually spends much of his time here. He has even been known to hop a train or plane for Washington when the spirit moved him to have a dinner at the Carlton, where he has an understanding with the chef that he is not to know what he is going to eat, until the food is placed before him.

"Mystery in Washington"—should be the name for the coat episode. The Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings have tried and tried to find out who the person is who left her black velvet evening wrap at Ruthven "the night of December 17." And as yet, not a glimmer of light on the subject. Who knows, maybe it is something Santa Claus left by mistake. However, if there is a black coat that isn't where it should be, it probably is this wandering garment.

Sen. Lee to Be Guest At Dinner Monday

Senator and Mrs. Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, have been spending ten days with Mr. and Mrs. Tully Nettleton, of Arlington Ridge road, while looking for an apartment. They are moving this week-end to the St. Nicholas in California street.

Senator Lee will be guest of honor at a dinner being given in the garden at the Mayflower Monday, at which Senator Elmer Thomas will preside.

Mrs. Emmaline Samuel is chairman of the reception committee that includes Senator and Mrs. Thomas, Senator and Mrs. Lee, Representative and Mrs. Will Rogers, Representative and Mrs. W. E. Disney, Representative and Mrs Jack Nichols, Representative and Mrs. Wilburn Cartwright, Representative and Mrs. Lyle Boren, Representative and Mrs. R. P. Hill, Representative and Mrs. Jed Johnson, Representative and Mrs. Sam Massingale, Representative and Mrs. Phil Ferguson, and Mrs. Paul Walker.

Mrs. Glasgow Entertained.

Capt. and Mrs. John H. Gibbons entertained at a dinner last evening in honor of Mrs. Arthur Graham Glasgow, of London, who is visiting Mrs. John F. Wilkins at her home on Massachusetts avenue for several days.

Society Notes

Donna Matilde de Suvich, wife of the Italian Ambassador, has issued invitations to an "at home" on Thursday, January 14, from 5 to 7.

Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Ambassador of Turkey, was ranking guest at a luncheon given yesterday by Baroness von Below. This is the second in a series of luncheons at which the baroness will entertain this winter.

Other guests were: Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the Minister of South Africa; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Frau von Boetticher, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. Carlos Del Mar, Mrs. Peter Drury, Mrs Parker West and Mrs. Ralph Worthington.

Mme. Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, will not receive today at her usual "at home" due to a slight indisposition.

The Counselor of the Legation of Switzerland and Mme. Freer will entertain at their home in Rodman street next Tuesday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at a cocktail party.

Mr. and Mrs. James Craig Peacock have returned to their home in Irving street, Chevy Chase, from Lake Placid, N. Y. They were accompanied by their son, John Peacock.

Mrs. Warwick Montgomery will entertain at a diner on the evening of Thursday, January 14.

Mrs. Henry Blackiston Wilkins has issued invitations to an "at home" on Saturday afternoon at her residence, 1701 Twenty-second street.

League Ball Lures Many Star Mimics

Screen and Stage Personages Are Presented Among Guests.

By Lynda Reeve

President Roosevelt, Mussolini, Stalin, and Mrs. Simpson, all cleverly done in charcoal, looked down on the merrimakers in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower at the celebrity ball, which was given last night by the Junior League. The proceeds will go to the Children's Hospital.

The huge gold and cream room, with its crystal chandeliers, was lighted by the soft glow of pink lamps. The gold grillwork, fencing off the boxes, served as screens for the colorful cardboard heads of famous stars of Hollywood and the stage, while the panel pillars were decorated with sketches in black and white. Around the dance floor were tables of all shapes and sizes.

The dancers were a motley crowd, half faultlessly attired in formal evening clothes, others in ridiculous costumes and still others combining their dignified attire with one or two touches to transform them into some "celebrity."

At 11:30 o'clock the "Everything Goes" amateur hour was presented, the scene being the radio station of the J. L. O. W. (Junior League of Washington) broadcasting company. Among those who took part, and well, too, were Mr. Charles Barry, Mr. William Jordan, Mrs. W. W. Davies, 3d, Mr. Bishop Hill, Mr. Samuel Beach, Miss Marguerite Hagner, Miss Emily Davis, Mr. John Reyburn 3d, Mrs. William Kerkam, Mr. G. Howland Chase, Miss Mary Cootes and Mr. Merritt Cootes.

Following this, there was excitement and suspense during the judging of costumes by Mrs. John R. Williams, Miss Anne Carter Greene, Col. Edwin Watson and Mr. Samuel Watson. Then came some dances and songs before everyone deserted the ballroom for the presidential dining room, where supper was served.

Among those at the party were Mr. and Mrs. St. Pierre Gaillard. The latter as Melanie, of "Gone With the Wind," had on a quaint Civil War costume of black taffeta and with a cluster of red roses in her curls; Mrs. W. W. Madrull was there as Helen Wills Moody; others there were Senorita Marta Trucco, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, in blue taffeta trimmed with red satin; Dr. Fernando Sacasa, Senorita Rebeca Trucco, in pale pink crepe, Senor Manual Trucco, jr., Miss Kitty DuBois, Miss Elizabeth Haughton in a gay Chinese costume; Miss Maruca Sacasa, Miss Gloria Sacasa, Mr. Decio de Moura, Senor Joes de Lasa, Senorita Elena Aguirre, Senorita Graciela Trucco and Mr. William K. Ryan.

Others were Miss Adrienne Roberts, who as the famous Scotch lassie, was attired in colorful kits; Miss Wylla Magee, wearing neon blue satin; Mr. Charles Ritchie, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Watson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Dr. and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., she as Amelia Earhart; Miss Virginia Flannery, in blue taffeta; Miss Fontaine Flannery, Mr. Charless Helmer, Mr. Robert Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Coolican, the latter giving an excellent impersonation of Katherine Cornell in "Wingless Victory;" Mr. Richard Huested, Miss Betty Beale, as Ina Claire; Mr. William Courtney, Miss Linsey Hay, Mr. John Joyner, Miss Louise Chase Myers, Lieut. John Pugh, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parson Erwin, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Drayton, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Folger, Col. and Mrs. Zenophon Price, Miss Jane Culbertson in a picture frock of blue; Mr. and Mrs. William S. Cullbertson, the latter in gold lame; Mr. Allan Lightner, Miss Sidney Beall, Miss Elizabeth Beall, Mr. Richard Huested, Mr. and Mrs. Neill Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Kauffman, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Parker.

Californian Will Marry Miss Clarissa R. Howe

Dr. and Mrs. Paul E. Howe, of Washington, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Clarissa Rinaker Howe, to Mr. Alan Beerbower, son of Mrs. Lincoln Beerbower, of Pasadena, Calif., and the late Mr. Beerbower. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Miss Howe is a graduate of Goucher College and is now doing graduate work in biochemistry at Columbia University in New York. Mr. Beerbower was graduated from California Institute of Technology and Columbia University.

Ralph Brewsters Return to Carlton

Representative and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, who have resumed their residence at the Carlton, recently returned from a two months' cruise to Central America and an airplane trip from Mexico, where they spent two weeks, to Los Angeles and back to New York.

Mrs. Brewster is the retiring president of the Seventy-fourth Club, composed of wives of members of the Seventy-fourth Congress.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Loves Dental Student Who Can't Marry for at Least Three Years Yet; She Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 21 years old and my boy friend is 29. He is a junior in dental school and I work in a doctor's office. I am the sole support of my mother who is in her fifties and I am the only child, which makes it very hard for me. We have a small apartment, and I have been keeping up expenses myself. When my mother has a job, which she does have occasionally, she helps out.

• • • •

I have been going with this fellow for a year. We are both very much in love and plan to marry in three or four years. His mother is very selfish and doesn't want any of her children to marry. In fact, she became deathly ill, so I hear, when his brother married a few years ago, and carried on much the same way when her daughter left home. His father and mother are separated.

• • • •

My friend wants to wait until he is through school and on his feet professionally before marrying. My mother wants me to marry, but I don't think our marriage would be happy if we lived with either of our mothers. Still, I don't see how I could ever leave my mother, because her whole life is centered around me.

• • • •

This summer I went to New Jersey and met his father. He was rather nice to me. I met his mother in the early fall when she was here to visit him. He says his mother seldom likes girls he is interested in, but if she thinks the relationship isn't serious, then she is as sweet to the girl as she can be.

• • • •

I have given up all my other friends for him, and now I don't know what to do. I love him and I know he loves me, but he feels he is obligated to his mother because she has worked hard to send him to school. He says he will have to support her when he gets on his feet, and that we will have to wait at least three years before marrying. What do you think we should do? He says he thinks it would kill her if he marries now. Do you think I should wait? Please give me some good advice.

DEJECTED.

Marriage Is Unthinkable.

DEAR DEJECTED: If you must support your mother, and this boy's mother must support him until he is through school and on his feet financially, then I say marriage between you is simply out of the question now. And this being so, it is the height of follow for you two to become wholly dependent upon each others society for diversion, consolation and encouragement.

• • • •

It is time enough to get engaged and give up all one's other friends when marriage is in sight. In this instance, I think you and your friend should agree you are not engaged; that such a contract in itself is an impossibility for three years at least; and that each of you is free to go his separate way, socially. And not only free to do so, but actually under obligation to do so, for your own and each other's sake. You might continue to see each other, if you like, providing you limit your dates to one or two a week; and providing you see each other as friends and not as an affianced couple.

• • • •

Remember the Irish saying: "It's time enough to bid the devil good morning when you meet him." That applies to your premature worrying over the mother-in-law threat. Since you won't have to deal with the mother-in-law aspect of marriage until you actually are married or on the eve of marriage, and since marriage is not to be considered for three years at least—so far as this man is concerned—it's borrowing trouble even to think about it.

• • • •

If the man ever does get on his feet, professionally and financially, and you two are still seriously interested in each other, a plan for marriage may be worked out. But you are tilting with windmills in trying to work out a marriage plan now.

M. H.

How to Test Love.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a fellow for six months. He says he loves me very much and would do anything to prove it. Can you tell me any way I could prove his love? He has brought up the subject of marriage once or twice, but marriage for us is simply out of the question right now. Thanking you for any suggestions, I am, sincerely yours,

PEACHES.

• • • •

DEAR PEACHES: Don't be an idiot. There is no "way" in which one can put a man's love to the test. Every day association is test enough. If he is consistently kind, thoughtful, protective, tender and good in his attitude toward you; if he demonstrates in a thousand little ways his wish to make you happy, then you might be said to have proof that he loves you. Nowadays men just don't go around grabbing ladies' gloves from lions' mouths to prove the quality of their devotion.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By

Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Fat Boy or Girl.

Most children, if left to themselves, will present a rather hopeless picture of health protection. Occasionally we will see, however, a motherly lass of 10 years whose chief interest in life seemingly is to make sure that Johnny, aged 8, and Betty, aged 5, are properly bundled up. But it is surprising how few children, even when shivering, will bother to put on extra wraps.

Appetite is another factor that is rarely controlled by the child himself, even though there is a marked tendency to a grotesque type of obesity. The very fat boy or girl is often so unhappy over his or her physical condition one would assume that anything which would help to keep the weight within bounds would be adopted without argument.

Some of those who have studied the problem of the overweight child have come to the conclusion that the tendency to stoutness is an individual characteristic. We cannot overlook the fact, however, that the great majority include those who eat far more than they can possibly use or eliminate. The result is a piling up of a reserve in various parts of the body.

Many of these chubby youngsters will change abruptly about the period of puberty. Sometimes the weight will hang on until the age of 16 or 18, when, within a few months, growth will be observed to be very rapid, with a melting away of excess fat. In such circumstances physicians are likely to attribute the change to increased activity on the part of the pituitary gland.

When the problem is approached from a common sense point of view most of these young persons will co-operate, as many can be made to realize how much extra food they are taking. Not so with parents, who are inclined to minimize the role of food. They are more desirous that the patient be given some glandular extract instead of following a sensible reducing regimen.

The best and safest type of management is a reduction diet and, at the outset, the child must take part in the effort.

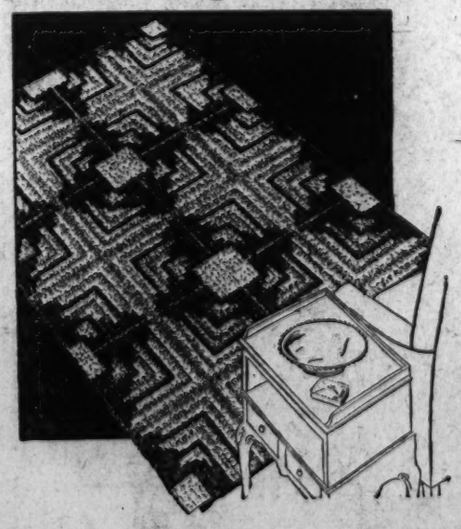
Handsome Rug Is Easily Made Of Useless Rags in New Design



By Alice Brooks.

Pattern 5699.

WHY NOT GIVE your floor a "square deal" by crocheting this striking rug? You'll love doing the simple 6 inch squares in varied colors, and they in turn, when joined, will form many a stunning pattern. Here's a thrifty way to turn useles srags into something worthwhile, though rug wool or candlewicking are also good. And you're sure to want to crochet a matching afghan and pillow too, from this design! In pattern 5699 you will find complete instructions and charts for making the square shown; an illustration of it and of the stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Beret Again Resumes Its Place in Current Mode; New Versions of Old Favorite Adapted to Styles

Here is the 1937 interpretation of the beret, designed by G. Howard Hodge. It is fashioned of snowy white cellophane straw. The black patent leather which binds the crown is repeated in the under-brim ornament which joins the white cord together. For wear now and into the summer.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

YOU CAN'T bury the beret! This smart type of headgear which seems as old as time, is resurrected by stylists each season and presented in some new version adaptable to the current mode.

The beret is one item of clothing which is worn almost from the day of birth to ripe old age—it is sartorially ageless. Tiny school girls and boys don berets each season as the smartest topping for youngsters. Their mother wears a beret with the same pride and nonchalance, styled according to fashion's dictates, and of material to suit the season. Even grandmother may wear a beret, if she is discriminating about the styling and it harmonizes with her costume.

The evolution of the beret seems lost in antiquity. Sleuthing about trying to discover the origin of this most popular of all headgear, no one seemed able to name the first person courageous enough to defy whatever hat conventions were in style at the time and wear what is now known as a beret. Perhaps it was an artist, since this type of head covering is always associated with men of the brush and palette. At any rate, we know that Rembrandt painted with a velvet beret perched at a jaunty angle on his head. This knowledge dates the beret back to the seventeenth century.

Various nationalities have contributed to the styling of the much hailed beret—French, Spanish, Dutch—among others. Although, it is usually associated, as the name indicates, with the French. The all-American version, probably being the tiny pancake-like affair, sponsored this winter by stylists as a swank college hat and adapted by school girls of all ages. One of the best-dressed women in New York has a beret wardrobe and wears this type of hat almost exclusively with suits, knitted frocks and informal afternoon costumes.

Berets are as universally becoming as they are ageless, and, according to modern style dictums, are extremely versatile. Starting out, according to the American plan, as a very casual, informal type of headgear, they have now developed into a hat, styled to meet the most stringent engagement, or to accompany the smartest of outfits. For the oncoming spring season, berets are again tops—fashioned of felt, straw or heavy silk materials; for summer, pique and linen. Varying from the youthful, off-the-face berets posed on one side of the head, to larger halo effects and manipulated affairs which reveal the coiffure at the side, berets, it is predicted, will once more, give all other types of chapeaux keen competition.

Quick Breads Are Suggested To Liven Menu

By Rebekah Blake.

WHY DON'T YOU start the New Year out right and make new breads to relieve your old menus and surprise the family. It will send up three cheers for you when you bring on the bread plate and uncover it to find a new variety of the staff of life.

Quick breads fresh from the oven—can't you smell them? As their fragrance drifts from the kitchen, every member of the family will offer to take part in the "tasting test."

Deviled Ham Rounds.

2-3 cup bottled milk or 1-3 cup evaporated milk and 1-3 cup water
2 cups packed biscuit mixture
4 ounce can deviled ham
4 teaspoons bottled horse-radish
1½ teaspoons Worcestershire or similar sauce
1 teaspoon minced onion
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Melted butter or margarine

Add milk to biscuit mixture to make soft dough. Roll ¼ inch thick; cut with 1½ inch cutter. Mix remaining ingredients except butter; spread on half the rounds. Cut centers from remaining rounds, using a 1 inch cutter; place rims on spread rounds. Roll up rest of dough and repeat process. Brush with butter. Bake in a very hot oven of 40 F. for 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 16.

Sugary Apple Muffins.

2¼ cups sifted cake or pastry flour
3½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
4 tablespoons shortening
½ cup plus 2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 egg, beaten
1 cup bottled milk
1 cup finely chopped, pared, cored apples

Sift flour with baking powder, salt, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon nutmeg. Cream shortening and ½ cup sugar. Stir in egg, then flour mixture alternately with milk. Fold in apples, then fill greased muffin pans almost full. Sprinkle with remaining 2 tablespoons sugar, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon nutmeg mixed. Bake in hot oven of 425 degrees F. for 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 20 2½-inch muffins.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

WE'RE ALL in favor of a "Picture-a-Month" Club. Art in the home can be and should be a never-ending source of observation and discussion, especially if there are children about to soak up the conversation and thus acquire that "background" we're always hearing about.

It's easy and inexpensive to get hold of good prints of really fine pictures that you'd like the family to become familiar with. Framing is expensive and tastes change. This week we've been reading a life of Van Gogh and then we ran across a fairly good reproduction of one of his paintings. It isn't the sort of thing we'd like to spend a lot of money framing (we're not quite sure we like it), but we would like to get it up on a wall with a good light, and decide for ourself about it. Next month maybe we'll be interested in one of the Spanish masters whose work is being destroyed in Madrid.

Almost every home has a glass-topped tray somewhere. A wedding present that has seen better days, no doubt. Off with the handles, on with a coat of paint around the frame, then add a backing of heavy cardboard left open at the top so a picture can be slipped between it and the glass, and there you have as good a temporary picture frame as you'd want. The children can cut out various sizes and colors of background mats and you can get into endless arguments as to which color sets off your transient picture the best.

You'll find that pictures you liked will pall and some you couldn't bear at first will grow in your affections till you will want to get a really good copy of it to have framed permanently. This can be made a game and the children will soon be looking for pictures they like to have the place of honor in the temporary frame. They'll surprise you with references to Rembrandt's concentration of ligh tand pale Laurencin ladies.

Obscure Facts Often Behind Misbehavior

Review of Child Training Necessary to Get at Causes.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

IN TRAINING a child it is often necessary to retrace one's steps before one can go forward again. The bad habits which he develops, such as nail biting, tantrums, muscle twitching or stuttering, are generally symptoms of a deep-seated trouble. Until the cause of these symptoms is found and treated, progress is impossible.

Diseases of the soul are like diseases of the body. No doctor finding that a child was running a temperature would treat him for the fever alone. He would know that fever is merely the body response to infection or organic trouble.

These nervous habits, which many children develop and which appear most often at or during adolescence, are nature's way of combating psychological conflicts and stoppages in the child. Often the causes lie far back in childhood. If neither the parents nor the children can find them, a good mental hygiene clinic may be of service.

Often a cure is effected overnight and seems miraculous, once the underlying cause has been dragged out into the light of day and aired. If the child's own interest can be roused in finding the seat of his trouble, success in overcoming the symptoms may be amazingly rapid and the cure more certain.

On the other hand, the cause may lie very deep and take a long time to find, but in any case there is a certain class of habits that should be treated not for themselves, but as symptoms.

Graciousness First Quality Of 'Great Lady'

By Margaret Wallace.

A YOUNG VISITOR in one of Washington's most fashionable homes is surprised at the democratic manner toward the servants of the hostess of this menage.

"Dear Miss Wallace," she writes, "I am visiting in the home of the mother of one of my college mates. It is a very wealthy and fashionable establishment with large retinue of servants.

"I thought the hostess was a great lady until the other day when her cook brought her 16-year-old daughter to the house to receive a book as a Christmas present from the mistress. We were all in the morning room after breakfast. The hostess instructed the young girl to be brought into the room. She shook hands with her, asked her to sit down, showed her some of her presents, and engaged in a social conversation with her, attempting to draw the house guests into the discussion. I have always been instructed not to get familiar with servants but this "great lady" treated this little colored girl like a friend and explained to us that she had known her since she was a tiny baby. I must say I was disillusioned to see her come down off her dignity like that."

Well-Bred Are Democratic.

Of course this American college girl has the wrong slant on what constitutes a "great lady." It was because this hostess was really a great lady and above all because she was well bred that she treated this young girl visitor, whom she regards as friend, with extreme politeness. It would have been very rude of her not to ask her young visitor to sit down. It is only people who are not sure of their own social position who would hesitate to be cordial to a servant's daughter.

This reminds us of an incident that happened in the home of a great lady of a score of years ago. This woman's former maid came to call on her and the hostess asked her to have some tea, ringing the bell for the butler. Instead of serving the tea in the upstairs living room, where his employer was used to having her afternoon tea, the butler brought in a tea service for one, and told the former maid her tea was ready in the servant's dining room. Quick as a flash the great lady said: "It will be pleasant to have tea there, we will both go down." She led the way ignoring the tea tray the butler had brought to her living room. She served tea to her former maid and drank a cup herself. Incidentally the butler was discharged.

Courtesy to Maids.

QUERY—I have been coming to Washington for five seasons to spend a month at the home of a friend here. One of the maids always acts as my personal maid and I feel very friendly to her. Of course, I always bring her a gift and tip her generously when I leave. When I arrived she came in to see me at once and, of course, I shook hands with her, asked her if she had a pleasant Christmas and inquired about members of her family. My cousin, who was with me, said that I was too familiar. Do you think it was improper to be friendly and polite to a servant who has been friendly and polite to you for a number of years?

ANSWER—Certainly not. It is quite proper to shake hands with such a servant and only courteous to inquire as to her well-being.

Jackets Come to Fore In Latest Costumes

Paris, (AP).—Light jackets are smart with dark dresses here, while plaid jackets are often seen with plain dresses which match the background of the plaid. A very full swagger coat in biege wool, plaided with brown, tops a biege dress with a wide belt of embossed brown leather.

Even gray jersey comes in for interesting contrasts. A gray jersey dress has diagonal rows, in yoke effect, of black fabric roosters with embroidered red combs. Chain-stitching makes flower embroideries for suits and frocks.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 7.

WE MAY GET a bit fed up with the humors and excitements of the holiday season, especially as they fade into the prosaic days of mere midwinter, but I, for one, can't deny that they add new excitement and glamour to the beat I pound daily like a veteran policeman (though with no pension in sight).

ALICE HUGHES.

New York's shopping avenues have never been so wondrous as they have this year. Every store, flushed with commercial hope, put its best windows foremost and laid the luxury on with a silver trowel. The result was slightly more than terrific, and I often wore very dark sun glasses on my tours of Madison and Fifth, so blazing and beautiful were the displays.

As exclusively predicted by practically everyone in the United States, the two months before Christmas were unparalleled "luxury shopping" days, and the results were certainly seen on New Year's Eve. That evening Mrs. John F. Gotham and her daughter, Patricia Gloria Gotham, decided to "put it all on," and they certainly did. Another half-pound of emeralds or something and they would have fallen smack into the gutter. Maybe some of them did, anyway. I didn't linger long enough to look for fallen bodies, but dispersed quietly to the apartment of a friend.

There I sat up until 2:30, and if they ever hear of that in Manchester, N. H., I'm a ruined woman—though the folks may think that all us New York girls are high-steppers and not slaves chained to the leg of a typewriter table. But now those unmistakable thrills of this year's pre-holiday shopping orgy are over. It is just the 8th of January, 1937, and my little old gentleman has a nasty head cold. Has anyone seen my old goloshes? Time to hit the pavement again!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Hardly a day passes but what I am brought up short and startled by the manifold activities of that truly amazing woman, Mrs. James Roosevelt. Honestly, she floors me! On her way to 83, the mother of the President not only lends her name and presence to innumerable charitable functions, but continues to dine out like an old campaigner—and not with a few old cronies, but in large companies! May we all have her ginger, charm and manifold interests—even at 62 . . .

• • • •

Then, too, it is getting pretty definitely settled here that Mme. Lucrezia Bori is going to be elected First Citizeness, or something. That beautiful and gracious lady who retired her soprano from the Metropolitan, only to plunge into money raising to keep the old rabbit warren alive and open, is wined and dined and feted nearly every night, it seems. Well, La Bori is a great gal . . .

As for the Met, it is all smiles, the season having started with a large bang. It is evident that they are going to bear down on Wagner all season—as with Flagstad, Melchior and Co. they have incomparably the finest Wagnerian section in the world . . .

• • • •

Those hundreds of pretty little girls scurrying along Broadway with make-up boxes the other day were chorines on their way to ask for jobs in Mr. George White's "Scandals." Seems that during the show's long tour nearly 20 of his ladies deserted to matrimony, and Georgie needed help in a hurry. And he got it! . . .

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Insecticide

A new insecticide that may overcome the objections of health authorities to lead arsenate has been patented by Louis N. Markwood, an Agriculture chemist.

Nicotine is the poison base of Markwood's insecticide, which, in itself, is nothing new. Nicotine has been used as a fruit spray before, but it was found the nicotine which dissolves readily in water washes off with the first rain.

To eliminate this objection Markwood worked out a formula combining nicotine with peat and other materials that render the nicotine insoluble and will prevent it from being washed away by rain. Last summer Markwood had 400 pounds of the compound made and did a little experimenting on apple trees in Indiana and Washington. But the season was too far advanced and the experiments will have to begin all over again this season.

With Representative Virginia Jenckes having introduced a bill for a civil service court of appeals and the Civil Service Commission seeking authority to conciliate disputes between employes and supervisors prospects for some Congressional action on the matter seem good. An indirect result of the picketing of the Department of Justice, probably to begin next week, will be to add force to the arguments for some arbitrating body.

Bates and Coolidge.

In his "Prison and Beyond," Sanford Bates, United States Director of Prisons, tells how Calvin Coolidge, then Massachusetts Governor, gave him the job of State commissioner of correction.

Bates had been administering the Deer Island Prison when he got a call from Coolidge.

"This is the Governor. They tell me that you know something about the prison business. Come up and see me tomorrow."

The following day Coolidge and Bates discussed who was the best man for the job, both finally agreeing on Charles Davenport, a local lawyer. Davenport refused the job and one morning a few weeks later Bates heard the Governor's nasal voice over the telephone again.

"I'm sending in your name for appointment as commissioner of correction," said Coolidge.

"Why, Governor," stammered Bates, "I don't know what to say."

"Don't say anything," came back the reply.

The writer's bug seems to be having happy hunting at the Department of Justice latest cases of infection being Attorney General Homer Cummings and his special assistant, Carl McFarland, who have collaborated on a book, 'Federal Justice." Particularly interesting is the chapter telling how the Justice Department was born out of a retrenchment-reorganization drive—how many department heads in years to come will be able to write similarly of the great Roosevelt reorganization?

Add to your reorganization rumors that a new department of transportation is to be created, combining railroad, motor and airplane activities.

Anchor Elections.

The Department of Commerce Anchor Club's new president, Clarence W. Weidemann, of Coast and Geodetic, has two hobbies, exotic fish and carving furniture out of dogwood. Few trees are as hard as dogwood and a whole lot easier ways of making furniture could be discovered, but that's just what gives the hobby its tang, explains Weidemann.

He has a whole living room of homemade dogwood furniture—chairs, benches, card tables and innumberable odds and ends. Prize of his collection is a tall lamp stand—to run the wire through the tough wood, Weidemann had to use an augur at both ends. How did he hit upon dogwood furniture making? A friend who owns a girls' camp started him off and still supplies him with about 30 dogwood trees each year.

U.S. to Control Fidelity Bank If It Reopens

Treasury Announcement Reveals Operations 'May' Be Resumed.

Institution Would Be Fully Insured as Loan Association.

Official announcement that the Fidelity Building & Loan Association "may" open its doors again was released yesterday by the Treasury. If the bank is permitted to resume business it will be backed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and become a fully insured member of the Federal Savings and Loan Association.

The statement yesterday by J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, who supervises District banking affairs, was non-committal on the chances of reopening the bank except to say that in the event it is reopened, FHLB will run it. His statement follows:

"Examiners for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board are conducting an examination of the affairs of the Fidelity Building & Loan Association for the purpose of determining the extent to which the facilities of the board may be utilized in effecting a reorganization of the association. Such a reorganization would contemplate the creation of an insured Federal savings and loan association through which, if consummated, there would be made available to the shareholders their proportionate shares of the sound value of the assets of the association.

"The examination now being made consists primarily of a classification of the assets of Fidelity Building & Loan Association in order to determine which of such assets would be acceptable to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board as assets of a new insured Federal savings and loan association and whether a sufficient amount of acceptable assets are available to justify the reorganization of such an association."

Two examiners have been detailed to go over the records of the closed bank, FHLB said yesterday, adding that the quickest possible inspection will require at least a month. Upon completion of the examination a report will be made to the Federal Home Loan Board which will report to the comptroller.

Yesterday's was the first announcement by the Treasury. Although depositors have been demanding information for months as to what is to become of their money.

FHLB has funds to loan at the ratio of $3 for every dollar invested by the local public, if the assets prove sound enough to warrant reopening the bank doors. In the event FHLB determines to reopen the bank, it will come under the jurisdiction of that body, fully insured by the Government, and will no longer be under Treasury control.

There are 1,080 separate loans of a complex nature outstanding, which will require elaborate investigation and checking on such matters as taxes, liens, and mortgages. Asked if two examiners were sufficient to do this job expeditiously, an FHLB spokesman said yesterday that more might be added to the investigation staff later. John Ballard is head of the examiners.

Aid in Locating Lady Fair Asked By Smitten Swain

Armor rusts in museums, lances have molded into dust, but romance lives.

Percy Green did not meet the lady fair as he rode by her castle window. It was at the horse races at Charleston, W. Va.

They met, talked a minute and then were separated by the bustle of the race meeting. He could not find her again. He hadn't learned her name. All he had found out was that she lived in Danville, Va.

Yesterday, Green, who lives on mail route No. 2, in Anacostia, wrote to Danville in search of her. He asked Mayor Harry Wooding to help him find the girl.

Defenderfer Is Named By Cosmopolitan Club

Arthur W. Defenderfer, newly elected president of the Cosmopolitan Club, was installed yesterday at the Carlton Hotel, with Emery Galliher, retiring president, acting as installation officer.

Inducted into office with President Defenderfer were Dr. J. L. B. Murray, vice president; Michael D. Schaeffer, secretary, and James E. Divver, treasurer. The retiring president was presented with a wrist watch on behalf of the club by Ed Rule, and the retiring treasurer, P. A. Davis, received a complete fishing outfit.

Crosby to Seek Federal-Built Capital Stadium

Measure to Be Offered for U. S. to Construct $100,000 Building.

Erection of a $1,000,000 athletic stadium by the Federal Government in Washington will be advocated in this session of Congress, Representative Crosby (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, declared yesterday.

Crosby revealed that he has requested Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal to prepare a bill authorizing construction of the stadium at no cost to the District. He will introduce the bill as soon as he receives it from Seal, Crosby said.

"There is no reason why a stadium should not be built by the Federal Government in the Nation's Capital," said Crosby. "This is the natural place to hold the Army-Navy game and other big events. The stadium also could be used for political conventions."

Cost of the stadium, Crosby related, could be amortized over a 30 or 40-year period with the receipts from events staged in the stadium. He suggested that a committee comprising officers of the Army and Navy and members of the House and Senate serving without pay could manage the stadium.

Crosby said he has no particular site in mind for the stadium, but pointed out that for some time it has been suggested that a stadium be built as a memorial to Theodore Roosevelt in Anacostia Park at the foot of East Capitol street.

Libby Describes Neutrality Plan

A program to keep the United States out of war, with mandatory neutrality as its "cornerstone," was submitted to an audience at the First Congregational Church last night by Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War.

Libby urged enactment by Congress of a neutrality law which would be mandatory, and which, he said, would be "the best contribution to the peace of the world that this Nation can make."

He scorned the policy of the Navy of "protecting our interests, commerce and overseas possessions," and asked for continuation of the Administration's reciprocal trade agreements which, he asserted, were supported 100 per cent by the Nation's peace organizations.

Ziegler to Speak On National Parks

Selecting as his subject "A Trip to the National Parks," Dr. H. W. Ziegler, of New York, will deliver a public lecture in the Government auditorium between the Labor and Interstate Commerce Commission buildings this evening at 8 o'clock.

The lecture, under the auspices of the National Park Service, will be illustrated by the new kodachrome process, in which the color is reproduced directly in the film.

Dr. Ziegler, widely known as a scientist and investigator, has traveled widely in the United States and Europe.

Master Plumbers Elect John Collins President

John Collins has been elected president of the Master Plumbers Association, it was announced last night.

Other officers elected were Maurice Colbert, first vice president; John Beane, second vice president; William E. Miller, treasurer, and Frank Bentley, secretary. Thomas E. Clark, retiring president; Elmon J. Ewing and Joe High were elected to the board of directors.

Briton Here With Bird He Went 14,000 Miles to See Hatched

Capt. C. W. R. Knight, Authority on Falconry, Brings South African Eagle to America; First of Martial Hawk Variety to Visit U. S.

The man who traveled 14,000 miles to watch an egg hatch on a sunbaked crag in a remote section of South Africa brought the grown-up fledgling from that egg, the first martial hawk eagle ever to visit America, to Washington last night.

The man is Capt. C. W. R. Knight, famous British authority on falconry and birds of prey.

The eagle, domiciled in the bathroom of Capt. Knight's room in the Washington Hotel, is named James Steyn. The bird, with a wingspread of 8 feet, is a first cousin of the harpy eagle of South America, so rare that Capt. Knight has heard of only a few of his species in existence.

Capt. Knight, who will be the first 1937 lecturer before the National Geographic Society, brought James Steyn from his improvised perch on a far corner of the bathtub last night, and coaxed him to ruffle the feathers of his neck, just as though he were winging over the veldt country, prepared to swoop down upon some farmer's flock of sheep, and carry away a lamb, as the eagles used to do in story books.

"A Grand Bird."

"He's a grand bird, a splendid companion," said Capt. Knight, as he talked to James Steyn, who, he explained, is known to the Boer farmers as "lammer vanger," or lamb killer.

James Steyn, Capt. Knight explained, is named for Herbert James, ornithologist, and Louis Steyn, owner of the vast South African ranch where the bird was captured.

On his first visit to South Africa, the captain had made inquiries about the rare martial hawk eagles, and it was not until he visited the Steyn farm, 50 miles from the nearest village and several days' journey from Cape Town, that he and his associate, Dr. James, found the nest in which James Steyn was born.

At that time there were no eggs in the nest, but Dr. James advised Capt. Knight that he would watch the nest, and when there was an egg in it, he would cable Capt. Knight in England.

Cable Gives News.

Some time later a laconic cablegram came to Capt. Knight at his home at Park Point, Bessels Green, Levenoaks, England.

"Egg laid," said the wire, and it was signed James, so Capt. Knight packed his grips in great excitement and caught the first boat for Cape Town. When he reached there, he hurried inland and reached the farm of James Steyn.

The egg already had hatched, and James Steyn, as yet unnamed and unclaimed and extremely unwelcome in the sheep country, was being fed by his parents.

With the aid of a native boy, Capt. Knight watched the eaglet for weeks. First the father, smaller than the mother, when her worries about the eaglet's health were done, soared over the farms of Louis Steyn, and brought back parts of deer and lamb.

"I will not kill the two old eagles, but I can't have a third one preying on my flocks," Steyn told Capt. Knight.

Capt. Knight waited his chance, always watching from the crags. Then one day both the father and mother eagle were away, soaring over the hot country, and he advanced on James Steyn.

For the first time the eaglet flew. He spread his adolescent wings, uttered the wild cry of his killer ancestors, and flew proudly.

"He flew a while, and then he fell, exhausted, on the craggy ground. We threw him into a bag and saved him from death at the hands of some farmer, who might not know his value; and here he is."

Got Along Well.

Capt. Knight returned to England and introduced James Steyn to Ramshaw, his famed golden eagle, who now is in Great Britain.

They got along well, and this year the captain brought James Steyn, first of his species, to the United States.

Life for James Steyn is amusing. He misses falconing in the English wildlands, to be sure, but he had his own cabin on the Franconia, and life has its compensations.

Tonight he will be exhibited to the Geographic Society.

And last night he posed for his first American photograph, and looked from the hotel window at the lights of the city as though they were the lights of so many lamb and deer, and Pennsylvania avenue was a veldt, and, were it not for his leash, he would like to soar far and wide—to the moon, if possible!

Youth Killed, Man Injured In Car Crash

Henry Herman, 45, of Philadelphia, manager of the Philadelphia branch of the Tennessee Furniture Co., suffered head injuries, a broken kneecap and multiple cuts and bruises.

Police said Hurley, son of John W. Hurley, jr., who operates the Wollcott House, Colonial Beach, Va., was making a U-turn at the time of the crash.

Going for Water.

Hurley, who was working with a road gang of the Bureau of Public Roads at Abingdon, borrowed the automobile of Charles Costello, of Alexandria, job superintendent, to drive for water for the workers.

Although the gang usually got water at the south end of the Highway Bridge, Hurley drove toward Alexandria and then made the U-turn when the accident occurred.

Hurley suffered a compound skull fracture and internal injuries, which caused instant death, physicians said.

Besides his father, Hurley is survived by a brother, Frank William Hurley, 14, and his grandmother, Mrs. Kate Hurley, all of whom live at the Geranium street address.

Homicide squad detectives and the coroner's office last night were investigating the death of Arthur D. Bowers, 51, of 942 K street northwest, who died of injuries believed to have been suffered when struck by an automobile at Tenth street and New York avenue northwest November 2.

Bowers collapsed in a drug store near his home yesterday afternoon. He was pronounced dead upon the arrival of an Emergency Hospital doctor.

Police records show where a man who refused hospital treatment and failed to make his identity known was struck at the New York avenue intersection November 2. It is thought Bowers was the man.

Three Hurt in Collision.

After the accident, Bowers was treated by Dr. Louis P. Levitt, of the Lindbergh Apartments. Dr. Levitt said yesterday the man suffered several fractured ribs and a shoulder injury. He was confined to Homeopathic Hospital for two weeks when he was stricken with pneumonia and suffered a complete physical collapse, Dr. Levitt said.

Three persons were treated at Emergency Hospital early yesterday following a collision at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue northwest.

Lucille Parks, 32, of Baltimore, Md., suffered lacerations and shock. She was admitted to the hospital. Robert Talley, of 1812 T street northwest, and Lillian Bachan, 20, of 3035 Bladensburg road northeast, each were treated for cuts and bruises.

Starling Foes Claim Victory (For a While)

A crushing victory over the enemy was claimed last night by Clifford R. Lanham, the District's official starling eradicator, 48 hours after the launching of his 1937 offensive.

Sure enough, even as he pointed out with restrained enthusiasm, the trees in Pennsylvania avenue from Fourteenth street eastward to Seventh were rid—at least temporarily—of their burden of birds, and the District Building was practically clear of its unwanted cornice and ledge tenants.

Meanwhile Hoot and Toot, the two live owls in whom Lanham still places confidence as helpful accessories in his anti-starling campaign, moved still higher up.

Tuesday night they were stationed on fourth-floor sills. Wednesday night they were elevated to the fifth floor. Last night they were on the roof, still taking a beating to their vaunted reputations as starling frighteners.

When the feathered pests headed for their District Building roosts at dusk yesterday after spending the daylight hours on their feeding grounds along the Potomac, Hoot and Toot might as well have been a couple of meal worms or a pair of tickets for the wrestling matches for all the good they did in keeping the black bombers from coming down to perfect three-point landings outside the offices of Commissioners Hazen, Allen and Sultan and all the others.

However, when the balloon ballet went into its routine at 6 p. m., with workmen under Lanham parading the sidewalks below at the end of a 50-foot cord tow which was attached a hydrogen-filled rubber sphere, the starlings took immediate leave.

"My!" exclaimed Lanham in admiration. "I wonder why balloons and hand-clapping frighten those rascals when nearly everyelse fails?"

Street Seeks Way to Curb Parole Evil

Welfare Head Moves to Stop Release of Feeble-Minded.

Admitting existence of "a gap in our procedure," Welfare Director Elwood Street said yesterday that a thorough study will be made with the objective of giving proper care to mentally deficient individuals released from penal institutions.

His announcement followed receipt of a letter from Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the District Parole Board, appealing for correction of a condition which may result in dangerous maniacs being set at large in the Capital.

La Roe cited the case of a man who was released from Lorton Reformatory last September upon expiration of his sentence. Records showed, according to La Roe, that the inmate "was in very bad shape, mentally and physically."

Taken to Gallinger Hospital directly from Lorton, the man was found to have a mental age of 8½ years and to be a chronic sufferer from convulsions, ascribed to a head injury in 1929. He should have been placed in an institution for feeble-minded, according to the parole chairman, but because the question of District residence was raised he was released early in November.

On his first day of freedom, La Roe told Street, the man ran amuck with a butcher knife in his landlord's house and a few weeks later allegedly beat his mother and threatened to kill her.

"To deny parole in such cases does not solve the problem," said La Roe (the board denied the man's application for parole in September, 1934). Not only is confinement in a penitentiary of doubtful value in cases of this type, but the release of such men to the community is clearly contrary to the public interest.

"You always have shown sympathy with our difficulties in this matter and I am again addressing you in the hope that something can be worked out that will avoid the danger of turning feeble-minded persons into the community. Cannot a plan be worked out, with the aid of new legislation if necessary, whereby men of this type can be transferred from prison to a suitable institution?"

Commenting on La Roe's letter, copies of which had been given to the press by the sender, Street said he has instructed Paul Kirby, assistant director of the Board of Public Welfare, to look into the situation and determine whether a remedy would entail new legislation or might be reached under existing laws.

KELLEY IS READY TO TURN PRO FOR $8,000 DETROIT OFFER

Bid Too Good To Refuse, Star Says

Lions' Football Offer Changed His Mind About Pro Career.

Yale All-American Now Has Newly Acquired Southern Accent.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 7.—Larry Kelley, Yale's All-American, sporting a Southern accent, rolled into New Orleans tonight and "allowed" as how he probably will turn professional.

The All-America end admitted an $8,000 football-advertising tie-up with the professional Detroit Lions was in the negotiation stage.

"I didn't think I would enter professional football some time ago," said Kelley, "but I've about changed my mind. The proposition is too good to turn down."

He explained the Southern drawl that mystified reporters.

"Well, suh," he drawled, "Ah've been associatin' so much lately with Bucky Bryan, of Tulane, and Mistuh Ace Parkuh, from Duke, that Ah've just about got a Southern accent."

Kelley is en route back to Yale after the East-West charity game at San Francisco.

Family Questions Kelley's Turning Pro

Williamsport, Pa., Jan. 7 (AP).—Reports that Larry Kelley, star end of the Yale football team, had agreed to join the Detroit Lions professional team were questioned by members of his family today.

Larry's mother, Mrs. L. W. Kelley, said, "As far as I know, Larry's attitude toward a pro football career is unchanged."

Kelley is enroute to Yale from San Francisco where he played for the East in the East-West all-star game on New Years Day.

Lions See Kelley As Big Attraction

Beverly Hills, Calif., Jan. 7 (AP).—George Richards, owner of the Detroit Lions, professional football team, said tonight he is negotiating with Larry Kelley, sensational Yale end and one of the most publicized 1936 football players, to play with the Lions next season.

"We hope to land Kelley," said Richards. "He would be a great drawing card, and what is more, he really is a great player."

Griffith Gives Dick Lanahan A Contract

Dick Lanahan, the local boy who failed to make good in two trials with the Washington Ball Club, was given a 1937 contract and a new vote of confidence yesterday by Owner Clark Griffith.

Griffith summoned the former pitching star of the Washington sandlots to his office, presented him with a contract that called for a salary boost in deference to his clever pitching at Chattanooga last year, and talked paternally to the lad for more than an hour.

"I told Lanahan we were counting on him to be the club's best left-hander next season," said Griffith, "and I believe he will be. He has natural talent and his two years with Chattanooga have given him the experience he lacked before.

"He's a slow starter each spring, and we're going to help him this year by sending him to Chattanooga to condition his arm two weeks ahead of the date when the other pitchers report at Orlando. Lanahan has confidence in Lee Jensen, the Chattanooga trainer."

Lanahan, who followed his success with the Eastern High School team by pitching the NRA team to the city championship, has been Chattanooga's outstanding pitcher for two years.

He failed to make a good impression in both spring trials with the Nats but developed rapidly at Chattanooga.

Lanahan retired in August of last season with a sore arm at a time when he had a record of 13 victories and 10 defeats. Three of his defeats were registered when his arm was bothering him on account of overwork.

Censor Fight Lost By Western Union

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 7.—The Western Union, barred from Tropical Park since December 19, today capitulated to the State Racing Commission's censorship rule and Friday will reopen its wires into the race track.

J. Earl Watkins, Miami superintendent, was understood to have conferred with Chairman Joseph R. Stein of the commission, over details of the agreement by which the Western Union returns to Tropical Park.

The rule provides for censorship by a State representative to prevent transmission of prohibited messages, such as those from persons at the track to bookmakers. Bets made in this manner do not affect track odds. Wagering away from the track, however, deprives the State of its percentage from the legalized parimutuels. The Western Union contended messages given it were confidential.

The President Presents His Cup

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

No, that is not an epidemic of toothache that has come into our midst in the past 48 hours. It is simply the tongue-in-cheek reaction of thousands of fans to the result of the Perry-Vines match at Madison Square Garden the other evening, implying that perhaps all was not strictly kosher with the match.

POVICH.

There is, perhaps, reason to believe that the match was "one of those things," otherwise described as the business. Vines, by every method of measurement, figured to beat Perry. He had the benefit of experience on an indoor court, of his familiarity with the lighting and a tennis game of his own that was supposed to be peerless. Yet Perry, the professional tennis novitiate, won.

It certainly got the Vines-Perry tour off to a grand start, all right. It undoubtedly was the business-like way to launch the tour that will carry the pair into 55 cities. It seems logical to assume that the Nation's fans who will pay the freight could not be expected to become excited over a match, the result of which, loomed as a foregone conclusion.

Seemingly, it all adds up to a beautiful piece of business by the tennis boys to insure a maintenance of interest in their exhibitions. After all, they make no bones about tennis being a business with them. At least, that $58,000 gate at the Garden would imply that it is not exactly sports for sport's sake.

But what I started out to say is that, well, I may be the gullible sort, but it has not occurred to me to point the finger of suspicion at the tennis boys who have turned pro and are now turning their talents to profits.

Bill Tilden convinced this department that pro tennis was on the level in relating his own experiences since turning professional. Tilden pointed out that he beat Bruce Barnes in 26 consecutive matches in 20 different cities, yet the tour suffered no loss of interest for that reason.

Professional tennis is apparently a shining and lonesome example of the adage, "It matters not whether you won or lost but how you played the game."

"Why," said Tilden, "tennis fans don't care who wins. All they are interested in is seeing a good match. They want to watch the top performers show the strokes that made 'em famous. If the players put on a good show, then the fan is satisfied.

"After all, tennis is not like football, or baseball. The tennis fan, as a rule, does not have any favorite. He is not particularly partial to one man or the other. The tennis fan gets his kick out of a swell shot masterfully executed and he applauds both players with about equal enthusiasm.

"You don't have to 'frame' a tennis match. It could be done easily enough, I admit. A tennis player, in fact, could 'throw' a match without his opponent being any the wiser, to say nothing of the fans, but it isn't necessary. As long as the tennis pros put on a show, the fans will pay to see them."

And it should be, indeed, easy for a tennis player to "throw" a match. By the same margin, the inches by which the good players can get a ball inside the lines, they could bat it outside deliberately and be utterly safe from suspicion.

It would be a deal easier, for example, than "throwing" a baseball game. In fact, no one player, or even two or three, can guarantee to throw a ball game. It is significant that when the gamblers "fixed" the 1919 World Series, they deemed it advisable to let a half-dozen of the Black Sox into their scheme.

Big league baseball has its own pet story of the futility of the "fix." It is the story that precipitated the banishment of First Baseman Hal Chase and Outfielder McGee, of the Cincinnati Reds, from organized baseball in 1918.

Chase and McGee were betting on the Boston Braves to beat their team in a game at Boston and both, of course, were contriving to "throw" the game. Each had $700 bets up with Boston gamblers through intermediaries.

But despite the efforts of Chase and McGee, the game was still close going into the ninth, with the Braves enjoying only a 1-run lead. In the first of the ninth, McGee tapped a grounder to the infield, the infielder made an error and McGee, to his great disappointment, was safe on first.

Thinking to insure defeat, McGee attempted a lackadaisical steal of second. To his disappointment again, he was safe on a wild throw by the catcher. Chase, next up, was safe when another error by the Braves prevented a force play on McGee at third. Then Ed Rousch, who was not in on the "fix," stepped to the plate, hit a home run and won the ball game for the Reds. There ought to be a moral in this, somewhere.

Post Scripts . . . .

The first "trap" for trapshooting was invented by Charles Portlock, of Boston, Mass., in 1866 . . . Portlock also invented glass balls for targets . . . in the early days live birds were used . . . they were released from traps just as the clay pigeons are shot out now . . . shortage of birds and protests against the sports' inhumanity caused the introduction of artificial birds . . . incidentally, the first English trapshooting club, formed in 1893, was called the Inanimate Bird Shooting Club . . . Hermie Lombardo, Maryland University tackle of a few years back, has just opened his own office as a patent attorney . . . Jack Haas, director of athletics of the Community Center, once umpired a tennis match between Bill Tilden and Vinnie Richards on the roof of the Wanamaker Building in Philadelphia . . . within two years, Gene Sarazen will retire from golf and devote all his time to the business of farming . . . Gene is known as one of the best gentlemen farmers in the country, operating his large place near Bridgeport, Conn., in a very efficient manner . . . the original New York Celtics expect to travel at least 20,000 miles this season to cover their schedule . . . they make all their jumps by automobile . . . even when going to the Pacific Coast . . . it is expected that each player on the team will make about $5,000 during the five months of barnstorming.

West Virginia Beats Hoyas, 41 to 32

Second-Half Spurt Wipes Out Hilltoppers' Lead Piled Up Early.

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 7.—The West Virginia Mountaineers served notice on the balance of the Eastern Conference rivals tonight, in defeating Georgetown, 41 to 32, that the Glenmen will be in the thick of the fight for honors in the 1937 battle.

The Hoyas took an early lead and finished the half with a 21-to-16 margin, the Mountaineers having plenty of chances to score, but not hitting. An 11-point spurt by West Virginia to open the second half before Georgetown tallied again, gave the Mountaineers a decided edge, which they increased twice to 11 points advantage, then finished strong, declining to take chances to score and holding their safe margin.

Cocke and Phares led the winners with brilliant games, especially during the second-half rally, while Murphy and Petroskey tallied 10 points each for the visitors. The game became a little rough near the close, and D'Orazio had to retire from the West Virginia line with an injured hip, but all in all the Mountaineers proved the faster and earned their right to a tie with Carnegie Tech and Pitt at the head of the league.

Georgetown, suffering its second defeat in as many conference starts, having lost to Carnegie Tech Wednesday night, will meet Temple in Philadelphia on the 13th of the month. All chance of its gaining a top flight position appears to have

Foster, Former Nat, in Critical Condition

Eddie Foster, one of Washington's baseball immortals, lay in a serious condition in Casualty Hospital last night as the result of a mysterious accident on the rain-soaked Baltimore boulevard. At an early hour this morning he was still unconscious.

The Nats' great third baseman of 1912-19 was thought by members of his family to have been slugged over the head and robbed by a hitch-hiker he had picked up. Foster often gave lifts to hitch-hikers, they said.

Prince Georges County police found a billfold on him, but no money. Foster is 49.

Police also theorized that the former lightning third sacker had been struck down by a "hit-and-run" driver after crashing through a billboard near Beltsville 20 yards from the road.

See Robbery Motive.

Although Betty Foster, one of Foster's three children, speculated on the possibility of robbery, she said neither she nor her mother definitely knew any more about the accident than the circumstances showed.

Miss Foster said that X-rays which had been taken showed no fracture of the skull and believed that the extent of her father's head injury was a slight concussion of the brain. Foster also received a cracked hip and his right leg appeared seriously injured.

According to the condition of his clothing, Foster had been lying on the side of the road for at least an hour before two truck drivers saw him. They stopped farther down the road and told another man, whose name was not learned, and he, in turn, informed police. Foster's car was not badly damaged.

Foster has operated a welding shop in Georgetown since he left the major leagues. He lives at 1920 North Nelson street, Cherrydale. He has three children and devotes much of his time to teaching a Sunday school Bible class at the Baptist Church near Cherrydale.

Foster is described by Griffith, bench manager of the Nats in 1912, as "the king of all hit-and-run players." The third baseman joined the Washington club in 1912 after a term in the minor leagues and became a regular immediately.

Foster, a fast runner and a fine place hitter, was used in the hit-and-run situation and developed it into a masterly art.

Mt. St. Mary's Scoreless in First 12 Minutes of Walkaway Game.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

George Washington added another link to its lengthening chain of victories last night at Tech High School, where it annihilated little Mount St. Mary's in a dull game, 51 to 25. An audience of less than 1,000 saw the downtown school romp home with its fourth consecutive win of the year.

Held scoreless the first 13 minutes of play, Mount St. Mary's finally tallied on a charity shot just before a long line of Colonial substitutes began wandering in and out of the fray. Coach Bill Reinhart's second stringers were just as good as the regulars, as far as the Mounts were concerned, however, and the Emmitsburg boys left the floor at intermission on the short end of a 23-to-8 count.

Easy for Colonials.

The visitors failed to solve George Washington's air-tight man-for-man defense and were obliged to resort to a long range bombardment for the majority of their points. G. W., on the other hand, had no trouble working the ball in close to the bucket for easy snowbirds.

Ben Goldfaden, with 11 points, and Milt Schonfeld, with 10, were the home team's big guns. Kennedy, a forward, and Don Petrine, center, were outstanding for the Mount, scoring seven points each. Kennedy was particularly effective on an overhand hook shot from the corner, making three beautiful shots in this manner. He didn't make enough to close the gap between the teams, however, and his mates were just as helpless.

Hendrix Upsets Parker in Net Tourney

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 7 (AP).—Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., upset Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., the country's second ranking tennis star, in the quarter-finals of the Miami-Biltmore tennis tournament today.

Pulling out the first set, 8 to 6, Hendrix dropped the second, 1 to 6, but captured the third, 6 to 2, to win the right to meet Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, in the semifinals tomorrow. Grant was none too impressive in a 2—6, 6—3, 6—3 victory over Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami.

In the upper bracket top-ranking Donald Budge, of Oakland, Calif., set down Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles, in two 7-to-5 sets, while Charles R. Harris, of Palm Beach, last year's winner, was disposing of Ricardo Morales, of Havana, 6—2, 6—4. Budge and Harris meet tomorrow.

Forced Into Errors.

Parker had Hendrix, 6 to 2, in that long initial set by staying on the baseline, placing his shots well and forcing his foe into errors. Hendrix rallied then and pulled up to 5-all with brilliant volleys at the net after deep drives to Parker's forehand with considerable top spin on the ball.

In the second set Parker came to the net himself for good volleys. The third found Hendrix again rushing the net at every opportunity. He gained a three-love lead, increased it to 5 to 1, and then dropped the second game after leading 40 to 15. He won the final game with smashing drives which Parker netted.

Mulloy, returning everything Grant sent across, took a 2—0 lead in the first set and never relinquished it. The second stood 3-all when Grant steadied. Making good use of a drop-shot he pulled Mulloy to the net and passed him. The little Atlantan fell to his knees twice on the court made slippery by rain.

In the third set Mulloy led at 2-love, 2—1 and 3—1 before Grant settled down with a chop shot which ran the Miamian from corner to corner.

Budge's forehand was erratic in his first set but his backhand was fine enough to pull him through after Sabin led at 5—4. In the second Sabin took the lead again, at 4—1 and 5—2, but Budge ran out five straight games with cross-court drives that forced Sabin into errors.

Precedent Is Set as Mat Bouts End Sans the Customary Riot

By Bill McCormick.

The new social season was launched with a debut of international importance last night as Henri Piers, the hefty Hollander, came out in the upper crust of wrestling at the first 19[illegible] meeting of the Joe Turner Throwing Circle in the magnificent Turner Mansion of Maui.

Piers flopped in making his bow to the main event class—or rather was flopped by Gino Garibaldi, the perennial spaghetti and bone bender, who scored an upsidedown victory over him after some 30 minutes of grappling, groaning and gurgling.

A distinguished gathering of about 1,500 patrons of the arts attended the soiree. An almost equal number was filled with indignation as Gino pinned Henri to the mat while the hefty Hollander was trying to cut himself a piece of Garibaldi with a very vicious scissors, which he had clamped around the Italian's tummy. Just how it happened will remain a secret to all but Gino and the guy who figures out wrestling routines.

For the most part, the matmen were very tame indeed for the first 10 or 15 minutes, but Garibaldi set the crowd nuts along about midway by kicking poor Henri squarely in the middle of the porterhouse steak, smothered with pork chops, which he ate for dinner. When Gino again kicked Piers—this time in his handsome, stolid Dutch countenance, there was enough squirrel food in the arena to keep all the animals in Lafayette Park pudgy through the winter.

As an extra added attraction, there was no brawl in the ring following the scheduled finish of the fuss, which sent the customers from the arena very bewildered, almost flabbergasted.

In a semifinal scheduled for 30 minutes, John Katan flopped Ed Meske in 22 minutes. Katan accomplished this stupendous feat with a series of slaps to the noggin and a body press.

There was all sorts of indignation

Bred to Run

By Walter Haight

SYNOPSIS.

A colt is foaled on the Ridgeway Farm. He is given much advice by his mother as he learns to munch grass and test his wobbly legs. The Ridgeways are forced to dispose of their horses at auction and the colt is "thrown in for good measure" when his mother, Battleship Girl, is sold to the Wilmore Farm. Dorothy Holbrook's auto has a flat tire near the fence and she sees the colt frolicking. Later she persuades her father to buy him, identifying the colt by a white ring around his leg. Taken to Holbrook Manor, the colt grows like a weed. He and "Miss Dorothy," as he calls his owner, become fast friends. The colt meets Trainer Jensen and is given early racing education. Named "Flat Tire," he starts his racing career and loses his rider at the break. Feels disgraced when not allowed to run next out, but wins his following race. Jensen and his friend, the Cigar Man, win $4,000. Miss Dorothy and her father leave on a world tour. Flat Tire is "out of the money" in two stake races and is sent to the farm for the winter. Jensen, pressed for cash, needs a sure winner. Puts Flat Tire in a claiming race. He wins, but is claimed by "Big Ed" Moreland, tout and gambler. Flat Tire is sold to Arch, a young millionaire, for $5,000. Sets pace as stablemate winds. "Wolf Tooth" makes him run wide next out. Flat Tire proves he is "mudder" and hears he has been chosen to run in Thanksgiving Handicap. He runs, but is beaten by a nose.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN.

Pity the "Poor" Horses.

Hardly had we passed the finish line in that Thanksgiving Handicap when the roar of the crowd turned into a monstrous booing. I was experienced enough to know that the customers were not venting their wrath on me. I knew Jockey Soltz and I had given everything we had and I had no reason to believe that there had been a foul. The crowd was booing because it was of the opinion that I had won. I felt sure that my rival's number had been placed in the winner's slot. The "raspberries" were for the judges. (This was before the camera finish was installed.)

I don't know Jockey Soltz's opinion on the subject, but I'm positive I lost the race—lost it fairly and squarely and with no excuses.

I was too leg weary and sick at heart to even glance at my conqueror as Jockey Soltz was pulling me up after the finish. But as I trotted back to the judges' stand, his jockey brought the mighty stranger along side of me. I looked at him rather sheepishly. He was a good-looking black horse—I judged him to be 5 years old.

"That was a powerful race you just ran, fellow," I said in as strong a voice as my panting breath would allow.

"Whew—but I'm tired," he replied, "you made it mighty tough for me. That was a hard battle."

"You certainly fooled me," I went on. "I thought I had the race locked up. Where did you get all that speed? You must have had a great sire for a father."

"My old man WAS a good one," said my conqueror proudly, "you might of heard of him—Port Hole was his name."

"Gosh," I came back, "Port Hole was MY father, too. Who was your mother?"

"Battleship Girl," he answered.

"Great Day! You're my brother!" I shouted. Then, rather softly I said, "Mother didn't tell my anything about that."

I would have liked to questioned him more but we were at the judges stand by then. A man put a horseshoe of roses around his neck and the photographers swung into action. The booers and the applauders in the crowd were waging about an even battle.

If I didn't win——well, we kept the victory in the family.

My showing in the race (I found out later that the winning time was two-fifths of a second off the track record) proved a blessing to me despite the defeat. It made me rather solid with the Oakmont Stable and kept me out of the claiming races for the time being.

I enjoyed myself. The other horses were good company. The stable help was considerate and efficient, probably because of Owner Arch paid good salaries and demanded the best. Trainer Birthwright was not a horse petter, but he knew his business, was quick to discover injuries or illness among the horses and was well liked.

As was usual with Owner Arch, he divided the stable into two sections at the conclusion of the Bowie meeting, sending one to Florida and the other to California. The winter I was with him, he spent most of his time in Florida, making only one trip to the West Coast for some particularly important stake race.

I had not raced in the winter before. As I said, the Holbrook horses did not race in the winter—nor did all the Oakmont horses. Owner Arch and Trainer Birthwright always had horses on the farm, "freshening up" as they call it. Perhaps half of the horses owned by the stable wintered at the farm.

I liked winter racing—of the brand I did for the Oakmont Stable. We were shipped from Bowie to Hialeah Park. We arrived more than a month before the meeting was to open. After the chilly winds and rains of Bowie, Hialeah seemed like—well, like I believe horse heaven must be.

Our stables were a virtual paradise. From my stall door I could see palms of many varieties growing out of a grass carpet as if they were darts thrown into a green cloth. Bogaindillea vines with purple, yellow and red blooms climbing everywhere. Closely-packed pines forming a giant hedge in the distance and behind which the royal palms swayed as if Nature had hauled up a line of green pennants.

In this setting, I often wondered what the "poor" horses, up in the cold, cold North, were doing.

But there was work to be done even there in nature's wonderland.

Trainer Birthwright arrived a week later. Before his arrival we had been throughly rested. We needed rest too. It had been a long trip despite the fact that I never have been shipped as well—or should I say as expensively.

The trainer did not hurry us. He timed our training to coincide with the opening of the meeting. I was put through the usual practise routine, ranging from exercise at first to driving workouts at a mile later.

I won only one race in Florida—an overnight handicap. I was second twice and finished out of the money, I'd say, four times. I was beaten a nose in one of my starts. I raced over the grass course which circles the lakes just inside the track proper. Due to my good race in the mud up North, Trainer Birthwright decided to give me a chance on the turf.

If I had that race to run again, I probably would have won it. The fact that there were no fences and that there was grass under my hoofs instead of dirt frightened me at first. The race was half over before I got my bearings and closed strongly. For some reason, the trainer did not start me on that course again.

Life was so smooth in the Oakmont Stable that I will not bore you with a detailed account of it. I was given every attention, as I have said. We lived in horse luxury. Don't let me lead you to believe that we were softened. When occasion demanded the whip was laid

Eastern, Central Are Rated Even in Cage Series Opener Today

Western Foe Of Wilson in Other Tilt

By John R. Vosburgh.

Eastern High, gunning for its fourth straight interhigh basketball championship, finds Central High a menacing obstacle today in the opening game of the twentieth interhigh series. The schools collide at 3:15 p. m. in the first half of a double-header at Tech High gymn in which Western High and Woodrow Wilson meet in the second game.

Both have been beaten. Eastern lost to St. John's, Monday, 22-21, and Central has bowed to the Georgetown Freshmen, 29-21. Western is the only unbeaten team to play today. Wilson lost a 17-13 decision to Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, which in turn lost to Western, 23-20, if you're interested in comparative scores.

Western Favored.

Today's double bill marks return of the two-game policy to Tech after an unfortunate experiment which saw the school split their games with the Roosevelt gym for the past two years. Although the Central-Eastern game is clearly a toss-up, Western reigns a clear choice to sink Woodrow Wilson in the latter's initial venture in interhigh sports.

Coach Clifford Moore's Georgetowners have yet to lose a game. They've already wiped up powerful alumni team, Briarly Military Academy, Bethesda-Chevy Chase and George Washington High.

The Western coach also has six men back in uniform who were virtually regulars last year. Coach Carl Heintell of Wilson scoffs at any possibility of his team's doing other than put up a game fight. The Wilson boys are comparative newcomers at the game. Wilson supporters are inclined to scoff in turn, however, in view of Heintell's double feat this year of beating Western in both football and baseball.

Lively Series Seen.

Coach Mike Kelley of Eastern is also in a lugubrious situation. Eastern's great team of last year departed en masse, leaving a squad of comparative newcomers and their 23-game winning streak on Mr. Kelley's hands. Thus far, he has succeeded in molding together a team which has handed Bethesda-Chevy Chase two decisive defeats, swamped St. Alban's and beat St. John's one game.

Central, on the other hand, has lost two of its stars in Capt. Bill Thompson, 6-foot 5-inch center, and 6-foot 2-inch Dewey Peele. Coach Ray, however, has succeeded in getting his outfit highly pitched for today's occasion and the boys are looking ambitiously toward the championship. Most of the Central team believes the result of the Central-Eastern games will decide the championship.

Whatever the result, the game marks the start of the liveliest interhigh series since 'way back in the depression year of 1933.

Bridgewater Routs American U., 31-19

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 7.—Bridgewater College Eagles made good their shots in the last half tonight to open their home season with a 31-19 victory over American University of Washington. The winners held only a 4-point margin, 12-8, at the close of the slow and close-guarding first half.

Dixon, playing his first game for Bridgewater, led with 14 points.

Los Angeles, Jan. 7 (AP).—With University of Iowa alumni seeking his services, Howard Jones has asked the University of Southern California for a new football contract to supplant the one expiring at the end of the 1937 season.

Jones was an Iowa coach eight years before coming to U. S. C. in 1925. He turned out two undefeated teams there. Ossie Solem resigned at Iowa to accept the coaching position at Syracuse University.

There has been more or less subdued dissent over Jones' failure to produce winning teams at U. S. C. in recent years.

"I have asked the university for a contract other than one on a one-year basis," Jones said today. "The entire matter is in the hands of university officials and I prefer not to discuss it."

after the Stanley Pinto—Mayes McLain preliminary, which ended in exactly 1½ minutes. Pinto clamped a scissors around McLain's head, strangling him no end. After the bout, the official Turner physician opined that Mayes had been strangled with an illegal hold, but the referee already had declared Stanley the winner, so woe is Mayes.

In other 30-minute time limit tussles, Ernie Powers and Jack Hader worked to a draw and Hans Kampfer tossed Lord Albert Mills in 12 minutes.

A Cascade of Crowns Is '37 Ring Forecast

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 7.—A year teeming with activity in almost every division and studded with a wholesale toppling of crowned heads, is forecast for boxing in 1937.

There is every reason to believe more clubs will be in operation than since 1930; more fighters performing and more customers keeping the turnstiles clicking in every section where boxing is a major sport.

Otherwise, such keen observers as Nat Fleischer, editor of The Ring, and James J. Johnston, head of boxing at Madison Square Garden, expect to see the year produce the following developments:

1. Dethronement of the present rulers in the heavyweight, lightweight and bantamweight classes with the possibility of upsets in some of the other divisions.

2. John Henry Lewis surrendering his light heavyweight title and blossoming out as a full-fledged heavyweight.

3. Another million-dollar gate.

4. Definite settlement of the long-muddled featherweight situation.

Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock is matched to make the first defense of the title he won from Max Baer against Max Schmeling, who delivered the prize upset of 1936 by knocking out the Brown Bomber Joe Louis.

Million-Dollar Gate.

This match is slated for June and the winner is pretty certain to go against Joe Louis in the fall provided the Negro isn't shunted back to the sidelines by one of the opponents he'll meet in the meantime.

Both Johnston and Fleischer, with Mike Jacobs nodding assent, believe this latter bout will do a million-dollar business, particularly if Schmeling beats Braddock and becomes the first man in history to regain the heavyweight crown.

The other Lewis, John Henry, is growing every day and soon will be too big to campaign as a 175 pounder. Anyway, he has few worlds left to conquer in his division and wants to invade the heavyweight field where the cocoanut picking is better.

Steele, Ross Tops.

Freddie Steele looks like the class of the middleweights right now and promises an active year. Barney Ross, with a dearth of likely adversaries, has a good chance to continue atop the 147-pound throne unless someone like Jimmy McLarnin comes along and bounces him off with an upset.

Most of the sages of caluiflower alley predict Lou Ambers, who has ruled the lightweights for less than six months, will lose his title, possibly to one of the foreign contenders like the Italians, Aldo Spoldi or Enrico Venturi, or Pedro Montanez, the Puerto Rican flash.

Right now there are three fellows billing themselves as No. 1 man among the featherweights. But by next January 1 the experts believe the field will have been narrowed to one undisputed king pin in this class.

Sarron Defeat Seen.

Petey Sarron, of Alexandria, Va., is the recognized N. B. A. champion. Henry Armstrong is the title holder in California, and Mike Belloise in New York State. Fleischer is one who believes that when the smoke has cleared away, little Armstrong will be the one on his feet.

Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, has twice trimmed Bantamweight Champion Sixto Escobar in over-the-weight matches and there are many who believe he will repeat when they meet with the title at stake.

There is a divergence of opinion on whether Benny Lynch or Small Montana is the flyweight champion, but the boys should settle the question when they meet later this month.

C. U. Varsity Beats Alumni 'Ringers'

Using a couple of ringers later identified as John (Dribble) Jankowski, and Tom (Just Call Me Ace) Whelan, a quintet of Catholic University alumni last night extended the Cardinal varsity before bowing, 39-37 in a nip and tuck battle.

Whelan, refusing to count those shots not made beyond midcourt, rang up 6 points for the alumni. Bernie Lieb led the veterans with five field goals. "Irish" Carroll, incidentally, clinched the decision for the varsity with a neat 2-pointer in the last few seconds of play.

Grid Losses Hurt Harvard Athletics

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 7.—Fear that Harvard's "athletics for all" program was threatened by decreasing football gate receipts today prompted the student council to draw up a resolution calling for a thorough study of the university's extensive sports program.

During the 1934-35 sports season, the Harvard Athletic Association reported gate receipts totaling $554,150.05 and $520,173.82 for the 12 months ended on June 30, 1936. During 1934-35, it spent $81,639.99 to support minor sports and the physical education department but it was able to reduce that budget to $57,529.53 during 1935-36 because the university assumed the expense of compulsory physical education for freshmen, approximately $24,000, an expense which had been borne previously by the athletic association.

Lombardi Is Off The Primrose Path

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 7 (AP).—Bulky Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati Reds catcher, sometimes National League "bad boy" and annual baseball holdout, renounced the later roles today.

To prove he's serious, he left immediately for Florida to begin training for the 1937 season.

He has resolved, he said:

To sign a contract when received;

To cut out the monkey business;

To lay off the high life and the night life;

To train harder than ever before.

There's a reason, of course.

"I want to be the leading catcher in the National League."

On his 1936 showing, the big Italian stands a fair chance. His .3333 batting average was second best among the catchers and seventh among all regulars.

Lombardi explained his early departure with:

"I want to duck all the parties my friends want to give me. All they do is put on a lot of excess poundage."

Giants Mailed Contracts With Increases in Pay

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Horace Stoneham, New York Giants' president, today mailed 1937 baseball contracts to his players and announced "a general increase in pay."

The only players signed are Manager Bill Terry and Rookie Pitcher Cliff Melton. Terry has a long-term contract, and Melton, who won 23 and lost 14 for Baltimore last year, came in for a talk with Terry and put his name on the line.

Maryland, Card Boxers Open Tomorrow

Terps Face Terrors, and Catholics to Meet N. C. State in Debuts.

Both Maryland and Catholic University will be distinct favorites tomorrow night, when they step up on the resin-covered scaffolds to inaugurate a brand-new season of fisticuffing. The Terps entertain an old and formidable up-State foe, Western Maryland, at College Park, while in nearby Brookland, North Carolina State will be the cause of disturbance.

With only one standout punch artist in its lineup, Tony Ortenzi, light-heavyweight, Western Maryland does figure to make a strong impression on its host, which will send a well-balanced team to the front. All of the Terrors have had some experience, however, and they'll all be trying to land a kayo punch.

O'Leair in Good Bout.

Coach Charley Havens probably will use the following team: 115 pounds, Al Goldberg; 125, Paul Brengle; 135, Harold Martin; 145, Bill Bander; 155, Bill Speigle 165 Clint Walker; 175, Ortenzi; and heavyweight, Joe O'Leair, a fighting Irisher.

O'Leair's opponent will be Ed Engell, a fine looking prospect Heine Miller is working overtime to develop. Both are tough, durable gridmen and their boxing is reported to be of a similar caliber. This bout may easily be the evening's feature.

North Carolina State will be severly handicapped if Capt. Alex Regdon light heavyweight, is unable to appear. Regdon has been bothered by a recurrent football injury and may not be able to fight. Mac Howerton, a senior in the classrom but freshman on the varsity ring squad, will handle the assignment in the event of Regdon's absence.

This will be a good break for Coach Eddie La Fond, who is anxious to get a line on one of his new men at this weight and was a little leery about putting them in with an experienced fighter. Ed Dunne, who has been very impressive in workouts, probably will get the call over Johnny Caravella, local boy who was making good in the division.

Fred Rogers has drawn the heavyweight assignment, beating out Leo Katalinas, who was originally scheduled to do the battling in this class.

Gallaudet Cagers, Wrestlers to Play

Gallaudet's basket ball and wrestling teams will be busy over the week-end, the courtmen meeting Maryland State Normal and an alumni aggregation, while the mat men seek their second straight victory at Johns Hopkins.

Coach Wally Krug will take the dribblers to Towson tomorrow night for the first game of the week, and has high hopes of upsetting the future schoolmasters. Saturday's game with the alumni will be staged at Kendall Green. Hoffmeister and Rice, forwards; Burnett, center; Babb and Drake, guards, will appear in the starting line-up.

Victorious over Baltimore Poly, 20-18, in their initial test of the season, the wrestlers have high hopes of taking Hopkins into camp Saturday. The same men who triumphed over Poly will represent the Blue.

Central to Compete In Richmond Play

Central High will probably play John Marshall High of Richmond tomorrow when it competes in the annual University of Richmond basketball carnival in Richmond. Coach Jack Ray of Central expressed the belief that the city champions of the Virginia metropolis would be his team's opposition.

The game will be the last on the evening program, having been accorded the place of honor. Coming close on the heels of today's interhigh game with Eastern, the Richmond fray will be an even sharper test for the Mount Pleasanters.

Players making the trip will probably be Captain Bill Vermillion, Ralph Matera, Sam Fox, Hymie Goldblat, Felix Silverstein, Bernie Understein, Charlie Clark, Bernie Applebaum, Bill Heygster and Archie Penago.

Illinois Starts Drive To Get Athletes Gratis

Chicago, Jan. 7 (U.P.).—The University of Illinois dropped its sit-down policy today and announced a drive for athletes in strict accordance with Big Ten regulations.

Major point in the plan was an intensive campaign to advertise the school to prospective students through an alumni network over the Nation.

Ruark Beats Statland, Widens Billiards Lead

Gene Ruark, the defending champion, widened his lead in the District billiard three-cushion amateur billiard championships last night at the Royal Academy by turning back Danny Statland, 25 to 29, in a 57-inning, hard-fought contest. It was the champ's sixth win in seven starts, with a capacity crowd looking on.

Evy Crouch and Johnnie Dodge are the second and third place competitors, and will meet tonight in the final match. In the preliminary last night Jerry Crowder repulsed Jerry Hayer, 25 to 24, in 66 innings.

Rose Bowlers Win, Advance In League

Georgetown, Kann's Co. Win; Lemerise Sets High Game Mark.

Rose Liquor, paced by Johnny Anderson, gained undisputed possession of second place in the District League last night, taking Occidental Restaurant over the hurdles for two games. Anderson, making a bid for high individual average featured the Liquormen's victory with a 147 game and 399 set. The defeat shoved Occidental down into third place.

Reds Megaw, transferred his affections from the Heurich Brewers to Georgetown, and in his debut rolled a 371 set in Georgetown's odd-game decision over Lucky Strike, Arcadia, rolling at a 1756 clip, downed Convention Hall three games.

Brownie Lemerise established a new high season record game for the Daylight League at Convention Hall, rolling a 159 game to give the first place Daily News team an odd-game victory over City Post-office. Anheuser-Busch also gained the record-breaking limelight with a season record game of 602.

S. Kann's Sons Co. moved into first place in the Department Store League with an odd-game decision over Palais Royal while the ninth place Guy Curran five upset Woodward & Lothrop three, forcing the latter team to relinquish the lead. Credit Bureau dropped two to Lansburghs, and Hecht Co. swamped Wm. Hahn & Co.

The Pinnettes continued to hold sway in the Ladies Procurement League, whitewashing the Rollettes. . . . Marie Anderson shot 112 for top game. . . . Starlight Cleaners remained atop the National Capital League with two victories over Daily News. . . . Cavannaugh's 148 and Carroll Daley's 386 were tops in the War Department League. . . . Sergt. Jasper Post replaces Nash Post for the leadership of the American Legion League.

Heurich Five Plays Another N. Y. Team

Russell, who stands 6 feet 1, and weighs 205 pounds, has been playing pro basketball for the last 17 years, having been with the Washington team of the old American League for a short team. He also played with the Original Celtics and Cleveland Rosenblooms.

Manager Bob MacDonald, in booking the Presidents, stated he was bringing a team to the District comparable to the Renaissance and Original New York Celtics, both of which have been defeated by the Brewers in thrilling games. The Renaissance ebony flashes lost to the Brewers a few weeks ago, and the Celtics were vanquished last Sunday.

Heurich's stock rose considerably by virtue of its victories over these two famous quintets. The Brewers also have won from the Brooklyn Dux, which was beaten recently, 29-21 by the Presidents. Last Wednesday the Presidents took a one-point decision from Renaissance.

Sterling and Senate Beer will clash in a preliminary battle at 2:30, the pro game going on at 3:30.

Coffey Sales pro team, boasting such stars as Bozey Berger, Buckey and Bernie Buscher, Vic Willis and Jim Forney will meet the Kendrick team, of Alexandria, Saturday night at George Washington High School's gym. The Coffey boys are negotiating for a game with the Heurich Brewers, and hope to land a date the latter part of this month.

Bred to Run

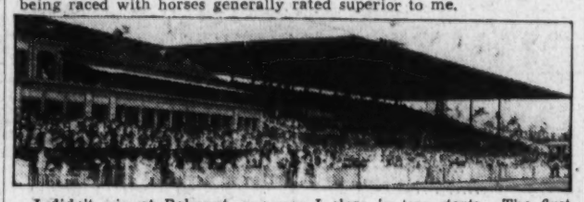
on us by rich Owner Arch's jockeys with the same vigor that the boys riding for the poorest of owners might slash a horse. Our oats possibly was a little cleaner than some I have eaten since, but we got no more of it than enough for a healthy diet. The straw in our stalls was the same as in most other stables.

As is the case with some of the best periods of life, time marched on all too fast. Spring came—Bowie, Havre de Grace and Pimlico felt our hoof beats. Summer ousted Spring—and it was on to Belmont Park and Saratoga. Fall—and we traveled the Maryland circuit again.

"Something always seems to happen at Bowie," I said to myself as Nick, one of the stable boys was leading me down the runway from the horse car. Incidentally, bales of hay and straw generally are piled on either side of the runway when horses are unloaded. These give a "stable" appearance and tend to keep the horses from becoming frightened and also protect them should they bolt or lurch into the side of the runway.

Yes, I had a feeling that something would happen at Bowie. Our stable had been enjoying success. Our horses were high in the standing of money winners for the year. "The Preakness and the Kentucky Derby had escaped us. I learned that Owner Arch had his heart set on winning one, or both of those great classics. But they had continually missed his grasp.

I had a fair record to date—it was in my four-year-old season. Due to the large number of horses we had in training, I was started only five times in the spring. I won once and was third twice. I did not feel so bad after I heard Trainer Birthwright tell Owner Arch one day, "We've been running this one over his head." This meant that I was being raced with horses generally rated superior to me.



I didn't win at Belmont, nor was I close in two starts. The first time I was sent to the post to run six furlongs on the straightaway course. The absence of turns just didn't fit in with my conception of a race track. The next time out I was in a mile and a furlong race and Owner Arch and the others agreed that "it must have been too far for Flat Tire." The truth was that I "was made too much use of" at the beginning (track vernacular for being rushed off my feet soon after the start).

Let me explain here that few, if any horses, have more than one real burst of speed which accounts for only a small number of horses "coming again" or, in other words, coming with a rush at the finish after they have dropped back. A horse that is "hoopdedooed," as the jockeys call gaining a forward position under pressure, in the early part of the race is unlikely to have more than even speed thereafter during that race. It works the other way. A horse restrained (held back), providing the jockey does it in a manner which does not choke his mount, during the early running, will have his burst of speed for the closing stages. Some horses, especially sprinters, are hustled along at top speed throughout the running. The short distance makes this possible. Other horses, in distance races, are let out gradually, throughout the running or slightly rated, meaning they are held back only lightly.

Trainers, of course, study their horses and the records or charts. They find the style of race that suits a particular horse. They instruct the jockey how to use the "burst of speed." But, as I said, only on rare occasions does a horse stage a comeback when he has "dropped out of it," as the horsemen say.

This situation often accounts for the "form reversals" of horses. A horse ridden in the manner that does not suit him, probably will not win. However, if he gets the kind of handling that serves him best, he may win.

Unscrupulous horsemen and jockeys, by juggling the styles of handling, can make the horse a "live one" (one sent out to win) or a "stiff" (one sent out not to win). Of course, the racing officials are always on the watch.

But, as I was saying, I had a feeling that something would happen at Bowie.

To Be Continued.

Dear Al:

The authorities here have had Jockey Sammy Renick on the carpet for his poor ride on Wise Will, the gelding. The stewards also have called in the trainer of the horse. The judges have been known to overrule the camera at this meeting. Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, the veteran trainer, is an ardent movie fan. He knows the names of all the stars and has met most of them while at Santa Anita. Jockey Bobby Merritt has run into bad days. He has not been successful in getting mounts. Of course, he has to agent for himself under Florida rules. Roman Soldier is the first horse to be officially named for the Joe McLennan Memorial Handicap to be contested at Hialeah Park. Roman Soldier cleaned up in Maryland last fall, being the first horse to win the Free State's four big stakes. Owner Elwood Sachsenmaier, owner of Roman Soldier, refused a recent offer of $60,000 for the horse. The truth is that he tried to sell Roman Soldier about eight months ago for $15,000. I'll take 30 cents and one of last week's street car passes for Clocker Mike—if I'm unfortunate enough to find him.

BILL.

First race—I'm going to string along with El Bandido in the day's opener. This one works like the wind and promises to do a lot of running. Kawagoe looms as a contender. He will have Anderson to do the booting. Lum Joy and Johnny Cake are possibilities.

Second race—Perhaps I'm sticking my chin out for somebody's left, but I'm going to take Stool Pigeon here. The once-popular half-miler can turn on the gas in the right spot. This company appears cheap enough. Second Guess and Peerless Pal are best on the cold figures.

Third race—Legsure and Dickery Dock probably will battle it out for the chief award in this field. Both are fit as those recent races. Whittle, one that failed us, remains a threat.

Fourth race—Goldspun is a long-shot with a chance. He has been whispered to me as a good maiden. Ubald G. and Ballot Boy will be ready if the top one makes mistakes.

Fifth race—Genie Palatine should have things her own way in this. Kurtsinger will do the riding, and I anticipate a win. Jinnee is in light enough for a chance. Stocks for the show end.

Sixth race—Bijuro seems well placed in this mile test. If Kurtsinger can get him to that first turn in time, they will be paying off on this pair. Pepper Patch and Count Rae are formidable.

Seventh race—Maid of Arches and She Knows get the call over Spartan Lady in this event for fillies and mares. The first named has a slight edge.

Eighth race—Just Buck needs only to run back to that last winning effort to score in this field. Ceylon for the place and Maddening to show. The last named is going to crack down with a bang soon.

Best bet—Genie Palatine.

Gonzaga High Defeats Hyattsville Five, 37-18

Gonzaga High opened its basketball season against Hyattsville High and chalked up a 37-18 victory over the Marylanders in the Gonzaga gym. Walsh, with eight points, led the scoring for the Mitchell-coached five.

Holder of a 13-9 lead at half time, the Jesuit team coasted through the third period before giving way to the subs in the final quarter.

Higher Cloud Wins at Tropical

Colt Outruns Vote Boy To Win

Returns $17.20 Mutuel; Disqualify Princess Bull in Fourth.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 1.—As usual, Mrs. Emil Denemark was represented by the winner of the feature race here this afternoon. This time it was the 4-year-old colt, Higher Cloud, that carried the familiar canary and blue racing livery to victory in the Marlin Handicap for Class B sprinters. The colt, away from the races since last May, caught T. F. Swords' pace-making Vote Boy in the last furlong and won by a half-length. R. Marmorstein's heavily backed Ridge Mor, under poor handling, was third, six lengths away.

Higher Cloud, contrary to the general rule on the Denemark colorbearers, received only a light play. He returned $17.20 for $2 and covered the 6 furlongs in 1:11 3-5 over a track that remained fast despite intermittent showers that subsided in favor of Old Sol after the first few events had been run.

Ridge Mor was running second along the back stretch when Frank Horn suddenly took back several lengths at the far turn, as if in trouble. The Morvich 6-year-old improved his position in the home lane, but his cause was lost by that time.

After knocking at the door on numerous occasions, Marinella broke out of the maiden ranks in the first race on today's card, a five and one-half-furlong test for maiden 3-year-old fillies.

Princess Bull Disqualified.

Causing a mild surprise by carrying her high speed the full six furlongs, the John P. Grier filly Lotofus easily annexed the third purse under a capable ride by apprentice Schraudenbach.

The first disqualification of the meeting developed with the running of the fourth race. Princess Bull, a long shot making her first local appearance, finished a head in front of the favored Tallyrand but the stewards, after questioning the riders of Princess Bull and Flickering, took the winner's number down. Apprentice Schraudenbach, who was aiming for a double, allowed Princess Bull to come over and interfere with Flickering while taking the lead from that filly at the top of the stretch. Tallyrand just failed to catch Princess Bull, but after the disqualification his backers collected $5.30 for $2. Touche was moved into the place and Flickering into the show.

Paul Bieber's Dunade, a fast closing third behind Lucky Jean and Owaller in his last endeavor, easily outfooted eight other shifty 3-year-olds in the mile of the sixth contest. Nick Wall was astride the Dunlin colt, which led Eastport across the line by three lengths, at 7 to 1. Merrymood was headed out of the place, which the highly fancied Uneasy raced fifth throughout the running. Dunade romped to the front early and coasted along with nothing to fear. Eastport caught Merrymood at the wire.

Phil Bieber's silks were borne first home for the second race in a row when Prince Dean, at $11.70 for $2, easily took the seventh purse. Nick Wall also scored a double in piloting the gelding across the wire three lengths in the van. American Prince was second, a head better than Live One. Tutticurio made the running into the back stretch, where Prince Dean went to the front and held his field safe the remainder of the mile and a sixteenth distance.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE DUKE, $23.60, $10.80, $7.10; OVER YONDER, $13.80, $9.90; GOOD DAME, $6.00.

LITTLE DUKE, well ridden, moved up and into lead entering stretch and was drawing away at end. OVER YONDER finished with a good burst of speed on inside. GOOD DAME had plenty of early foot, but weakened in last sixteenth. OUR CREST had no mishap. REGULA BADDUN had speed for three furlongs then quit.

DAILY DOUBLE, FIRST AND SECOND RACES, PAID $49.40.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:08. Winner, Mrs. G. C. Winfrey's blk. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOTOFUS, $11.00, $6.10, $5.20; SHEPHERD BOY, $14.80, $9.90; DIXIE PRINCESS, $11.60.

LOTOFUS, showing her usual early speed, ran into lead soon after the start and rated along, won nicely in hand. SHEPHERD BOY handled his weight well, came with a rush on inside in final furlong. DIXIE PRINCESS ran a good race. BROTHER NEWT was in close on the outside in early part and finished fast. JUSTA PLAY ran a fair race. LIGHTHEELED was allowed to go very wide on stretch turn. ZEVANAID stopped badly.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, SLOW.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:39. Winner, Maxwell Howard's ch. c. †Disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TALLEYRAND, $5.30, $3.70, $2.80; TOUCHE, $5.20, $3.50; FLICKERING, $5.30.

PRINCESS BULL liked the going, followed pace to the top of the stretch, where she moved into lead, but in doing so interfered with FLICKERING for which she was disqualified for foul. TALLEYRAND broke good, was kept on the outside to stretch, where she closed gamely. TOUCHE was unable to keep up in early part but finished gamely. FLICKERING was running gamely when she was bothered and knocked back. LADY DAY had no mishap. ODDESA BOY never a factor.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800 added. The Marlin Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward in Class C. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 4:09. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's b. c. (4), by High Cloud—Miss Tony. Trained by B. S. Michell. Value to winner, $665; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:11 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGHER CLOUD, $17.20, $6.70, $4.20; VOTE BOY, $5.60, $3.60; RIDGE MOR, $2.80.

HIGHER CLOUD, hard ridden around the turn, finally caught VOTE BOY at the furlong pole and, taking command, won going away. VOTE BOY, showing splendid speed, set a sizzling pace and held on well. RIDGE MOR was miserably ridden. He was on the inside and was allowed to drop far out of it going into far turn, made up some ground in run through stretch. FINISHER made a game effort.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000. The Hernando. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:36. Winner, P. Bieber's br. c. (3), by Dunlin—Parade. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $175; third, $85; fourth, $40. Time, 1:39 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUNADE, $16.10, $10.10, $6.70; EASTPORT, $23.80, $11.00; MERRYMOOD, $4.40.

DUNADE, away fast, was sent to the front going into first turn, opened a winning lead, saved ground and drew away easily. EASTPORT worked his way up and was second in last stride. MERRYMOOD was rated along, but tired suddenly. TOP RADIO closed a good gap. UNEASY was hard ridden.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:02. Winner, P. Bieber's ch. c. (5), by Porchilla—Dorothy Dean. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE DEAN, $11.70, $4.80, $3.30; AMERICAN PRINCE, $4.80, $3.00; LIVE ONE, $2.90.

PRINCE DEAN got away fast, was eased back off the early pace, was sent to the front at half mile pole, drew away and won nicely in hand. AMERICAN PRINCE came through on inside in stretch and held on well. LIVE ONE kept out in the firm going and had no excuse. TUTTICURIO had speed for half a mile then quit. SYNOD was outrun.

EIGHTH RACE—Coral Way course (140 feet less than 1¼ miles). Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward which have not won since December 12. Start good. Won driving; place same. Bank Clearings Hold Levels In Short Week

Total for 5 Days Only 2.7% Below Six Days a Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 7.—Bank clearings in the opening week of the new year showed no let-down from the heavy settlements during the final month of 1936.

The total for 22 leading cities, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet for the five-day week ended January 6, was $6,538,195,000, against $6,720,840,000 in the full week of 1936, a loss of 2.7 per cent.

This contrasted with an increase of 16.7 per cent in the same comparison for the period preceding, which was for five days in both years.

At New York City the turnover amounted to $4,155,099,000, a falling off of 6.2 per cent from the $4,427,977,000 in the similar 1936 period. Outside centers aggregated $2,383,096,000, which was 3.9 per cent higher than the $2,292,863,000 in the corresponding week a year ago.

Clearings rose $700,990,000 above last week's total. Between the two comparative weeks in 1936 there was an increase of $1,717,034,000.

(In thousands of dollars.)

Washington Clearings.

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $24,981,057.77 for the week ended January 6, which compares with $23,279,275.88 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 7.31 per cent. Compared with a total of $18,767,009.17 for the previous week, clearings increased 33.1 per cent.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 7 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—A few scattered lots of domestic wools were moved today in the Boston market at strong prices.

Buyers, however, were taking domestic wools at current quotations only when needs were urgent. Purchases were mostly of the finer grades of territory wools.

French combing ⅓-blood territory wool brought around $1.05 scoured basis. Fine territory wools in original bags were sold at around 1.05@1.08 scoured basis for lots running short to average French combing lengths.

World Demand Lifts Wheat 2¼c a Bushel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Brisk buying rushes brought about 2¼ cents a bushel maximum upturn of Chicago wheat prices today. Reports of sudden general renewal of commercial demand for wheat to be shipped to importing countries was the chief stimulating factor.

At the close, wheat in Chicago was 1⅛@1⅞ above yesterday's finish, May 133½@133⅝, July 117⅛@117¼, September 114@114⅛; corn, 1@1¾ up, May, new, 110⅜@110½, July, new, 106¼@106⅝, September 102¼@102⅝; oats ¾@1⅛ advanced, May 53⅜@53½, and rye showing 1 to 1¼ gain, May 114. In provisions the results were bulges varying from 12 to 20 cents.

Firemen's Insurance Officers Re-elected

All officers of Firemen's Insurance Co. of Washington and Georgetown were re-elected at the organization meeting of the board of directors this week, and V. Manning Hoffman was named an additional assistant secretary. Officers are William M. Hoffman, president; Albert W. Howard, vice president and secretary; Edward C. Baltz., vice president; James N. Fitzpatrick, jr., assistant secretary.

Directors also declared a 50 per cent stock dividend giving one share of stock to every two shares held. This will be payable March 3, date marking the hundredth anniversary of the company. Books will be closed February 15 to March 3, both dates inclusive.

Stocks Advance Vigorously With Labor Peace in Sight

Reports of Federal Conciliators and Study of President's Message Spur Broad Upturn; Bonds Move Higher.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 7.— Stocks leaped into one of the broadest advances of the past several weeks in today's market with numerous issues posting gains of fractions to 5 or more points.

Reports of "encouraging" progress by Federal conciliators in attempts to open negotiations between General Motors officials and the unions for settlement of the current strike were credited with having to buoy buying sentiment.

In addition overnight study of President Roosevelt's message to Congress apparently, through its moderate tone, brought some reassurance to the financial district. Optimism was engendered, it was said, not especially by the statements contained in the address but by the omissions.

It was especially noted the utilities were not singled out by the Chief Executive, and power and light stocks enjoyed one of their best days in many months.

Considerable short covering was reported in commission houses and some brokers thought the technical position of the market as a whole—the year-end sell-off had been quite substantial—may have had something to do with the upturn.

The session was one of speed from the start, with the ticker tape frequently lagging behind dealings on the floor. Light selling in the final hour was well absorbed and the list closed at a racing pace around its best levels.

Motors Take Lead.

Motors stepped into leadership with the sound of the opening gong and maintained their supremacy throughout. But steels did trojan duty, along with selected rails, mail orders, farm implements, aircrafts and a wide assortment of miscellaneous issues.

Transfers totaled 3,067,670 shares, compared with 1,921,810 yesterday. The aggregate was the largest since November 17. The Associate Press average of 60 stocks retained a gain of 1.2 points, at 71.1.

Although late developments in the motor-manufacturing center indicated the labor deadlock was still unbroken, and other strikes had been called in accessory plants with thousands more employes joining the idle, traders seemed to feel the movement to end the controversy would be successful.

The steels, largely dependent upon motor makers to keep up the current high mill operation, were quick to follow the automobile group.

Record December sales for Sears, Roebuck spurred merchandising shares. Reports of expanding demand for farm machinery aided the implement division. Many specialties responded to visions of extra dividends. The coppers and oils did better, probably out of sympathy with the rest of the market, as there was no especial news to motivate these departments.

Conspicuous on the forward thrust were Chrysler at 119⅛, General Motors, 66¾; U. S. Steel, 79; Bethlehem, 76⅜; Yellow Truck, 24⅛; Pure Oil, 22½; American Power & Light, 15; American Telephone, 186½; Hercules Powder, 158¾; N. Y. Central, 42⅝; Southern Pacific, 46⅞; Consolidated Edison, 45¾; Electric Power & Light, 25½; North American, 32⅝; American Locomotive, 47¼; Anaconda, 54⅝; Kennecott, 62¼; Loew's, 67⅛; J. I. Commodities joined the uprising. Wheat at Chicago was ahead 1⅛ to 1⅞ cents a bushel, and corn was 1 to 1¾ improved. Cotton was off 5 cents to up 80 cents a bale. Foreign currencies were narrow in terms of the dollar.

Rail Bonds Gain.

Buying enthusiasm spilled over into the bond market today and lower rated rail loans were whipped higher in company with listed stocks where the movement started.

Most trading and investment circles agreed the partial lifting of apprehension that a protracted tie-up of the automobile industry was in the offing, lay at the bottom of the drive.

Trading reached its highest pitch since early in 1936, transactions for all bonds aggregating $21,833,000, face value, compared with $15,172,000 Wednesday and the heaviest volume since February 11 last, when $22,080,000 was turned over.

By far the bulk of activity centered in the domestic corporate list where a substantial number of low and medium priced issues went to new high ground for 1936-1937. St. Paul 5s of 1975 jumped 3⅜ points to 34½, Frisco 4½s added 1⅛ at 31⅛, Rock Island general 4s moved up 1¼ to 42 and most of the Wabash liens were up a point or more. Philippine Railway 4s continued their recently launched upswing with a 5⅜-point rise to 27⅝ on heavy turnover.

Such convertibles or stock purchase issues as United States Pipe & Foundry 3½s, Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3½s and Pure Oil 4¼s rose abruptly along with shares.

The utility list contributed some gainers to the movement, although the majority held even. International Telephone 4½s and 5s advanced 4 and 2⅛, respectively, while American & Foreign Power 5s, Abitibi 5s and International Hydroelectric 6s also improved.

U. S. Governments were quiet and little altered on the day. Losses ranged to 9-32 and gain to 5-32 of a point.

Activity tapered off in the foreign quarter where offerings appeared to have the whip-hand. Fractional setbacks were dealt most European and South American loans.

The Associated Press averages for 20 rails moved into new high ground for 1936-1937 at 98.5, up .3 of a point. Aside from a .3 of a point drop by the ten foreigns, which closed at 73.5, the other groups were about even.

On January 1, 1936, issues listed totaled 1,463 with a par value of $42,893,198,741 and a total market value of $39,398,759,628.

Nashville Newspapers Sold to Bank President

Nashville, Jan. 7 (AP).—President Paul M. Davis, of the American National Bank of Nashville, bought the Tennessee Publishing Co.'s properties at auction today for $850,000. He owns $250,000 of the company's bonds and the American National Bank owns $210,000.

The company was headed by Luke Lea as president prior to the receivership in 1933. It published the Nashville Tennessean and Evening Tennessean, now operated by L. J. Pardue as receiver.

Stabler Celebrates 48th Anniversary

The forty-eighth anniversary of Albert Stabler as a representative of the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia was celebrated yesterday with a luncheon at Wesley Hall given in his honor by Harold D. Krafft, manager of the Washington office.

Mr. Stabler joined the Provident Mutual on January 7, 1889, as a special agent and later became general agent for this territory, which position he held for many years. Since 1889 he has been responsible for placing over $7,000,000 of insurance on this territory.

Acacia Reports $12,700,000 Gain for Year

Volume of Insurance in Force Exceeds $365,000,000.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

President William Montgomery of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. has announced a new, all-time record of progress for that institution during 1936.

"The volume of insurance in force now has passed the previous peak, and today exceeds $365,000,000, a net increase of more than $12,700,000 for the year." Mr. Montgomery stated.

"Preliminary figures now available also reveal the remarkable gains made by Acacia in other phases of its business during the past year. For example, new paid-for insurance amounted to more than $38,000,000, while the assets have advanced by $6,000,00 to more than $66,000,000. The latter figure represents an increase of 95 per cent since the year 1929.

"During 1936, more than $5,600,000 was paid by Acacia to living policyholders and beneficiaries. At the same time, policy loans have declined and the conservation rate has steadily improved, giving further indication of substantial improvement in general economic conditions."

The District of Columbia branch registered a 37 per cent increase in paid-for business during the past year as compared to 1935, and the volume of Acacia insurance in force in Washington has been raised to $25,000,000. B. A. Harlan is manager of the local branch.

Wilkins Dividend.

Directors of the John H. Wilkins Co. have declared a 4 per cent semi-annual dividend on the outstanding preferred stock and a dividend of $1.50 per share on the outstanding common stock, both dividends being payable on January 15, 1937.

Bank Accounting.

The educational committee of Washington Chapter American Institute of Banking has announced appointment of Ralph Endicott, an assistant treasurer of Washington Loan & Trust Co., to instruct in a new course in "bank accounting and audit control." The chapter feels the need of such a course and expects a large enrollment.

Mr. Endicott, a native of New Jersey, is particularly well qualified to conduct this course. He has been associated with Washington Loan & Trust Co. since 1919, and has served as auditor and assistant treasurer for eight years. He is past chairman of the auditors section, District of Columbia Bankers Association, and was included in the first group of students in the Graduate School of Banking at Ruttgers University, where he will complete his course in June.

Berkshire Life.

J. E. McCombs, general agent, Berkshire Life Insurance Co., has announced appointment of Ralph M. Rogers as production manager for the District of Columbia and Virginia.

Gold Reserve 11.271 Billion, Another Peak

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last night net additions of $20,000,000 to the gold stocks of America's hoard during the week ended Januar 6, bringing the total to a new peak of $11,271,000,000. The figure was $1,127,000,000 higher than at this time last year.

The weekly condition statement of all reserve banks showed a further increase of $55,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, swelling the total to $6,627,000,000, an amount which the board estimated to be about $2,010,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

This rise was occasioned by a return of $77,000,000 of money in circulation, mainly month-end cash. Money in circulation on January 6 was $6,473,000,000.

Silver Advances Half a Cent to 45½

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—The price of imported bar silver was advanced ½ of a cent to 45½ cents an ounce today by Handy & Harman, metal dealers.

The rise in the New York price followed an advance in London. After lying dormant several months the foreign price early in December rose more than a cent to 46½, but later fell back to around 45.

Proposals

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, January 4, 1937.—Sealed proposals will be received at Room 500, District Building, until 2:00 p. m. JANUARY 19, 1937, and then publicly opened, for the construction of certain addition (including all necessary remodeling for same) to the Alice Deal Junior High School, north of Davenport Street, N.W., between Howard and Fessenden Streets. Contents, 490,000 cubic feet. All prospective bidders are hereby notified that any bid submitted in response to this advertisement must be accompanied by a statement of facts in detail of the business and technical organization of the bidder available for the contemplated work, including his financial resources. The Commissioners expressly reserve the right to reject any bid in which the facts as to the business and technical organization, financial resources or equipment are not found with the project bid upon and based upon past known performance of the bidder justify such selection. Certified check for $50 payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., to insure return of bond condition, should accompany each request for proposals, specifications and drawings, to the Chief Clerk, Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, January 5, 1937. Public hearings having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain streets and public alley as hereinafter described, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closing, and that the same are in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting property owners, notice is hereby given that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street and alley area as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, and numbered as Maps 1782 and 1995, is hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after February 1, 1937, the title to the land comprised in said area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the said streets and public alley hereby ordered closed being described as follows: 1. Closing Stuart drive, Fourteenth street, Naylor road southeast, and a public alley; all lying within Anacostia Park, known as U. S. Reservation No. 343, in the section lying northwesterly of Fairlawn avenue southeast. 2. Closing part of Chesapeake street between Linnean avenue and Thirtieth street northwest, involving also a dedication of land for highway purposes in lieu thereof." Any and all parties interested must file objections to said closing in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on February 1, 1937, as aforesaid, and said street and alley area shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, DAN I. SULTAN, Commissioners, D. C.

HOME OWNERS ATTENTION

We read with great concern of late about "Gone With the Wind," but not Johns-Manville's Roofs or Cedar Grain Asbestos side walls; colorful, permanent. What a relief to know you would never have to spend another cent for repairs. No more paint bills. No more waste of fuel. No red tape connected with any of our operators. No down payments. Only 5% interest; no other charges, no liens or mortgages; 3 years to pay, and it is well to remember you deal direct with our main office, as we do not sublet our work.

Why not have that much delayed roof or sidewalls installed before the new seven-hour work day goes into effect. You're sure to save up to 30%. Act now and make first payment in the spring. And if you have any other home improvements in mind, we can arrange to give you the cash without any extra expense to you.

Symes Testifies Rail Rate Boost Is Urgent Need

Association Vice President Declares $120,000,000 Is Lost Annually.

J. M. Symes, vice president of the Association of American Railroads, told the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday there is urgent need of higher rates to build up railroad rolling stock.

He was the railroads' second witness in hearings on their application for a rate structure readjustment designed to recapture a part of $120,000,000 lost annually through discontinuance of the emergency surcharges on December 31.

"The railroads," Symes said, "had little difficulty in meeting freight car requirements from 1930 to 1936 when increased demands for transportation facilities and a reduction in the number of serviceable freight cars made the matter of providing an adequate supply an active problem. Notwithstanding the installation of 39,556 new freight cars in the first 11 months of 1936 and a reduction of 49,633 cars in the number awaiting repair, both the ownership and the number of serviceable cars on December 1, last, were the lowest since prior to the World War. This situation in part was due to the curtailment of car maintenance programs and deferred car purchases due to the financial condition of the railroads since the depression began. It also was due to some extent to the fact that the railroads found it was cheaper to retire certain obsolete equipment than to attempt to repair it."

Symes said the railroads were fortunate when the depression began in having their equipment and roadbeds in good physical condition, but that the time has come when increased maintenance expenditures should be made.

Expenditures for maintenance in 1936, according to incomplete reports, were approximately $1,242,000,000, Symes said. While this exceeds such expenditures for each of the years since 1930, it was only approximately one-half as much as the annual average for the seven years from 1923 to 1929, inclusive.

Symes said that class I railroads in 1935 laid 575,874 long tons of new rail, compared with an annual average of 751,110 for the six-year period from 1930 to 1935, inclusive, and 1,977,772 long tons, the annual average for the seven-year period from 1923 to 1929.

End to Jim Crowism Is Plea Of Colored Session Speaker

Walter White, Secretary of Racee Advancement Association, Urges People to 'Stop Being Trembling Uncle Toms.'

Declaring that members of his race "must stop trembling, compromising and playing Uncle Tom," Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, yesterday urged delegates to the national conference on the problems of the colored race to support a set of recommendations that would "eliminate Jim Crowism from the United States."

In this connection he suggested that the conference should strongly support the movement for a Federal antilynching law; a civil rights act for the District of Columbia and other Federal territory—insuring colored people equal accommodations with whites in public places; a bill prohibiting the placement on ballot of any candidate of a party that violated the Fourteenth Amendment, and a bill prohibiting discrimination against any race, creed and color regarding employment in any Federal office.

"This conference marks a new day in the relationship between the colored race and the Federal Government," White continued. "Our chance has come at last to remove the barriers and burdens of inequality, insecurity and injustice that have confronted and hindered us for many years."

Ballot Denial Stressed.

White's speech developed suggestions that were presented to the conference by William H. Hastie, assistant solicitor general of the Department of the Interior. Pointing out that the denial of the ballot to colored people in the South could be corrected only through Federal legislation, Hastie outlined a program designed to bring equality to his race by Congressional enactments.

Problems of the colored race and their solutions as presented by White and Hastie were used as a basis for a round table discussion in which a number of persons participated. Protesting against "the spirit of intolerance and injustice that prompts white people in the South to disfranchise the colored man," delegate after delegate arose to say, in effect, that all their troubles go back to the ballot box. "Give us the right to vote, see that we have the right to vote and we will take care of ourselves," was the way one man put it.

Others suggested that even in States where they were allowed to vote there were conditions stressing the inequality of colored people with whites. Bishop R. C. Ransom, of Witherforce, Ohio, emphasized that "Political emancipation rests not with any section of the country, not with Congress, not with any type of legislation, but with us."

Hated to Quit.

Limited to 3-minute talks, delegates who took part in the discussion were loathe to relinquish the floor when their time was up; but Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, chairman of the conference, ruled the meeting with an iron hand, in the course of the forum politely asking no less than a dozen individuals to sit down while someone else talked.

Among those who took part in this section of the program were J. B. Watson, of the Arkansas A. & M. College; W. L. Houston, legal adviser of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Mary Church Terrell, of the National Association of Colored Women; Bishop R. E. Jones, Methodist-Episcopal Chuch of Columbus, Ohio, and Elder Michaux, of Washington.

Chairman of the executive committee of the N. Y. A. and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Miss Josephine Roche, talked briefly before the conference at the afternoon session. "I feel that this body is makig a very real contribution toward the achievement of equal rights for all and equal opportunity for all. Everyone of us should bear in mind," she continued, "that no group in America, no matter how privileged, no matter how prosperous, can continue to be prosperous unless security, equality and justice is obtained for every group."

Winant Is Ill.

John G. Winant, chairman of the Social Security Board, who was scheduled to address the conference, was prevented because of illness from appearing. Will W. Alexander, of the Resettlement Administration, made a brief talk, lauding the aims and ideals that prompted colored leaders to meet to discuss their problems.

At the morning session problems of improving health and housing conditions were presented for a round-table discussion.

The meeting will continue through today, with a program that includes the presentation and consideration of recommendations from the four committees and a speech by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Turkish Press Attacks Draw French Protest

Article Hints of War Over Antioch Administration Controversy.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 7.—France protested to Turkey tonight over what it called "violent" anti-French articles in the Turkish press concerning the dispute on administration of Antioch and Alexandretta.

Pierre Vienot, an undersecretary in the foreign office, told Turkish Ambassador Suad Davaz that an article which talked of war between Turkey and France made a friendly solution of the problem "very difficult."

He said France was willing to ask postponement of the League of Nations Council meeting January 18, when the question is slated for consideration, if Turkey would continue bilateral negotiations with France.

May Leave League.

Ankra, Turkey, Jan. 7 (AP).—Turkey may withdraw from the League of Nations unless she obtains a favorable settlement of her dispute with France over administration of the Syrian cities of Antioch and Alexandretta, it was reported here tonight.

Turkey has demanded that the two cities, near the Turkish frontier, be administered separately from the remainder of Syria, controlled by France under a League mandate. By a treaty signed September 9, Syria is to become independent by 1939.

Tank Truck Drivers Vote to End Ohio Strike

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 7 (AP).—Union tank and truck drivers voted today to accept an agreement which ended a county-wide gasoline tie-up. Hundreds of cars were stranded without fuel during the dispute.

Gasoline station attendants who had walked out in sympathy with the drivers planned to reopen their stations immediately.

Roosevelt's Son To Visit Florida

Boston, Jan. 7 (AP).—Dr. Charles Johnson said today that a month's stay in Florida should completely restore the health of Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., son of the President, who leaves the Massachusetts General Hospital tomorrow.

Roosevelt will be accompanied to Washington tomorrow by Dr. Ross McIntyre, White House physician. The youth will go from Washington to Florida.

Dr. Johnson said the young Harvard senior, who was treated for a streptococcic throat infection and underwent an operation for a sinus infection, was in "excellent" condition.

Proper Care Urged In 'Flu' Epidemic

The present epidemic of influenza is of a mild type, and comparatively few persons need die of it if they take simple precautions, Dr. William DeKleine, medical adviser of the Red Cross, asserted yesterday.

He pointed out, however, that hundreds of deaths will result from the so-called epidemic because of indifference and improper care.

"The disease," said Dr. DeKleine, "starts with symptoms of an ordinary cold, usually accompanied with a rise in temperature, chilly and achy feelings. This is the time to quit work, go to bed, and stay there until the temperature has returned to normal and remains so for at least 24 hours. In addition, the patient should take it easy a few days longer to prevent a relapse. It is necessary to stay away from work until recovery is complete, thereby protecting others as well as oneself."

The Public Health Service reported yesterday that influenze cases have been increasing since early in December and for the week ended January 2 numbered 3,993. This compared with 2,088 in the previous week. Officials said that reported cases were only a fraction of the total, because many States do not compile incomplete reports.

Kin of D. C. Doctor Dies in Baltimore

Word was received here yesterday of the death, in Baltimore, of Miss Lastenia Arango, a cousin of Dr. J. G. Lewis, chief surgeon of Casualty Hospital.

Miss Arango, who once resided here for a short time, was a former resident of Panama, and distantly related to Capt. Eloy Alfaro, Minister of Ecuador, and Don Mamilo de la Guardia, jr., secretary to the Panama Legation.

She died at Johns Hopkins Hospital after an emergency operation for a kidney disorder. She had been living in Baltimore with a sister, Mrs. Maria Uribi.

"I Gained Every Bottle I Took"

says Mrs. A. J. Mankusky, 73 Walnut St., Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

"I was very nertous and lost all my pep. I didn't even feel like talking to anyone. My three children would make me so nervous that I didn't know what to do. Since taking your wonderful Vegetable Compound I am a new woman. My sister told me about it and I gained every bottle I took. I have a good appetite and sleep well. My husband says he is glad I am feeling so good and he hopes I continue taking it. I recommend it to every girl and woman who suffers as I did. I say, 'Try it once and you won't be without it'."

58 'Scales' Stolen From Golden Fish

Nagoya, Japan, Jan. 7 (AP).—Fifty-eight solid-gold scales, valued at $840,000, were stolen today from one of the two massive gold dolphins atop the historic Cyclopean Castle.

The gold in the dolphins was taken from feudal lords by the Tokugawa Shogunate, the family of military overlords which ruled Japan from 1603 to 1868.

Bandit Invades Auto, Victim Yields $35

Sitting in his automobile in the rear of Emergency Hospital, Lawrence Parks, colored, 31, of Ballston, Va., was held up by another colored man who forced him to drive to Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue northwest, where Parks was robbed of $35.

Parks told police he was visiting at the hospital and stopped in the driveway when his assailant appeared armed with a gun. Threatening him, Parks said, the bandit made him drive to the point in Potomac Park where the money was taken. The robber escaped in a taxicab, Parks said.

NYA Toymakers Aid to Nurseries

Washington nursery schools are being benefited by the efforts of 50 National Youth Administration students who are making all kinds of toys and accessories in a workshop in the old Cordova School Building, First and I streets southwest.

The group is sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies Recreation Committee. They are being instructed by Miss Francoise Black.

An appeal was issued last night for boxes of all sorts, lumber, pieces of tapestry, yarn, crepe paper, bails, cotton batting, muslin, calico, paints and varnishes, needed in the manufacture of the toys.
